Eccles Defends Bank Measure As Recovery Aid

Declares Changes Are Needed in Present Reserve Set-up.

Calls for Bulwark To Bar Inflation

And Points to Defects Which 'Prolonged the Depression.'

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Throwing down the gauntlet to those opposing changes in the Federal Reserve act, Gov. Marriner S. Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board yesterday defended at some length the major provisions of the Administration's new banking bill.

Whether the opponents of the proposed changes will take up the challenge thrown to them yesterday by Gov. Eccles was not indicated, but he made it clear that he was ready for a fight to the finish.

This former Mormon missionary and worker in lumber camps, but now a multimillionaire, contended in a formal statement read at his weekly press conference that the proposed legislation was necessary to accelerate economic recovery; to make the Nation's banking and monetary system more responsive to present and future economic needs and to prevent a recurrence of conditions that led to the 1933 collapse.

Points to Flaws in System.

Without mentioning names, he reminded those who oppose changes in the present system that it had not stood up under the strain of the depression and "has proved to be an element of weakness in our economic structure that has aggravated and prolonged the worst phases of the depression"—still impeding the rate of recovery.

Centralized and ample authority in the Federal Reserve Board he held to be essential, first, to bring about recovery and, secondly, to make certain that recovery is not followed by an undesirable inflation, which in turn would be followed by another depression.

Gov. Eccles' dark eyes flashed with apparent zeal for the fight he has started as he read that "if the monetary mechanism is to be used as an instrument for the promotion of business stability, conscious control and management are essential." Increased governmental and private expenditures, he asserted, are the main reliance for bringing about a rise in national income.

Urges Added Authority.

"The most important role of monetary control at the moment, therefore, is assuring that adequate support is available whenever needed for promoting and accelerating recovery," Gov. Eccles added.

He was insistent that the monetary mechanism could not be left to automatic adjustments, pointing out that experience had shown that "without conscious control the supply of money tends to expand when the rate of spending increases and to contract when the rate of spending diminishes," thus having an intensifying rather than a moderating effect on either the depression or the inflationary movement, as the case might be.

With this expression of his philosophy in approaching the problem as a prelude, Gov. Eccles laid down the proposition that it was essential to strengthen the authority of the Federal Reserve Board. He pointed out that as matters now stand, the board is held responsible for monetary developments, but lacks clear and explicit authority for developing monetary policies.

Gov. Eccles' reading of his prepared statement was frequently

Way Opened For Revision Of Auto Code

By Felix Bruner.

President Roosevelt indicated yesterday that the revised automobile code, under fire by labor, would stand until June 16, its expiration date. Meanwhile, he said, further studies would be made with a view to making any necessary corrections.

An official spokesman for NRA declared that the President had not failed to follow recommendations of the Recovery Board with reference to the code, in spite of the fact that the only specific recommendation accepted by the President was that suggesting that new models be brought out in the fall instead of the spring as a means of spreading employment.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, issued a statement praising the report of the NRA Research and Planning Division, which was critical of labor conditions in the industry.

Says Board Is "Dead."

The Recovery Board had recommended to the President that he establish an effective labor relations board in the automobile industry. Instead, the President continued the board, headed by Dr. Leo Wolman, which has been the object of severe criticism by labor unions.

The research report, Green said, "supports the position of the American Federation of Labor with regard to the Wolman board. In effect the report and the letter of transmittal to the President say that the Wolman board is dead and done. What the industry needs is a statutory board giving automobile workers the same rights which workers in other industries enjoy.

"The report of the division of research and planning contains the following statement:

" 'Labor unrest exists to a higher degree than warranted by the depression. The unrest flows from insecurity, low annual earnings, inequitable hiring and rehiring methods, espionage, speed-up and displacement of workers at an extremely early age.'

Attack Shifts to President.

"These conditions the American Federation of Labor has denounced many times.

"What stronger evidence of support could be offered in justification of the position assumed by the American Federation of Labor? We rest our case upon the recommen-

Japanese Ships Pursue Pirates

War Vessels Comb Waters Near Bias Bay After Boat Is Detained.

Shanghai, Feb. 9 (Saturday) (AP).—Japanese warships opened a search in Chinese waters today for pirates who looted a Japanese vessel in that vicinity, said dispatches today of the Rengo (Japanese) News Agency.

The 2,000-ton vessel the Karamurii Maru was commandeered Thursday after leaving Hong Kong for Japan, the dispatches reported. (Apparently the Karamurii Maru was seized near the place where pirates last week abandoned the steamer Tungchow, of foreign registry, after partially looting her.)

Shortly after the pirates abandoned the Tungchow, which had 75 American, British and Scandinavian school children aboard, Chinese authorities warned shipping along the coast to be on the lookout for other pirates.

Officials expressed the belief the pirates had attacked the wrong boat, since another craft of the same line as the Tungchow came into port with a cargo of silver a day later.

For years foreign gunboats have aided China in her fight on the bold pirates along China's "Spanish Main" but with varying success.

White House Acts to Save Works Plan

Placates Nye on Arms Issue; Will Appeal to Glass.

McAdoo Will Move for Reconsideration of Wage Vote.

By Robert C. Albright.

Moving to save his $4,880,000,000 works and relief program from ruin, President Roosevelt yesterday personally took a hand in an eleventh-hour effort to strike from his bill the prevailing wage guarantee approved by the Senate Appropriations Committee.

A direct appeal from the President to Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, will be transmitted to the committee Monday. The President also used the telephone to assure Chairman Nye, of the Senate Munitions Committee, that none of the work relief billions will be used for warship construction.

Senator McAdoo, of California, yesterday served notice he will ask reconsideration of the prevailing wage vote Monday. Intervention of the White House and return to the Capital of two members of the Senate Committee who think with the President and Chairman Glass on the wage issue, may be sufficient to reverse Thursday's vote.

May Cut Total Sum.

On the other hand, returning members—Senators Tydings, of Maryland and McKellar, of Tennessee (Democrats), together with Glass, differ with the President over wisdom of appropriating $4,880,000,000. They think it is too much, and may go along with Senator Adams (Democrat), Colorado, on his amendment to cut the appropriation to $2,800,000,000 for direct relief. The committee previously tied 10-to-10 on the Adams proposal.

For the first time since the works and relief bill has been up for discussion, the President called Glass Thursday night. Inasmuch as the White House hitherto has been working through Senator Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, the appeal was attributed by some as a surrender to the Virginian, who has voted for a number of changes opposed by the Administration.

Although Senator Glass declined to disclose the nature of his conversation with the President, word went about the Capitol that it had to do with the committee's prevailing wage action. It is the Administration's contention that anything more than a $50 monthly wage on Federal aid projects would increase the cost of the program and defeat the bill's purpose to send men back to private employment.

Shows Unconcern.

The President, however, failed to manifest any concern over the fate of his measure at yesterday's White House press conference. All he knew about the Senate committee proceedings was what he read in the papers, and very causually read at that, he told reporters.

Earlier, the committee voted a few more minor changes in the bill, then defeated an inflationist amendment by Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, to finance the works relief program with greenbacks.

Most other efforts to amend the bill were whipped. One by Senator Steiwer (Republican), Oregon, to spend the new public works money only through existing permanent Government agencies, was defeated, 10 to 9. An amendment by Senator Nye to prevent use of relief funds for construction of naval craft in private yards, was rejected, 12 to 7. Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York, failed by a vote of 10 to 6 to prohibit the Government from engaging in competition with private

Seth Parker Sends S O S in the Pacific

Honolulu, Feb. 8 (U.P.).—A request for immediate aid was broadcast tonight by Phillips Lord, aboard the schooner Seth Parker, which was reported encountering heavy seas at a point several hundred miles northeast of the Samoan Islands.

Lord said he believed the schooner's condition was dangerous. He asked ships within a radius of 500 miles to contact him as quickly as possible.

He gave the ship's position as longitude 159.36 west and latitude 12.51 south.

Vallees' 'Battle for the Century' Almost Turns Into Fist Fight

New York, Feb. 8 (AP).—The battle of the Rudy Vallees—fighting over a $100 weekly allowance to the crooner's wife, Fay Webb Vallee—almost turned into a battle of fisticuffs as a day of sensational testimony and charges ended in Supreme Court today.

As Justice Salvatore Cotillo announced he would reserve decision on a motion by Samuel Gottlieb, who said Fay "did not dare" take the witness stand, for dismissal of the suit, one of Mrs. Vallee's counsel, Benjamin Hartstein, walked up to the crooning orchestra leader and remarked:

Vallee swung about, drew his arm in a well-poised pugilistic attitude, but lawyers jumped between him and Hartstein.

"He just sneaked up on me," Harstein shouted.

"Oh, no he didn't," replied Justice Cotillo. "I saw Mr. Vallee and he didn't sneak up on you."

Vallee apologized to the court. He said he thought it had recessed when the justice said he would rule on Gottlieb's motion next

Heads the Red Cross

Cary Grayson Chosen Head Of Red Cross

Virginian Assumes Duties March 1 as Successor to Payne.

Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, the Virginian whose small, trim figure has moved in Washington's highest political, social and sporting circles since the days of Woodrow Wilson, was named by President Roosevelt yesterday as the new chairman of the National Red Cross.

Mr. Roosevelt himself made the announcement at a press conference, remarking that he had determined upon Admiral Grayson the night before as the successor to the late Judge John Barton Payne, who died January 24.

Admiral Grayson for several years has been a member of the Red Cross board of incorporators. He will take over his new duties as chairman on March 1. During the interim James L. Fieser, a vice chairman, is serving as acting chairman.

The leadership of the National Red Cross is not the first appointment offered the retired admiral by President Roosevelt, but it is the first the genial Virginian would accept. Mr. Roosevelt first urged him to take a place on the District Board of Commissioners, but Admiral Grayson declined.

The admiral assumed a place of national prominence as personal physician to President Wilson, but other Presidents, before and after, knew him as a confidant. He served as chairman of the committee which arranged the Roosevelt inauguration and long has figured in Democratic counsels.

The Virginian told the Associated Press he considered his appointment a "great honor and opportunity to serve humanity." He added: "I want everybody to help me make it go—not for myself personally, but for all that the Red Cross represents. It is non-partisan, non-political, for the help of all."

Entering the Navy Medical Corps in 1903, Admiral Grayson served only four years before he was attached to the White House during the term of President Theodore Roosevelt. He continued at the

Army Urges 11 Millions Hawaii Base

Airdrome Proposed at Session of Officers and House Body.

800 Armored Planes at Cost of $90,000,000 Asked by MacArthur.

(Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.)

A proposal for the construction of an $11,000,000 air base in Hawaii—United States' first point of defense in the Pacific—and plans for strengthening coast defenses were discussed yesterday at a secret meeting of the Army high command and the House Military Committee.

The conference was the first of its kind between congressional leaders and members of the general staff since Japan denounced the Washington naval treaty. It was held on Capitol Hill.

Precaution was taken by Chairman McSwain (Democrat), South Carolina), of the Military Committee, to emphasize that any action taken would be for "defensive purposes" and that the proposition would have been considered even if Japan had not scrapped the treaty.

Plane Purchases Urged.

At the same time, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff, recommended to the committee the purchase of 800 new armored and equipped airplanes, at a cost of $90,000,000, to give the Army the aerial armada of 2,320 modern aircraft recommended by the Baker aviation committee.

These additional aircraft are necessary, MacArthur said in a memorandum, to expand the new General Headquarters Air Force to give it 980 fighting units for its Pacific, Atlantic and Gulf Coast divisions.

After the conference, McSwain stressed that "nothing offensive" should be implied. "It is so easy for some people to misinterpret," he said. "Purely defensive measures were under consideration."

Besides Gen. MacArthur, the War Department was represented by Brig. Gen. Charles E. Kilbourne, assistant chief of staff; Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, chief of the Air Corps, and Lieut. Col. Frank M. Andrews, commander of the General Headquarters Air Force.

In addition to the $11,000,000 Hawaiian airdrome project, the discussions embraced a $2,000,000 program for new coast defenses, including guns in Hawaii, Alaska and elsewhere, and $8,000,000 for Army posts.

Representative Rogers (Democrat), New Hampshire, chairman of the Military sub-committee for aviation, said he thought the request "is reasonable."

Gen. MacArthur said a study revealed that the Army needs immediately 175 pursuit, 200 bombardment, 130 attack, 140 observation, 100 training and 65 cargo planes.

Need for Mechanization.

In addition, he emphasized need for $16,000,000 for mechanization of the Army to equip one regiment with medium-weight tanks, one with light tanks, mechanize a brigade of cavalry, a battery of field artillery, seven troops with armored cars and seven infantry companies with light tanks.

MacArthur said this force would necessitate acquisition of 285 light-weight tanks, 162 medium tanks, 48 armored cars, 44 combat cars, 33 scout cars, and 76 half-track cars. All would be equipped with .30 and .50 caliber machine guns.

To supply the Army with modern weapons, he recommended an appropriation of $8,000,000 for infantry mortars; 50-caliber machine guns, semiautomatic rifles, .37-mm. guns, communication equipment and gas masks.

Flandin Rule Grows Weaker As Business Snubs His NRA

Paris, Feb. 8 (AP).—Failure of Premier Pierre-Etienne Flandin's "Little NRA" to turn the business tide upward today apparently was sapping the foundations of his government.

As government leaders tried to mend political fences, admitting the premier's position was weakening, the bourse took alarm at the cabinet's seeming instability and securities slumped sharply. Government paper alone lost 4,000,000,000 francs (about $262,000,000) in value.

Although none was ready to predict the government's immediate overthrow, Flandin's supporters were alarmed at hostility developing in the parliament, where his majority yesterday shrank to 45 votes.

The government's foes seized upon the premier's presence at the Notre Dame mass Wednesday in honor of the victims of the rioting of February 6, 1934, and the boos and hisses that greeted him in the streets, to administer several setbacks on the chamber floor and in committees.

Had he made yesterday's vote a flat question of confidence—the vote came over the question of examining the government's decrees, which Parliament must ratify—party leaders doubtless could have delivered the premier a bigger majority.

The failure of business to respond to Flandin's proposal for controlling industry in Rooseveltian style through industrial codes was emphasized in the Bank of France's report for January 31, which showed trade markedly worse, and the statement of Paul Jacquier, Flandin's minister of labor, before the chamber today that unemployed have reached 487,000.

Crime Raids Jail 646 in New York

New York, Feb. 8 (AP).—Cracking down on its "public enemies" in 15 hours of raids in an apparent test of the penal law's prohibition against consorting with known criminals, police today had 646 prisoners.

That most of them would be released was indicated when the first group was taken to magistrates court to answer the "consorting" charge. There were 11 in the group and Magistrate Thomas A. Aurelio discharged them.

Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine said that among those arrested were six wanted for major crimes and nine on parole from prison, and therefore subject to charges of violation of parole.

Hauptmann Alibi Claims Attacked

(Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.)

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 8.—The woman who loved Isador Fisch most—his sister—came into court today to try to sponge from his tombstone all stains of suspicion that he committed the Lindbergh crime.

Whether Henna Fisch succeeded or failed in this supreme effort in behalf of her brother's reputation is a secret in the minds of the eight men and four women who sit in judgment on Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

It was a ghostly, melancholy business the way she sat there talking in an alien tongue, her face chalk white with fright and with anxiety to strike, once and for all, the blow that would let the dead rest in peace.

Henna's testimony came slowly and painfully. Prof. George Madison Priest of Princeton University had to translate.

Earlier in the day the defense rested, confident that in the last fortnight it had wedged into the record enough testimony to give the jury reasonable doubt as to Hauptmann's guilt. Then the State began rebuttal testimony, spinning through a lengthy list of witnesses in an attempt to rake and riddle every allegation made in Hauptmann's behalf.

Case Nears Jury.

The State's rebuttal is expected to be finished tomorrow, in which event the summation and the court's charge to the jury is likely to send the jury to its deliberation some time late Tuesday or Wednesday next week. Only sure rebuttal testimony remains to help Hauptmann.

After a month of innuendo and insinuation, Isador Fisch had his day in court today. He has become a legend by now. A many-sided man, who, according to some people, was gay and careless, tossing $20 bills across restaurant counters. Others say he was a man who droned through life in a shabby hall bedroom—moody and depressed, knowing that the hand of death was heavy on his shoulder. Bruno Richard Hauptmann says Fisch had so much money that before he sailed for Germany he handed him a shoe box crammed with $14,600.

There has been much testimony spoken here in the attempt to prove that Isador Fisch kidnaped the Lindbergh baby and exacted $50,000 ransom for it. So strong did the tide of suspicion run against Fisch that the State decided to reach across the Atlantic and bring his sister to the witness chair.

Denies Fisch Was Wealthy.

She choked back her grief today as she sat on the witness stand, huddled in a black coat that seemed to be much too big for her. Henna denied that Fisch was wealthy. True, she said, he had sent money back to Germany—small sums of $5

Daniels Aided Tyrant Rulers, Says Connery

Helped Enslave People of Mexico, He Charges in House Attack.

Charges by Representative Connery (Democrat), Massachusetts, that Ambassador Josephus Daniels helped "tyrants" enslave the Mexican people provoked turmoil in the House yesterday.

An actor before he abandoned the stage for politics, Connery, short and fiery, adroitly employed all the histrionic guile he learned behind the footlights as he insisted the United States should withdraw recognition of the neighboring government. He drew sharp retorts from Southerners.

Connery flailed the air emphatically as he assailed the diplomat in these words:

"Mr. Speaker, I believe that the Hon. Josephus Daniels and other representatives of the American Government in Mexico, who for some unknown reason are cooperating with the tyrants of Mexico to enslave the Mexican people, should be summoned back to the United States and forced to tell the truth of the conditions which exist in that country at this time."

Representative Bulwinkle (Democrat), North Carolina, broad-shouldered lawmaker from the ambassador's home State, interrupted:

"Joe Daniels, who was rocked in the cradle of democracy, never in any action he could take would do anything to enslave people of any kind."

Another champion of Daniels was Representative Umstead, also a North Carolina Democrat.

Connery insisted the residents of Mexico had been deprived of all freedom.

"Liberty of religious worship, of education, of speech, and of the press," he contended, "are denied all who live in Mexico."

Mexico, Connery protested, has failed to comply with an agreement extracted by President Woodrow Wilson as a prerequisite to American recognition, which assured Mexicans of freedom of worship.

"It is the duty of Congress, the duty of the State Department," he added, "to notify the Mexican government that they having violated

10 Transients In Quarantine Make Getaway

Escape Is Made Known as Meningitis Claims Victim at Lodge.

A number of transients, held under quarantine in their lodges as the result of the spinal meningitis outbreak here, have escaped from their quarters, police announced last night.

The official statement followed the capture of Joseph Murray, 34, described as a "left winger" in the Transient Bureau revolt, who slipped from confinement in the lodge in the 300 block of Third street northwest.

Murray was arrested by Lieut. Horace Lineburg at Sixth and Pennsylvania avenue late yesterday as he sauntered along the street. He was taken to headquarters, booked for breaking quarantine parole, and then returned to the lodge, which was guarded by police.

Ten Believed at Large.

The exact number of men who escaped along with Murray was not estimated by police, who said they believed there were not more than ten, and perhaps not that many, who departed before a guard was stationed over their quarters.

It is believed some of these men may have left the city. Police have not yet been furnished with their names, so search for them was impossible early last night.

Spinal meningitis of the epidemic variety was the cause of the death of James Oplinger, 23, at the Boys' Lodge, in the 200 block of Express Court, the District Health Department reported definitely yesterday.

Oplinger, a transient whose home originally was in Shickshinny, Pa., died only half an hour after he applied for medical treatment at a transient dispensary.

Acting Health Officer James Cumming gave the decision of the Health Department as to cause of death.

President Refuses to Record His Approval of Full Pay Bill

President Roosevelt cast a shadow of doubt on the Federal pay restoration bill yesterday when he adroitly dodged all efforts of newspapermen, at a press conference, to get him to say whether he would sign the measure.

The bill was approved by both Houses of Congress on Monday. It provides that the remaining 5 per cent reduction in Government salaries be restored on April 1, three months earlier than is provided in the President's budget.

In reply to questions, Mr. Roosevelt said the bill is now at the White House and he will act on it within the next few days. He laughingly insisted on the word, act, refusing to intimate either that he will sign it, or that he will send it back to Congress with a veto.

Because of the fact that the measure was not opposed by Administration leaders in Congress, including those perticularly close to the White House, it has been assumed that Mr. Roosevelt would accept it. Observers last night, however, were not so sure.

If the President signs the bill, salaries will be restored to the levels that obtained just two years ago, before Congress enacted economy legislation. Moving the date for restoration up 90 days will cost $22,500,000, it is estimated.

High Court Defers Gold Ruling Again

The Supreme Court recessed yesterday until Monday, thereby indicating it will not announce the gold case decision before then.

The nine justices will meet at noon today, however, as they customarily do after hearing a week of argument, to discuss and decide cases which have been presented.

By taking the recess the Court tended to discredit the possibility it might break precedent again and announce the decision today. That remote possibility still existed, however.

Arlington Gets Street Lights Next Summer

Funds to Be Included in '35 Budget Due July 1; Missing Boy, 14, Hunted.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 500. Clarendon, Va.

The first step toward installation of the street lighting system will be taken soon after July 1, George M. Yeatman, president of the Clarendon Business Men's Association, announced last night.

The association's lighting committee reported the county board will include in its 1935 budget funds for the lights along Wilson boulevard between Rosslyn and Clarendon avenue.

While pleased with the success of the committee thus far, Yeatman said the association is working to have a county-wide system installed eventually.

Arlington County and Washington police have been asked to be on the lookout for Garland Andrews, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Andrews, of 509 Ingram avenue, Lyon Park. The boy has been missing since Wednesday.

Evidently the boy had planned not to attend the Washington-Lee High School that day as he had left his lunch at home, his father said. He left the bus at Clarendon, where he was seen last about two hours later.

The boy was wearing gray riding breeches, tan jacket, tan shirt, brown leather helmet with goggles and black knee-length shoes.

With roads impassable as a result of the sewer installation in Arlington precinct, Arthur Stickley 2d, president of the Arlington Fire Department, says an appeal for relief will be made to the county board.

A committee, consisting of Chief A. C. Scheffel, Deputy Fire Chief Carl E. Scheffel, Julian E. Tapp, Frank Bailey and David Watson, will appear before the board next Thursday and urge remedial measures.

The Rev. Perry L. Mitchell, pastor, will conduct services at the Clarendon Baptist Church tomorrow. At the morning service his subject will be "A Run For Your Money." In the evening he will speak on "The Cross in the Andes." This will be the fifth of a series in which tableaux will supplement the talks.

The Rev. Bona Fleming, of Ashland, Ky., who has been conducting special services at the Ballston Tabernacle, will relate his life's story, as one who played the races, at a special service tomorrow at 2:30 p. m.

He will preach at the 11 o'clock service and conclude his special services at 7:30 p. m. with a mass meeting.

11 Persons Hurt In Ferry Crash

Philadelphia, Feb. 8 (AP).—The ocean-going steamer London Corporation and the ferryboat Cape May crashed in the Delaware River today, injuring 11 persons.

All passengers, more than 30, on the Reading Railroad Co.'s ferry were rescued.

A possible disaster was averted by the quick action of the steamer's officers in having a line thrown aboard the Cape May, lashing the two vessels together, and preventing the smaller boat from sinking.

A hole 6 feet wide was stove in in the Cape May's side amidships by the prow of the 3,000-ton Furness-Withy Line steamer, which had left London, England, January 26. The only damage to the London Corporation was twisted bow plates, well above the water line.

The Wilson Line vessel, City of Wilmington, and several tugs also rushed out from wharves along shore and all passengers were taken from the ferry. It was pushed to the Camden side of the river. There the London Corporation disengaged itself, backed away and continued to its dock.

Yale Medical College In China Aids 100,000

Changsha, Hunan Province, China, Feb. 3 (AP).—The contributions of Yale University alumni—the main support of the Hunan-Yale Medical College and Hospital here—enabled more than 100,000 Chinese to obtain the benefits of modern medicine during the last year.

It was the twentieth year of operation of the outstanding medical center in central China and the greatest year of accomplishment. The records show 75,000 outpatients and 3,000 in-patients received treatment during the year, while 45,000 more received free vaccinations.

Between You and Me

The Battle Between Eccles and Glass Near; Where Do Justices Invest Their Money?

By Raymond Clapper

EVERY day brings nearer the impending fight between those two thoroughbred bantamweights—Governor Marriner S. Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board and Senator Carter Glass.

Cockfights are prohibited in Washington but apparently there is no way to head this one off now that Governor Eccles has stepped into the ring with his challenge last night in behalf of a New Deal in banking which would strengthen the Federal Government's control immeasurably. When these two get their spurs in the air, the show will be just as furious, as entertaining and a good deal more instructive than a real cockfight. It has the makings of history, promising a head-on collision between two tenacious, well-informed, outspoken protagonists who won't pull their punches.

* * * *

Glass, one of the framers of the original Federal Reserve act, affectionately respected even by most of those who disagree with him, enjoyed some of the prerogatives of an elder statesman, a student of banking legislation for a quarter of a century, contemptuous of these "dad bummed academicians," the "embryonic solons," the "sub-professors," who saves his dynamite when insect powder will serve the purpose, a "no" man even when Mr. Roosevelt dangles the job of Secretary of Treasury at him, clings to the tenets of orthodox banking.

* * * *

Eccles, young enough to be a son of Virginia's unreconstructed rebel, who was just returning from Scotland as a young Mormon missionary when Glass began his Federal Reserve fight, pint-sized like Glass, a Republican who voted hesitantly for Roosevelt, a banker, capitalist and industrialist and one of Utah's richest men, who inherited from his millionaire father and multiplied the family fortune, holding a rugged individualist's record in Who's Who and a philosophy that is first cousin to Rex Tugwell's, young Eccles steps forward to champion the New Deal in banking.

* * * *

Young Eccles might be called a second generation New Dealer. He was not in the original Roosevelt crowd. His name appears nowhere in "The New Dealers" printed serially in The Washington Post just a year ago. Yet here he is out on the front line 12 months later. Yet curiously he was a New Dealer before Roosevelt came in.

Just a few days before the end of the Hoover Administration, Eccles appeared before the old Senate Finance Committee during its "depression clinic." He came simply as an unknown Utah banker. Senator King was a member of the committee and asked that Eccles be heard. Though little attention was paid to his testimony at the time, Eccles outlined many of the principles of the New Deal, including pump priming and the plan which later came to life in AAA. A year later he turned up as special assistant to Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau and last November slid into the governor's chair at the Federal Reserve Board, barely 44 years old, taking one of the most important posts in the Government and now moving to make it even more so.

* * * *

Anticipating that his unorthodox banking views would cause Eccles to be assailed as a visionary, the White House announced his appointment with a statement which said: "A group of the leading financial institutions of Utah and Idaho, with resources in excess of $50,000,000, in whose organization and development Mr. Eccles had taken a leading part and of which he was the head, came through the banking crisis in such splendid condition as to reflect great credit upon his ability as a bank executive."

* * * *

In kindergarten before Glass, who was born three years before Sumter was fired on, began his public career, young Eccles has managed to pack a good deal of experience into his adult years. Until he was 19 he served an apprenticeship with his capitalist father in the Mormon country, during summer vacations. Then, at 19, following the custom of wealthy young Mormons, he did two yaers' church duty as a missionary. He was sent to Scotland, where his father had been born, and maried a still young-looking and beautiful Scotch girl. Pump priming may be all right for the Government, but the thrifty young Mormon obviously favored the budget-balancing theory in his family finances. Thus, at 21, he was all set to return to Utah and step out as a man of affairs.

* * * *

"Organized Eccles Investment Co., a holding company for interests in family estate, 1914, and now v. p. and gen. mgr. same; merged First National Bank and Utah National Bank, 1922, into First National Bank of Ogden, since president; president First Savings Bank, Sego Mill Products Co., Eccles Hotel Co., First Security Corporation, Stoddard Lumber Co., Utah Construction Co., v. p. and treas. Amalgamated Sugar Co.; director Mountain States Implement Co., Thatcher Brothers Banking Co., Lion Coal Co., Anderson & Sons Lumber Co., Home Fire Insurance Co., Pet Milk Co., Utah Power & Light Co., Utah-Idaho Central Railroad Co."

So he is tied up with the power interests and the railroads, too. Obviously the only way he could break into the New Deal was by a confession of faith. But there is much curiosity in Senate quarters as to whether he followed the Biblical injunction and disposed of these large worldly goods before he entered Mr. Roosevelt's Kingdom of Heaven. The Federal Reserve act requires members of the Reserve Board to file a statement showing that they have divested themselves of private banking affiliations and stock. Some Senators are expected to inquire how this was done, whether by transfer to some other member of his family, or what?

Speaking of those laws about officials divesting themselves of holdings: What does a Supreme Court justice do with his money?

Almost any security he might buy would, at some time or other, be affected by a case before the court. Suppose a justice, desiring to lean over backward, put everything in Liberty bonds. Then along comes the gold cases and he must decide whether those Liberties are good for 69 cents extra on the dollar.

Dionnes Sued for $1,000,000 As They Make First Stage Bow

Century of Progress Official Charges Couple Broke Faith on Agreement; Quintuplets' Parents Fumble Through Five Shows.

Chicago, Feb. 8 (U.P.).—Papa Ovila and Mama Elzire Dionne fumbled through five shows of a vaudeville program today and between acts got themselves initiated into the mysteries of higher mathematics to the extent of a $1,000,000 headache.

The headache was the work of Ivan Spear, Chicago promoter, who sought $1,000,000 redress in Federal court because, he said, the parents of the famous quintuplets reneged on a contract entered into last May 1 calling for exhibition of the quintuplets at the World's Fair.

The Dionnes' vaudeville turn was introduced by a gent in a brown suit who spoke of "humane interest" and called papa "the George Washington of Callander."

Papa, with an expression like Buster Keaton's, acknowledged the honor and said an unintelligible something about how nice babies were and how exciting it was to be in Chicago.

Robust mama, in flowing brown dress, fumbled with her handkerchief and said, "Merci beaucoup." A collegiate-looking chap on the aisle explained to a young lady beside him that that meant "Thanks very much."

The band played "God Save the King."

For a minute nobody, including the gent in brown, knew exactly what to do so a considerate stage manager called for "curtain."

Premier 'Deprecates' Stage Appearances

Toronto, Feb. 8 (AP).—Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn, of Ontario, today said he "deprecated to the fullest extent" stage appearances of the parents of the Dionne quintuplets.

At the same time the premier said that "if there is any action this legislature can take to keep the babies from professional, self-seeking promoters, that action will be taken."

Of the tour of Oliva and Elzire Dionne, the parents, Premier Hepburn said:

"It's a disgrace; it's cheap, and we are going to try and save the children from such humiliation if possible."

Dr. Allan R. Dafoe, their medical guardian, chuckled and declined to comment when informed of a $1,000,000 suit for breach of contract filed against the Dionne parents in Chicago which named him as co-defendant.

Standard Oil Fights 'Chain Store' Ruling

The Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey yesterday urged that the Supreme Court to reconsider its recent decision holding that the West Virginia chain store tax applied to its filling stations in that State.

Scarlett's Bride Returns Ring, Says 'Situation Is Impossible'

While it was reported that the mother-in-law, Mrs. Howard DeWalden Cooke, is ready to forgive her eloping daughter and George S. Scarlett, the chauffeur-bridegroom, Scarlett was searching for his young bride yesterday after her disappearance.

Mrs. James Cooke Scarlett, of Chevy Chase, Md., the young society girl, disappeared Thursday after the hearing at Rockville, at which Scarlett was cleared of charges brought by his mother-in-law that he had stolen $5,000 worth of jewels when the pair eloped.

When Scarlett returned from the hearing to the apartment of Mrs. John Madigan, where the couple were staying, he found that his wife had left for an unannounced destination. She had left an envelope for him containing her wedding ring.

In a note to her aunt Jane wrote "that she was leaving once and for all," that "the situation has become impossible and I can not go on." Mrs. Scarlett explained "she was going into seclusion and would never return to Washington."

It was learned that Mrs. Scarlett had $200 when she left. Members of her family have made no report to police of her disappearance. It was learned that she has gone to Maine probably to visit relatives.

Members of the family here were unapproachable yesterday. The Cooke's have had the telephone in their Chevy Chase home disconnected, while Mrs. Madigan would receive no calls or callers. Miss Anne Cooke, the bride's older sister, who arranged the elopment, is staying with Mrs. Madigan, it was learned.

Roosevelt Acts To Avert Ruin Of Works Bill

enterprise in communities where they are operating. Senator Metcalf, (Republican), Rhode Island, unsuccessfully offered an amendment to give preference to war veterans in the new administrative works setup.

Amendments Accepted.

Amendments accepted by the committee would exclude the Philippines from benefits under the bill, limit works projects to the United States and territories, impose a $1,000 fine for violation of regulations authorized in the act, and a $2,000 maximum penalty for fraud.

After the President's telephone conversation with Nye, the North Dakotan said he would reoffer his amendment to forbid use of relief funds for private naval construction, explaining to the committee the President's intention not to use any of the money for this purpose. He is considering broadening the amendment to prevent use of the funds for any military purpose, he said.

Likewise, Senator Steiwer announced he will make another effort to limit expenditure of work-relief funds to existing agencies, revising his amendment, which lost yesterday by two votes.

"Cooperation" Possble.

To make it clear that Republicans do not wish to impede relief activities in any way, minority leaders may authorize a statement promising cooperation at once in any effort to pass a strictly relief measure, it was learned last night.

Both Senators Tydings and McKellar, who may cast deciding votes on an amendment to cut the scope of the bill, indicated they may balk at appropriating the amount asked by the White House. Although McKellar has not finally made up his mind, he said the amount sought is "staggering." Tydings said he would like to limit the measure to direct relief only, provided the bill is amended so aid is available only to unemployed persons without a bank account, who had not voluntarily resigned from their last job.

On the move to reverse committee action in favor of prevailing wage scales, both will vote for the President's $50 a month proposal. Despite the loss of these two votes, proponents of the amendment which last carried by a 12-to-8 vote, who yesterday made a canvass of strength, insist they can block the reconsideration effort by a 1-vote margin. Administration forces are just as confident they can throw the amendment out.

McAdoo, who first voted for the prevailing wage amendment, changed his mind yesterday, after the Budget Bureau showed him the proposal would cost $6,000,000,000 to $7,000,000,000.

Mayors Back Loan.

A statement declaring that major cities are in no position to participate in the works program by accepting loans and incurring further debt to the Federal Government was issued by Paul V. Betters, director of the United States Conference of Mayors. If no interest is charged, he said municipalities might absorb $1,000,000,000 in loans. He recommended, however, that any program for putting 3,500,000 jobless back to work be financed out of the Federal Treasury.

Despite his phone chat with the President, Senator Glass yesterday indicated he has not forgotten Mr. Roosevelt hitherto had not sought his advice on the works bill.

"How do I know what the President is concerned about?" he replied to questioners. "I know one thing he isn't concerned about—the chairman of this committee."

dation of the National Industrial Recovery Board and the report of the Division of Research and Planning of NRA."

The recovery board and Donald R. Richberg, New Deal coordinator, heretofore have been the subject of attack by the A. F. of L. Indorsement of the board's plan, coupled with criticism of the revised automobile code, would indicate a shifting of the attack to the President himself.

W. Averill Harriman, NRA executive officer, objected to statements that the President had rejected suggestions of the recovery board. He found that they had been accepted generally and stressed the idea that the board had not stated the time when its plans should be incorporated in the code.

"The board," he said, "is behind the President to a man."

The board, on the night the code revision was ordered by the President, voted 3 to 2 against the changes.

President Roosevelt indicated that his message asking for continuance of the NRA would go to the Capitol some time next week. He said he also intends to transmit a message on shipping next week. The President said he is still studying the proposed code for the cigarette industry.

Nonpartisan School Boards Voted in State

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 8 (AP).—Nonpartisan election of members of county school boards is called for in a bill passed by the Senate today at a busy session that brought approval of six other measures.

The school board bill, sent to the House for action, would require listing of names of candidates for county boards of education on separate ballots.

Drawn by Senator Dan Fleming (Democrat), of St. Marys, the measure also sets up a system of rotation of names of school board candidates to preclude voting of "tickets."

The Senate also passed quickly a bill to authorize payment of additional compensation to special judges in the First Judicial District of Brooke, Hancock and Ohio Counties. The same bill was battled over for an hour in the House without action after the Ohio County delegation split 3 to 2 for its adoption.

With the county fight taking up much time, the House passed only two bills and defeated three others.

One measure passed by the delegates would provide for payment of compensation to counsel appointed to represent defendants in criminal cases.

The other authorized Fayette County to expend $3,000 annually to complete and maintain a county 4-H camp. It was passed promptly by the Senate and sent to Gov. Kump for final action.

Count Ordered In Election Tie

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Chief Judge F. Neal Parke and Associate Judge William H. Forsythe, in Anne Arundel County Circuit Court, today signed an order directing a recount of the vote polled in 13 of 36 county precincts as a possible means of breaking the deadlock between John J. Levay, Democrat, and T. Roland Brown, Republican, candidates for county commissioner from Annapolis in the last November election.

Official returns of the election showed that Levay and Brown each received 7,512 votes. Unofficial figures gave Levay, 7,526 and Brown, 7,513.

The court's ruling was based upon the record of testimony taken before Police Justice Thomas G. Basil, after the rival candidates filed a mutual action, alleging certain discrepancies in figures and other irregularities in the original count of votes. The court has directed Magistrate Basil to detail the necessary tally clerks, supervise the recount and report the result by March 4.

Counsel for the opposing candidates will have the right to challenge votes. All disputed ballots will be laid aside to be finally passed upon by the court, and the right to open other ballot boxes, if necessary, is reserved.

New PWA Auditor Takes Office

Underwood & Underwood.

Charles J. Maxcy, of New York, in his office in Washington as he assumes responsibility for the proper disbursement of the $3,800,000,000 PWA fund. He succeeds George G. Parker, ousted by Secretary Ickes, as director of the accounting division of PWA.

Ickes Drops Engineer on Dam Under Fire by D.C. Grand Jury

Maj. Oldberg's Denial of Charges in Connection With $4,800,000 Texas Project Fails to Save Job; Talesmen Quit Because of Relatives.

Secretary Ickes, PWA administrator, yesterday dismissed Maj. Charles Real Oldberg, chief irrigation investigating engineer, who has been connected with the $4,800,000 project at Willacy, Tex., now under investigation by a District grand jury.

At the same time, three members of the grand jury, including the foreman, resigned because they have relatives in the Government service.

Announcement of the dismissal of Oldberg, who has served the Government for 29 years, came from his attorney, Milton W. King. PWA officials would not comment, except to say they would not deny Oldberg had been dismissed.

According to King, Oldberg had been charged with five offenses and given five days to answer them. He did not reveal their nature. King said Oldberg had replied with a complete denial within the prescribed period, but that at the end of the five days he was notified he had been dismissed.

Assistant United States Attorney John W. Fihelly, in charge of the grand jury investigation, said he did not expect to call Oldberg as a witness.

King said these were the first charges ever brought against Oldberg. The engineer served in the Indian Bureau, War Department, Geological Survey and Reclamation Service. He went with PWA in 1933, taking charge of irrigation projects in the West. During his service as an engineer he was consultant to the Mexican and Russian governments. During the World War he served for 14 months in the Engineer Corps.

King charged Oldberg had not been given a hearing by Secretary Ickes and that the charges were brought by Interior Department investigators, headed by Louis R. Glavis.

Three Jurors Resign.

The three jurors who resigned explained their position to Justice Jesse C. Adkins. The foreman, Benjamin A. LeFevre, said his brother worked in the Treasury Department. LeFevre had been chosen foreman because he has had experience with construction materials.

Charles F. Ryan, another juror, told the court his wife had gone to work for the PWA the day he began his service as a grand juror. Julian DeW. Sanfors, the third juror, said his sister is working for the Government.

In order to fill the vacancies, court officials called for additional jurors to report Monday. Fihelly said the investigation would continue for several weeks. He intimated that indictment of from 8 to 12 persons would be asked.

When Woodrow Wilson entered the White House, Admiral Grayson became a close associate, a relationship which continued through the World War and the President's subsequent long illness. The admiral accompanied the war-time President to Paris for the peace conference in 1919.

During the war, Admiral Grayson also served as a member of the public health committee of the Food Administration and medical member of the Council of National Defense. Later he was chosen as president of the Gorgas Memorial Institute of Preventive Medicine and Tropical Research.

A lover of horses, the admiral turned much of his attention after retirement in 1928 to the stables of his Virginia estate. He has been a familiar figure at horse shows and hunt club meets and has served as a director of the National Capital Horse Show for several years.

Sasscer to Talk At Dedication Of High School

Marlboro Exercises Will Be Held Tonight; C. C. Magruder to Talk.

State Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer will be the principal speaker tonight at the formal dedication of the new Marlboro High School, Upper Marlboro. The exercises will also serve as the centennial celebration of the old Marlboro Academy, predecessor of the new school.

A special "Centennial Chorus" will open the program. The invocation will be given by the Rev. J. C. M. Shrewsbury, rector of Trinity Episcopal Church, Upper Marlboro.

After greetings are expressed by Gardner Shugart, principal of the school, Mr. C. C. Magruder, chairman of the Prince Georges County bicentennial committee, will deliver a centennial address. Two violin solos will then be played by Anton Nimmerrichter, jr.

Nicholas Orem, superintendent of the Prince Georges County schools, will formally present the building. The acceptance will be made by Charles C. Marbury, of Upper Marlboro, a member of the Maryland Legislature. Senator Sasscer's address will follow.

The program will be closed with several musical selections, including two vocal solos by Mrs. Frank Yarnall and a piano solo by Miss Adelaide Traband. The benediction will be pronounced by the Rev. F. J. Loughran.

Argentina Boasts Clear Debt Record

Buenos Aires, Feb. 9 (AP).—Gen. Agustin P. Justo, Argentina's golfing president, completes his third year in office February 20, with a boast that Argentina is the only South American debtor nation which met its debt service on time during the depression years.

His government hopes to add a new central bank to the list of measures written into law since the cabinet took office in 1932.

Although many of the Justo measures have met opposition, a long list of controlled economy bills have been put into effect. The exchange control, under which the government netted a profit of $25,000,000 last year, may be revised if the central bank is set up.

Huge Reserve Shown as Aim Of Social Plan

Fund Sufficient to Wipe Out U. S. Debt Cited to House Group.

(Associated Press.)

The fact that the Administration's social security plan eventually would create a huge fund of billions which could be used to help finance individuals, industries and the Federal, State and municipal governments cropped up yesterday in discussions of Capitol Hill.

The possibilities were outlined as the House Ways and Means Committee ended hearings on the pending bill with the intention of pressing it for a House vote week after next.

As soon as the hearings closed, a dozen House Democrats went to the White House to argue for the Government's chipping in more than the $15 a month for old-age pensions contemplated under the security measure. They found Mr. Roosevelt unwilling to raise the figure.

Opposes Higher Taxes.

The President insisted he did not think it wise to increase taxes, which would be necessary should the Government boost its pension contribution.

The House group, led by Representative Monaghan, Montana, suggested a $30 a month compromise.

Representative Dunn, of Pennsylvania said the President told the delegation he favored greater benefits but that he posed the question:

Where is the money coming from to pay them?

Two Democratic leaders of the Ways and Means Committee—Chairman Doughton, of North Carolina, and Representative Vinson, of Kentucky—told of the banking potentialities of the vast bill.

$50,093,700,000 Reserve.

They claimed that under the changes suggested by Secretary Morgenthau earlier this week, a $50,093,700,000 reserve would be built up by 1980. On most of that reserve, the Federal Government must pay to the contributors a 3 per cent interest. So, it would be poor business to let money remain idle and appropriate funds to pay the interest.

Morgenthau outlined to the committee one use of the money. He said it "would" be spent to buy up Government obligations now outstanding. Instead of private bondholders getting the interest, it would be paid to the security fund reserve.

But, it was added, even if the Federal debt should then be at its present high of $28,000,000,000 there would be $22,000,000,000 left over. Since most of that would be drawing 3 per cent interest, again it would be poor business to leave it idle.

Suggets Reinvestment.

"They could invest it in other types of securities," Doughton said, "and if at any time they needed the money they could sell the securities."

Vinson pointed out that one fertile field for investment would be in State, municipal and county bonds.

"But if they wanted to," he asserted, "they could find plenty of other places to invest it. They could make loans to industry, or to home owners, or they could expand the functions of our present Reconstruction Finance Corporation."

Could Reduce Tax Rate.

But if the surplus reserve got too big, Vinson said, Congress either could reduce the tax rate or increase the benefits paid out in old-age and unemployment benefits, or both.

The Treasury's estimates show that the present bill would provide a $322,000,000 reserve at the end of 1937, which would increase to $28,413,000,000—approximately the present Federal deficit—in 1955 and to $49,173,300,000 in 1975.

Doughton called the committee to meet Monday to consider amendments.

Austria Will Execute Woman in Bomb Plot

Innsbruck, Austria, Feb. 8 (AP).—Hildegard Goessl, charged with violation of the explosives law, was sentenced to death today, the first woman to be sentenced to the supreme penalty for the crime.

The woman was charged with complicity in an attempt to kill Anton Strehle, of the Heimwehr, July 17, 1934, by placing a time bomb under his bed. Her friend, Max Wild, who adjusted and placed the bomb, also was sentenced to death.

City Officials Indicted In Miami Crime Drive

Miami, Fla., Feb. 8 (U.P.).—The county grand jury today indicted the city clerk, the director of public safety, a police captain and several professional bondsmen in its drive to clean up crime in Miami.

Sam McCleary, director of public safety, was named on a bribery change. He also was named, along with Police Capt. Frank Mitchell and Fritz Gordon, attorney, in an indictment alleging conspiracy to obstruct justice. A bribery indictment was returned against City Clerk Harold Rose.

Vienna Honors Fritz Kreisler.

As Senator Glass Talked to Press Yesterday

Underwood & Underwood

Senator Carter Glass, chairman of the powerful Finance Committee of the Senate, who has been at odds with the Administration's financial policy, as he held a press conference in his office.

Text of Eccles Statement Urging Passage of Banking Bill

The text of the statement defending the Federal Reserve section of the Administration banking bill, made yesterday by Governor Marriner S. Eccles, of the Federal Reserve Board, follows:

The chief purposes of the proposals for changes in our banking laws, insofar as they relate to the Federal Reserve System, are the following:

1. To accelerate the rate of economic recovery.

2. To make our banking and monetary system, which was designed under the conditions prevailing prior to the World War, more responsive to our present and future economic needs.

3. To prevent a recurrence of conditions that led to the collapse of our entire banking structure in the spring of 1933.

The banking system of this country has been put to a severe test and has not stood that test. It has not been able to stand up under the strain of the depression or to lend effective support in the fight against it. On the contrary, the banking system has proved to be an element of weakness in our economic structure that has aggravated and prolonged the worst phases of the depression. And it still impedes the rate of recovery.

The explanation of this is not to be found only in the excesses and abuses that characterized our banking practices in the recent past, nor in the present relative inertia of the banking system, nor by an assumption that bankers are less eager than other men to hasten the progress of recovery. The fact that the banking system has proved to be inadequate is to be explained, in large part, by the fact that our banking structure has remained essentially unchanged throughout an epoch of far-reaching economic changes both in this country and in the world at large.

Measures Are Intended To Remedy Deficiencies.

The principal measures contemplated in the proposed legislation therefore, are designed to remedy deficiencies now inherent in the banking structure itself. In this connection it is proposed to make the Federal Reserve System, which is the cornerstone of the banking structure, more responsive to our national economic needs. It is also proposed to make our commercial banks better adapted to meeting the credit requirements of industry, commerce and agriculture under the changes that have taken place in our economic system since most of our present banking laws were enacted.

Underlying the proposed changes in the banking laws are fundamental economic and monetary considerations, the widespread influence of which has not been adequately understood. In fact, the lack of an adequate understanding of these fundamental considerations was an important factor in bringing about the disastrous collapse of our economy, which culminated in the closing of all the banks in the spring of 1933.

Fluctuations in production and employment, and in the national income, are conditioned upon changes in the available supply of cash and deposit currency and upon the rate and character of monetary expenditures. The effect of an increased rate of spending may be modified by decreasing the supply of money and intensified by increasing the supply of money. Experience shows that, without conscious control, the supply of money tends to expand when the rate of spending increases and to contract when the rate of spending diminishes.

During the depression the supply of money did not expand and thus moderate the effect of decreased rates of spending, but contracted rapidly and so intensified the depression. This is one part of the economy in which automatic adjustments tend to have an intensifying rather than a moderating effect. If the monetary mechanism is to be used as an instrument for the promotion of business stability, conscious control and management are essential.

At the present stage of economic developments, main reliance for bringing about a rise in the national income must be placed upon increased governmental and private expenditures. The most important role of monetary control at the moment, therefore, is assuring that adequate support is available whenever needed for promoting and accelerating recovery.

Would Prevent Inflation During Era of Recovery.

Two supremely important duties are likely to devolve upon the Reserve administration in the future. The first is assuring that a recovery does not result in an undesirable inflation. The second is assuring that a recovery is not followed by a depression. If recovery is allowed to develop into inflation, it is certain ultimately to lead to another depression. To regain prosperity without excesses, and thereafter to maintain business stability, are the two immediate objectives of monetary policy.

In order that the Reserve administration may endeavor, with some prospect of success, to render prompt support for emergency financing in case of need, to prevent the recovery from getting out of hand and to prevent the recurrence of disastrous depressions in the future, it is essential that the authority of the Federal Reserve Board be strengthened. As matters now stand, the board is charged wth responsibility for monetary developments in this country, but lacks the clear and explicit authority for determining the country's monetary policies.

An essential step in giving the board this authority is to give it a controlling influence over the system's open-market operations, for these are by far the most important instrument of Reserve policy. By these operations reserves may be given to or taken away from member banks, and it is on these reserves that deposits are based. It is not too much to say that the power to control open-market operations is the power to control the expansion and contraction of bank credit, and thus in large measure to control the country's supply of money.

In the present administrative organization, the power to initiate open-market policy rests with the 12 Federal Reserve banks, which act jointly through the Federal Open-Market Committee established by the banking act of 1933. The Federal Reserve Board has no representation on this committee. It is given only the power to approve or disapprove open-market policies recommended by the committee, and to prescribe the regulations under which the open-market operations are to be carried out. However much the board may desire an energetic buying and selling policy, it has no authority under the law to initiate such a policy.

On the other hand, the ability of the Open-Market Committee to give effect to policies that it recommends is dependent both on the approval of the board and on the willingness of the Reserve banks individually to participate in the operations.

Holds Present Arrangement Handicaps Reserve System.

The existing arrangement is cumbersome and unwieldly. To what extent it has prevented the proper functioning of the Federal Reserve System it is impossible to tell. But it is clear that, if it is retained, there is no reason to suppose that the system will in the future be more effective in bringing about business stability than it has been in the past.

It is, therefore, obviously necessary to concentrate the authority and responsibility for open-market operations in a body representing a national point of view. This is provided for in the proposed legislation without in any way impairing the autonomy of the Federal Reserve banks in matters of local or regional concern.

Another anomaly in the present administrative organization of the Federal Reserve System is the arrangement in respect of the Reserve Bank governors. The governors are the principal officers of the Reserve banks, and their positions are of major importance in the system; yet they are not even mentioned in the Federal Reserve act, nor is their appointment subject to the approval of the Federal Reserve Board. It is, therefore, proposed to recognize the office of Governor in the law, to combine this office with that of chairman of the board of directors, and to make the appointment subject to the approval of the Federal Reserve Board.

To facilitate the carrying out of national policies, it is proposed to remove certain of the restrictions that are now imposed on the Federal Reserve System by the Federal Reserve act, but that experience has shown to be detrimental and impracticable. These restrictions are largely predicated on conditions that prevailed when the Federal Reserve act was adopted in 1913, and were wisely imposed on a system that was new and untried; but in the course of time the circumstances that gave rise to them have diminished in importance or greatly altered.

Says Restrictions Held Back Assistance to Banks.

A conspicuous example in this respect is the rigid definition of the kinds of paper that the Federal Reserve banks are permitted to discount. Changes in the country's economic life, notably in the methods of financing business enterprise, have materially reduced the volume of short-term, self-liquidating paper of the classes to which the discount privileges of the Reserve banks are largely restricted by law. In times of stress, therefore, when the help of the Federal Reserve System has been most urgently needed, many banks, though holding sound assets in their portfolios, have been devoid of the particular kinds available under the law for borrowing a the Reserve banks.

The undue severity of the limitations on eligible paper was finally recognized, and they were removed temporarily by emergency legislation; but this action was not taken until much harm had been done to the business of the country and unwarranted hardship and loss suffered by bank depositors. Furthermore, there is at present considerable evidence that these limitations are proving an impediment to recovery. New loans of a type that commercial banks have customarily made in the past are now refused, not because the applicants do not possess sound assets, but because the sound assets that they do possess are technically ineligible for rediscount. There is also still a tendency among many banks to remove from their portfolios paper that can not be immediately liquefied by recourse to the Federal Reserve banks.

For these reasons it is proposed that the legal limitations on eligibility be removed and authority be given to the Federal Reserve Board to determine by regulation the character of paper that shall be eligible for discount at the Reserve banks.

Legislation Would Halt Segregation of Collateral.

Another of the proposed changes in the Federal Reserve act would dispense with the requirement for segregation of collateral behind Federal Reserve notes, without in any way altering the present requirement of 40 per cent reserve of gold certificates. When there was a foreign drain on the country's gold in 1931-1932, the requirement for segregation of collateral caused serious difficulty by tying up gold over and above the 40 per cent required reserve. The situation was met for the emergency by permitting the pledge of United States Government obligations as collateral against Federal Reserve notes; but the authority of the reserve banks in this matter is only temporary.

Since Federal Reserve notes are prior liens on all assets of the issuing Reserve Bank, and are in addition obligations of the United States Government, the requirement for segregation of collateral serves no useful purpose and adds nothing to the safety of the notes.

It has been erroneously asserted that to dispense with the requirement for segregation would give the Reserve banks power to issue notes without adequate backing. This is not the case. The Reserve banks have two principal classes of liabilities: deposits and notes. Back of these, in addition to gold and lawful money, are the Reserve banks' bills and securities. Either notes or deposits can be increased through the acquisition by the Reserve banks of an acceptable asset. Their total can be increased in no other way. It is at the time the asset is acquired that the determination is made that it is good enough to be held by the Federal Reserve bank; and this determination is made without reference to whether the asset is ultimately to become backing for a deposit liability or for a note liability. The deposits of the Federal Reserve banks are the reserves back of all deposits of member banks. Assets that are good enough to constitute the backing for deposits of the Reserve banks are also good enough to back Federal Reserve notes.

Believes Bank Should Have Right to Use Its Assets.

Furthermore, a holder of a deposit with a Federal Reserve bank has the right to withdraw it in notes at any time, and consequently the Federal Reserve bank should be in a position to use the asset acquired at the time the deposit was created as backing for the notes into which this deposit is convertible.

Neither the elasticity of our currency supply nor the safety of Federal Reserve currency is in any way affected by the proposed change in the law. Its only practical effect is to eliminate the cumbersome and useless requirement that certain specific collateral be segregated, and held at considerable expense and in a privileged position, as backing exclusively for Federal Reserve notes.

The proposals relating directly to member banks of the Federal Reserve System are few in number, but vital to speeding recovery. Their purpose is to make it more feasible for banks to meet the present requirements of mortgage borrowers and to participate more aggressively in a revival of activity and employment in the construction industry. The changes proposed would authorize banks to use a larger proportion of their assets for mortgage loans than is permitted by existing law, to lend up to 75 per cent of the property value and for a term up to 20 years on properly amortized first mortgages, and to make such loans without regard to the local geographical limits to which the existing law confines them.

Member banks of the Federal Reserve System hold nearly ten billion dollars of time deposits that represent in large part the people's savings. These are long-time funds. Their use for long-time purposes is proper from every point of view.

Release of Funds Seen Helpful to Community.

The release of member bank long-time funds for use in the mortgage market will help the banks to meet the local needs of their communties and will do away with the necessity of having other institutions take over a service that the banks are equipped to render.

The problem of finding profitable use for their funds is a vital one with the banks at the present time, and a relaxation of restrictions on real estate loans will provide such a use without impairing the soundness of the banks' condition. It should be noted that long-time mortgages, with provision for amortization, are sounder than short-time mortgages without amortization, and that the introduction of amortized mortgages into the holdings of member banks will contribute to the stability of the mortgage market.

These changes would put an end to restrictions in the existing law that practical experience has plainly shown to be injurious to banks and mortgage borrowers alike. The effect of these proposed changes would enable commercial banks to take an effective part in the reopening of the mortgage market, and give their unstinted support, in a manner not now possible for them, to that branch of industry in which the opportunity for meeting both a social and an economic need is now greatest.

Steel Companies Study U. S. Suits

Will Discuss Action Started to Restrain Merger.

T. M. Gridler, president of Republic Steel Corporation, and Donald B. Gillies, president of Corrigan, McKinney Steel Co., said yesterday meetings of the boards of directors of the two companies would be held within the next few days to consider action to be taken in view of the Government's antitrust suits filed yesterday to restarin a merger of the companies.

After the board meet letters will be sent to stockholders advising them of the steps the companies will take, the Associated Press say.

Eccles Defends Banking Bill As Reserve Aid

interrupted by questions, but that part of the press conference was "off the record." It may be said, however, that his quick replies indicated he had made preparations for the severest quizzing by the Banking and Currency Committees of Congress and was ready to defend his program with ardor.

Carries Fight to Public.

Not only was Governor Eccles' spirited defense of his bill unusual, but his presentation of that defense was novel. In the first place, he is the only Governor of a Federal Reserve Board to hold regular weekly press conferences. Secondly, in the past everyone connected with the Reserve System has maintained a rigid secretiveness. Aside from routine announcements, Reserve officials have confined their public pronouncements to letters directed to some Governmental authority or at hearings of Congress.

Gov. Eccles, however, did not wait until he was summoned before the congressional committees, as he will be within a week or two, to explain his bill, but carried his fight in behalf of that measure directly to the public. Moreover, he has deliberately given his opponents on Capitol Hill an advantage by presenting his views in advance of appearing before them.

Battle on Views Foreseen.

Almost certainly some of the views of Gov. Eccles will be combatted, especially those relating to control of monetary policies and to the proposed change in the conduct of open market operations—the buying and selling of Government obligations. Open market operations now are in the hands of a committee of 12 selected by the Reserve banks.

Under the pending bill such operations would be conducted by a committee of five, three of whom would be members of the Reserve Board. The committee's recommendations would be binding on the Reserve banks.

Governor Eccles termed open market operations "by far the most important instrument of Reserve policy" and said it was not too much to say that the power to control such operations was "the power to control the expansion and contraction of bank credit and thus in a large measure to control the country's supply of money."

He held the present arrangement "cumbersome and unwieldy" and held that if it is retained "there is no reason to suppose that the system will in the future be more effective in bringing about business stability than it has been in the past."

Would Concentrate Authority.

Consequently he held it "obviously necessary to concentrate the authority and responsibility for open market operations in a body representing a national point of view."

Likewise he justified the proposal for making selection of bank governors subject to Reserve Board approval and held that the carrying out of national policies would be facilitated by removing the restrictions now placed on paper eligible for discount.

Changes in the country's economic life had made the provisions drafted in 1913 obsolete, he said in effect, adding that now in times of stress, when the help of the Reserve system is most urgently needed, many banks lack the necessary kinds of assets for Reserve bank loans.

The eligibility limitations, moreover, at the present time "are proving an impediment to recovery" because applicants for loans might have sound but technically ineligible assets to offer and therefore are refused needed funds.

Takes Up Collateral Issue.

Returning to the repeal of specific collateral requirements for Federal Reserve notes, the governor emphasized that this provision would in no way alter the present requirement for 40 per cent reserve of gold certificates. He contended segregation of collateral for note issues served "no useful purpose and adds nothing to the safety of the notes."

He held it erroneous to say that under this proposal the Reserve banks would have "power to issue notes without adequate backing." The entire assets of the issuing bank would be behind the notes, he asserted, adding that "assets that are good enough to constitute the backing for deposits of the Reserve banks are also good enough to back Federal Reserve notes."

Gov. Eccles defended at some length the proposal to permit member banks to make real estate loans up to 75 per cent of the value of the property on a 20-year amortized basis. He said this was designed to meet the needs of mortgage borrowers and to permit the banks to participate more aggressively in a revival of activity and employment in the construction industry, as well as giving the banks a profitable outlet for their huge excess reserves.

10 Actors Injured As Bus Hits Wagon

Scranton, Pa., Feb. 8 (AP).—Ten persons were injured, several of them seriously, today when a motor bus carrying the Shakespeare Players crashed into a wagon at Falls, Pa. The bus was demolished. The injured, all of whom were residents of New York City, included James Hendrickson, leading man, and Claire Bruce, leading lady.

The players appeared in a performance at Kingston, Pa., last night, and were on their way to Waverly, N. Y., when the accident occurred.

Leaders Back Patman's Bill For Bonus Cash

By Douglas Warrenfels.

After weeks of warfare between rival bonus forces, the House faction led by Representative Patman (Democrat), Texas, yesterday emerged as the stronger.

Observers attached significance to an understanding authoritatively reported reached between Patman and the lower chamber floor command calling for a special rule to assure a vote on his bill if the opposition measure of Representative Vinson (Democrat), Kentucky, should be approved by the Ways and Means Committee.

Both proposals contemplate immediate full cash payment of the adjusted service certificates. They differ in methods of raising the funds. The Texan would have the Government print the $2,000,000,000 or more in additional currency necessary, while the Kentuckian's measure, though not specific, probably would involve a bond issue.

Opportunity to Choose.

While Speaker Byrns and Chairman O'Connor, Rules Committee, declined to be drawn out, both indicated they believed the House should have the opportunity to choose between the two plans.

In other quarters it was made plain if the Vinson bill, championed by the American Legion, should be reported out by the committee Patman would be given a special rule which would prevent his measure from dying in committee and enable him to offer it as a substitute for the Vinson program.

The Patman forces for a time feared Vinson, a member, would use his influence on the Ways and Means Committee to have his own measure reported out. An unofficial poll yesterday, however, indicated the Kentuckian would have difficulty in blocking committee approval for the Patman bill.

Typical of the bonus trend was the comment of Representative Disney (Democrat), Oklahoma, a Ways and Means Committee member:

"If the American Legion would withdraw its support of the Vinson bill, in my judgment the Patman bill would be immediately reported."

Meanwhile, a possibility developed that the committee would give bonus legislation the right of way over the Wagner-Lewis economic security measure. Those behind the movement to force bonus action next week by the House proper pointed out committee hearings would not be essential because witnesses on both sides were questioned last session.

V. F. W. for Patman Bill.

Another important development was indorsement of the Patman bill for the first time by the Veterans of Foreign Wars, original cash bonus advocates. James E. Van Zandt, national commander, defended the Texan's proposal as "the soundest method" of caring for veterans.

"The V. F. W.," he said, "will fight to the finish for the Patman bill and when the smoke of battle clears we are confident that victory will perch upon our banner.

"After the leading veterans organizations of the country had indorsed the principles of the Patman bill and pledged themselves to fight for immediate payment of the certificates without increasing taxation or the national debt, it is unfortunate that the Vinson bill should have been injected into the situation.

"The only way that payment could be made under this bankers' bonus bill is to increase taxation or the national debt. It would give the bankers, who made huge profits while the veterans were in the trenches or camps, millions of dollars more in interest profits."

Van Zandt dismissed as "unfair and untrue" what he termed a "bankers' bugaboo of inflation" against the Patman bill. He declared veterans were "100 per cent" in favor of the measure.

Patman himself told reporters his bill would be passed "within 24 hours" if Frank N. Belgrano, American Legion national commander, would withdraw his opposition.

"The legion's support of the Vinson bill," he said, "is just about as constructive as reaching for a hammer to kill a fly on a baby's nose."

Legion spokesmen earlier declared they believed the Vinson bill would stand a better chance of passage by the Senate. They discredited the Patman measure as first of all a move in the direction of inflation.

John D. Jr., Disposes Of 20,000 Oil Shares

John D. Rockefeller, jr., reported to the Securities Commission yesterday that he had disposed during January of 20,000 shares, valued at $280,000, of his holdings in Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., Inc.

His total holdings in Socony on January 31 were 5,094,370 shares of the company's capital stock, worth about $71,000,000 on the current market. It constituted more than 10 per cent of Socony's outstanding stock.

Paraguay Set For 'Big Push' Of Chaco Clash

Major Battle of Bolivia's Villa Montes Held Plan of Invaders.

Buenos Aires, Feb. 8 (AP).—A major battle for possession of Villa Montes, Bolivia's biggest bulwark against Paraguay invaders, was expected momentarily in some neutral military circles here tonight as sporadically sharp fighting was reported from the Chaco.

Gen. Jose Estigarribia, Paraguayan commander in chief, pushed his tightening semicircle ever closer to the Bolivian army base, knocking over one Bolivian outpost after another in the process. Observers here believed Bolivia soon would have to choose one of three possible lines of action. The alternatives were:

1. Stand and fight in an effort to hold their last important fortress in the Chaco.

2. Abandon Villa Montes and execute another strategic retreat to the hills behind it; or,

3. Counter-attack.

What course the Bolivian high command would select remained its secret, but the sudden counter-attack launched against the Paraguayans yesterday in the Pilcomayo sector indicated stout resistance was planned.

Since taking Fort Ballivian and and smashing the Bolivians' first "Hindenburg line" late last year, Estigarribia's forces have advanced steadily up the Pilcomayo River, meanwhile pressing to the west, until the main Chaco front has narrowed to about 25 miles and the Paraguayans stand on the soil of Bolivia proper.

A general battle for Villa Montes, the heavy fortifications of which command the slopes up which the Paraguayans must climb to storm it, would almost certainly mean heavy casualties on both sides, inasmuch as 80,000 or more men could be thrown into the action.

Lower Interest Stirs a Conflict

(Associated Press.)

Administration leaders, taken by surprise yesterday when the Senate voted to cut the interest rate on farm mortgage loans through land banks from 4½ to 3½ per cent, immediately organized a counter move, warning it would cost $100,000,000 a year.

The amendment, offered to the Administration's Farm Credit bill by Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, was adopted, 39 to 33. Senator Robinson, Democratic leader, was on his feet as soon as the vote was announced, asking for reconsideration.

Debate grew so warm that action on the amendment and the bill itself was postponed until Monday, under an agreement limiting debate.

Wheeler contended that farmers could not pay 4½ per cent interest and that the Government faced a choice between reducing the interest rate or feeding them on a dole after they were forced to give up their farms.

The vehicle for the Wheeler amendment was a comparatively unimportant bill offered by the Administration to liberalize the farm credit laws. It was called up yesterday in the anticipation it could be disposed of in a few minutes.

All day yesterday and most of today action on the bill was delayed by a warm debate over an amendment by Senator Carey (Republican), Wyoming, to permit loans to live-stock farm corporations.

Finally, Carey's amendment, modified to meet objections that it was an opening wedge for corporate farming, was adopted, 45 to 32.

Then Wheeler offered his amendment, which would not only reduce interest rates, but remove the five-year limitation now in the law on the existing interest of 4½ per cent.

Boundary Group's Extension Favored

Favorable Report Ordered on Bill by House Unit.

Extension of the life of the Virginia-District of Columbia Boundary Commission for another year is provided for in a bill for which a favorable report was ordered yesterday by a sub-committee of the House Judiciary Committee.

If the measure, introduced by Representative Howard W. Smith, of Virginia, fails of passage the commission will expire on March 15.

Former Gov. Charles H. Brough of Arkansas is chairman of the commission, which is holding hearings in an effort to determine the boundary between Virginia and the District. Brough is the neutral member, with William C. Gloth representing Virginia and Malcolm S. McConihe representing the District.

Bids for New Library Annex, Court Furniture, Due in March

Capitol Architect Authorized to Spend $6,500,000 for Wing; Printing Office and Bindery to Be Moved Upon Completion of Work.

Bids on two major Capitol Hill projects, construction of the Library of Congress annex, and furnishing of the Supreme Court building, will be opened on March 1 and March 12, respectively, it was announced yesterday by David Lynn, Architect of the Capitol.

Congress has authorized the expenditure of $6,500,000 for the annex, which will have five floors, basement and attic. The structure will occupy a site 406 feet by 228 feet.

The Library of Congress' branch printing office and bindery, the indexing division with its more than 80,000,000 cards and the copyright office will be transferred to the annex. The building's central portion, 147 feet wide and 322 feet long, is to be occupied by bookstacks.

Each of the 12 bookstack decks will have a storage capacity of 850,000 volumes.

The exterior design of the annex will be modern in treatment, with Italian Renaissance motifs. Pierson & Wilson, of Washington, are the architects.

The Supreme Court contract calls for furnishing and installation of chairs, benches, settees, sofas, tables, library equipment, miscellaneous bronze and aluminum work, safes, lockers, carpets, draperies, cafeteria furniture, electric fans and other equipment.

'Mayor' Norton In Plane Sees 2 Airport Sites

By James D. Secrest.

"The "Lady Mayor of Washington" threw caution to the winds yesterday and took her first air flight in order to get the low down on the District airport controversy from an altitude of 2,000 feet.

"It was swell," Representative Mary T. Norton, chairman of the House District Committee, said as she alighted from a four-passenger cabin plane at the Washington Airport, "but I think I'll continue to travel by electric train."

The reason for the flight was that the House sub-committee holding hearings on the Smith airport bill decided to take a bird's-eye view of Gravelly Point and the Washington Airport.

Planes Furnished.

Officials of the airport furnished two planes, one a trimotored Ford transport ship, to take the party up, but the National Capital Park and Planning Commission had a half dozen representatives along to convince the Congressmen that Gravelly Point has it all over the Washington Airport.

"I am strongly inclined toward the Gravelly Point site," Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, chairman of the sub-committee, said after the trip.

Representative Jack Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, who went up twice, was more emphatic when asked which of the fields offered the best opportunity for development and said:

"Gravelly Point, by all means."

The two Republican members of the sub-committee, Representatives W. Sterling Cole, of New York, and Clare Gerald Fenerty, of Pennsylvania, followed the automobile party around but balked at the airplane flights.

Members of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, who have fought for Gravelly Point for years, called attention to its size, its location, and had blueprints to show what the airport would look like.

Wants the "Low-Down."

"We've been trying to get this airport for seven years," said John Nolen, jr., director of planning for the N. C. P. and P. C.

"Yes, I know the bill has been floating around the Capitol for years," responded Mrs. Norton. "I would like to know the low-down on why it has never passed."

To this there was no response.

"Usually when a bill like that is held up indefinitely," she continued, "somebody with influence is blocking it."

Neither Gravelly Point nor the Washington Airport field was in its best form for the congressional visitors. The former was a sheet of ice, while the latter was covered with a mingling of ice, red mud and pools of water.

At 11 o'clock this morning the sub-committee will resume its hearing of pro-and-con testimony. Chairman Randolph said he's going to have a bill ready for reporting very soon.

"There's not going to be any pigeon-holing or any undue delay this year," he said. "I'm going to see this thing through."

Nazis Prepare Pedigree Book To Speed Utopia

Racial Improvement Drive to Include Chain of Health Centers.

Berlin, Feb. 8 (AP).—Nazis, striving to make their dream of an Aryan Utopia come true, expect their new "pedigree book" son to be Germany's best seller.

Several million copies of the volume were being printed today.

By publishing the "pedigree book" and establishing community health departments throughout Germany, the Nazis intensified their favorite project, racial improvement.

Health centers are to be opened April 1 in all cities and rural communities. These will contin complete files of inhabitants' well-being, showing, for example, family trees, results of physical examination and vaccinations.

Their most important function, however, will be to give advice "on an individual's heritage and the care of the race," on whether individual men and women are fit to marry—this on the basis of the health cards—and regarding the selection of mates.

The time will come, events seem to protend, when the purposes of these racial headquarters will be broadened so that they may order the marriage of certan individuals and prevent that of others.

Physicians will be in charge of the centers and conduct the thorough-going tests of racial purity and fitness.

Ship Runs Aground In Chesapeake Bay

Baltimore, Feb. 8 (AP).—Grounded in shoal water off Sharp's Island Light in the Chesapeake Bay, the Danish ship Lifland today sent out radio calls for assistance.

The Coast Guard cutter Apache, which returned to her base here this morning from a trip to the Eastern Shore ice field, immediately went to the assistance of the stricken ship.

The Lifland was bound for Baltimore, but the number of men aboard was not known here. Officials of the company in charge of its arrival here expressed the opinion the ship could be floated at high water and was in no danger.

Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins will not hesitate in approving funds for transient quarters in view of the epidemic, it was said late yesterday.

Segregation Advised.

The men should be separated into groups of not more than 20 to a room, and under these conditions beds should be at least three feet apart, Dr. Waller recommended.

A conference at Federal Emergency Relief headquarters was attended by Dr. Cummin, Dr. Waller and Richard W. Gebhardt, director of the transient bureau.

It was decided that District and Federal health authorities would unite in combating the outbreak.

As far as possible it was decided to keep the transients in the District.

Ancient Lore Fails to Revive Chinese Beauty

Blood of Live Ducks Futile After Dose of Poison.

Tientsin, China, Feb. 8 (AP).—The good earth of China and the blood of live ducks have failed to restore life to Tang Tzo-Jen, beautiful young Chinese woman. Native physicians, who had recourse to ancient Chinese medical lore after modern practitioners pronounced the girl dead, admitted that their efforts had been in vain.

The girl, 25-year-old niece of Gen. Tang Yu-Lin, former war lord of Jehol Province, swallowed poison because of disappointment in love. Physicians at the Tientsin Municipal Hospital, where she was taken, pronounced her dead and refused to admit her body. Other hospitals followed suit.

A charitable institution was found, at last, which agreed to accept her body. Friends refused to believe she was dead. They summoned Chinese physicians, who set to work in an attempt to resurrect the girl by methods commended in ancient Chinese medical writings.

A dozen live ducks were obtained and their blood transfused into the girl's body. When this failed it was decided to test an ancient theory that the earth of China will draw poisons from the human body. A shallow pit was dug in which the body was placed. A young Chinese physician stationed himself beside the pit.

After long vigil, he saw no sign of resurrection and practitioners admitted their failure.

"The people of Mexico today," he said, "are suffering under the lash of oppression, a lash wielded by a tyrannical group, a minority in power in the government.

"These men are using the military forces of that country in the age-old effort of Paganism and atheism to forbid free Mexicans from worshiping the Divine Creator in their churches; and by teaching Communism in their schools, which they have placed absolutely under their domination, they are striving to obliterate the name of God from the minds of the children."

Grange's Heads To Meet Friday And Plan Drive

Strengthening Organization Will Be Considered at Frederick Session.

Frederick, Md., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—A conference of masters, lecturers and secretaries of Pomona Grange and its nine subordinate units will be held at the Y. M. C. A., Friday, February 15. Plans will be discussed to increase the membership and strengthen the organization. About 40 persons are expected.

Thomas Roy Brooks, Belair, State master; Mrs. Harry L. Davis, near Monrovia, State lecturer, and Edward F. Holter, near Middletown, State secretary and field organizer, will lead discussions. It will be the first conference of its kind in this county and all of the local units at Jefferson, Ballenger, Lewistown, Braddock, Middletown, Mount Pleasant, Myersville, New Market and Creagerstown will be represented. Similar meetings will be held in other counties.

A conference will be held at Leitersburg, Montgomery County, the following day when a Pomona body will be organized. Washington County has four subordinate units, Leithersburg, Smithsburg, Indian Springs and Clearsprings. These units have formed part of the Frederick County group but will separate from the Frederick group.

Pomona organizations in the State are in Frederick, Baltimore, Harford, Carroll, Talbot, Prince George, Montgomery-Howard counties. About half a dozen other counties have from one to three unit organizations, not enough to form a Pomona body which requires four units.

A new grange was organized at Gaithersburg, Montgomery County, known as the Shady Grove Grange. Edward F. Holter, State secretary, and Albert Ady, assistant county agent of Montgomery County and State gatekeeper, conducted the organization work. It is the sixth subordinate grange in Montgomery County, the others being Olney, Brighton, Liberty Grove, Germantown and Woodfield. Frederick County with nine subordinate units has the largest Pomona body in the State.

Mrs. Ailes Acts To Enjoin Bank

Seeks to Tie Up Funds of Estranged Husband for Equity Suit.

Eleanor M. Ailes, wife of Milton E. Ailes, jr., son of a former vice president of the Riggs National Bank, yesterday asked the District Supreme Court for a temporary restraining order against the bank so that agreements she has reached with her estranged husband can be enforced.

Mrs. Ailes, through Attorney General George D. Horning, jr., said that her husband left her last October. She said that he was the beneficiary of all the income from his father's estimated $75,000 estate and that he had consented to give her one-half of the income until he received the estate August 30, of this year.

At that time he will be 30 years of age, and under the terms of his father's will he will inherit the entire estate, one-half of which, she said, he had promised her for the support of herself and their child, Milton E. Ailes 3d.

Despite the agreements, the wife said, her husband recently has neglected to pay her anything, and she fears that he may take the entire estate, when it goes to him, and fail to make provision for her maintenance and that of their minor child.

Pugilist Fiermonte Visits His First Wife

Florence, Italy, Feb. 8 (U.P.).—Prize Fighter Enzo Fiermonte came home tonight, still a bit dazed at his ability to win the hearts of rich American women, and announced he has no intention of divorcing his present wife—Signora Madeline Astor Force Dick Fiermonte.

The pugilist, who was caught aboard ship by his American wife as he was sailing from New York, spent two hours at the home of his first wife, Tosca. He said his wife was waiting for him in Naples.

$8,000 Gold With Him, Autoist Faces Charges

Springfield, Mo., Feb. 8 (AP).—Because W. E. "Bill" Lewis, 55-year-old Eagle Rock, Mo., farmer, prefers to carry his life savings around with him, he may face Federal charges for possession of gold certificates.

Arrested by Marionville officers on a reckless driving charge, Lewis was taken to the Lawrence County Jail. Search disclosed more than $8,000 in his pockets of which $1,600 of the money was in gold certificates, a deputy said.

Town Calls Meeting To Change Fire Unit

New Market, Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—A mass meeting of local citizens for reorganization of New Market's fire department has been called by the town council for February 15.

Action by the council was taken at the request of Mayor G. A. Woods, following recent criticism of the manner in which affairs of the volunteer unit have been conducted.

Bag Big Lion.

Lordsburg, N. Mex. (U.P.).—A mountain lion, measuring 7 feet 6 inches from tip to tip, the largest ever bagged here, was taken in the Mogollon Mountains by Assistant District Attorney L. P. McHaffey and his ranch foreman, Mac Elms. They trailed the lion from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m. before hounds finally treed it.

Rudy Lunches During Trial Recess

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Food! A big plateful slides past those mellow vocal cords as Rudy Vallee has a bite between court rounds in his legal battle with his estranged wife, Fay Webb Vallee.

Rudy Attempts To Hit Lawyer, But Is Foiled

Wednesday. His apology was accepted.

Fay's father, Clarence Webb, police chief of Santa Monica, Calif., was questioned on the stand about his daughter's alleged amorous telephone conversations with Gary Leon, adagio dancer.

Accountants also testified that the net inome of Vallee, both personal and corporate was between $120,000 and $133,000 annually during 1932, 1933 and 1934.

Attorneys for Mrs. Vallee, who was absent from the court for the first time, suddenly rested their case, explaining she was confined to bed at her hotel under the care of a physician.

Gottlieb, asking dismissal of the suit, denounced Mrs. Vallee, asserting she neglected her duty by not coming into court to defend the misconduct charges made by her husband.

There was another flareup between Justice Cotillo and Benjamin Cohn, of Los Angeles, one of Mrs. Vallee's attorneys.

Cohn had started to walk across the courtroom, when the Justice shouted:

"Mr. California, stop making those eyes. I have had my eye on you all the time."

What Cohn had done to prompt this rebuke was not obvious to spectators. He did not reply.

"Oh, yeah?" said Cohn. Then he added: "How about California?"

"I won't go to California with you," Justice Cotillo told him. "When the case is over I'll meet you anywhere. But California is too good for you."

Approval Given To Two Plans For City Center

Board of Trade Rejects Two Other Proposals for Project.

The Board of Trade yesterday gave its approval to two of the four plans which have been advanced for the construction of the Municipal Center.

The proposed site of the center is bounded by C and G streets, Third and Sixth streets, most of which was recently acquired by the District at the cost of $6,000,000.

Two of the plans were rejected as being too costly, while those approved have also received the sanction of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

The proposals studied by the Board of Trade are substantially the same as those proposed to the District Commissioners by Municipal Architect Nathan Wyeth. The Commissioners have not indicated which plan they prefer.

"The southern half of the present Municipal Center site should, if possible, be sold to the Federal Government," the trade body recommended.

"The court building should be erected in Judiciary Square and paid for from the proceeds of the sale of half of the present site, reserving for future consideration the locations of the administrative building on the northern half of the present site or the site of the old Pension Office.

Gouldman Is Elected By Young Democrats

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Francis B. Gouldman, attorney, was named president of the Young Democrats Club of Fredericksburg and Spostylvania last night at the club's annual reorganization meeting. He succeeds S. Bernard Coleman, who declined to run for re-election. Mr. Coleman is a candidate for the State Senate.

Other officers elected were: Mrs. Kuszner Bauman and B. J. Sullivan, Fredericksburg, vice presidents; Miss Mary Massey and W. Cary Crismond, Spotsylvania, vice presidents; Arthur R. Smith, treasurer, and Robert S. Garnett, secretary.

Success Ends 10-Year Fight; Marshall, Va., Is Incorporated

Mayor and City Council to Be Chosen at Election on March 12; Action Long Agitated in Courts of Fauquier County.

Marshall, Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—After ten years of heated litigation this town was officially drawn in the records of Fauquier County as an incorporated town, following an order signed yesterday by Judge J. H. R. Alexander, of Fauquier County Circuit Court.

The matter of Marshall, once known as Salem, was first agitated a decade ago when mass meetings to effect the necessary petitions were held. No petitions were filed, however.

In September, 1934, a petition for incorporation was turned down by the circuit court on the grounds that the area did not comprise a large enough population to warrant incorporation.

After a new survey revealing a contrary report, the incorporation order was certified by the court and February 7 set as the date of legalization. Court mandamus requires election of city officials, including a mayor and council to be conducted March 12.

The history of the town, which will make the fourth incorporated town of Fauquier County, reaches back 138 years when a 30-acre tract allocated to John Monroe was established as the town of Salem. The name was changed to Marshall about 50 years ago to avoid conflict in the mail service with the Salem, in Roanoke County. Marshall is located in the northern part of the county on the Southern Railway.

Meeting of Dairy Body.

Warrenton, Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Joseph Copley, county agricultural agent for Fauquier County, has announced the annual meeting of the Fauquier County Dairy Herd Improvement Association, will be held at Bealeton School, Monday evening.

R. W. Dickson, of the dairy department, V. P. I., Blacksburg, will be present.

State Begins Rebuttal as Reilly Rests Defense of Hauptmann

Carpenter's Alibi Testimony Target of Wilentz's Witnesses

Fisch's Sister Swears Furrier Died in Poverty After Filling Station Worker Tells of Seeing Man and Woman Near Flier's Estate.

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 8 (AP).—Assurance that Bruno Richard Hauptmann's defense would rest its case today gave Hunterdon County courthouse an atmosphere of eager expectancy as court convened at 10:01 a. m.

Charles de Bisschop, defense lumber expert from Waterbury, Conn., was called to the stand and Associate Defense Counsel Frederick A. Pope began the questioning.

De Bisschop was asked to illustrate his contention that there were more knots at the bottom of a pine tree than at the top.

The contractor produced a pine sapling about 12 feet tall, sewed in two pieces.

Attorney General David T. Wilentz objected against the demonstration because he said it was "obviously" impossible to cut a board the size of the ladder uprights or of the Hauptmann attic flooring.

Pope insisted the method of growing was the same. He explained that he sought to show the ladder rail was a "butt" board, taken from near the base of a tree, where knots appear more frequently.

The wood man was seeking to demonstrate that the Hauptmann attic board had fewer knots and could not be of the same piece with the ladder rail.

Supreme Court Justice Thomas W. Trenchard allowed the demonstration to "proceed briefly."

Pope then drew from the witness the statement that the reputed attic floor board which the State has matched with the ladder upright showed no shadow of the joists to which it was nailed. The marks should show, he stated. He likewise said it bore no marks of having been taken up by chisel, hammer or other implement.

Q. How many years have you been engaged in removing flooring?—A. Eight years.

Wilentz Takes Witness.

Pope turned the witness over to Wilentz.

Q. Isn't it the inference you want to make that the board had never been nailed to joists?—A. I said I saw no marks that it had been taken up.

Q. So far as you know it had been nailed down to joists?—A. It might have been.

His station, he said, was at the intersection of the Hopewell road with the Somerville-Princeton highway.

A group of persons in a green car stopped at his station several times prior to March 1, 1932, he said.

Q. How many times did this group come to your service station?—A. Three or four times.

Q. What was the last time you saw this car?—A. March 1, 1932, at 1:15 a. m.

Q. Now what was it that especially attracted your attention to the car?—A. A very poor ladder was tied on the back. It took me some time to figure out what it was.

Q. Describe the ladder to the jury.—A. Why describe it? I saw that ladder there.

The witness gestured to the kidnap ladder.

"The man said he was going to do a nursery job," he added.

"Man Wasn't Hauptmann."

A man and a woman were in the car, a model A Ford sedan, he said.

Q. Would you recognize the man?—A. Yes.

"Stand up, Mr. Hauptmann," Pope asked.

Hauptmann arose.

Q. Is that the man?—A. Absolutely not.

"He was 5 feet 10 or 11, about my height. I looked right into his eyes. He was thin-faced and his face was longer in proportion to its width than any face I ever saw.

"He weighed, I'd say, 130 to 140 pounds. His hair was dark."

Q. Have you ever seen any pictures of the man you saw since that time?—A. I think so.

"That's not the man," Bolmer decided, after a short study of the photograph.

Q. Would you be able to identify the lady?—A. Not for certain, I only saw that much of her face (indicating from chin up). She only looked out once.

Wilentz began cross-examination.

Q. Did you ever report the matter to the State police?—A. I did not.

The attorney general said, "that's all," and Pope was on his feet inquiring "why?" the witness had not reported it.

The gas station man said he did not recognize the pictures of the kidnap ladder as the same one he saw on the coupe.

Wasn't Sure of Ladder.

He explained that when he saw the ladder it was "nested" where pictures after the kidnaping showed it extended. "I didn't want to make a fool of myself reporting when I wasn't sure."

Wilentz sought to show that Bolmer had had plenty of opportunity to identify the ladder from newspaper photographs and a broadcast description.

Bolmer said he had never identified it because he had not been asked.

Mielke said he was an expert at matching grains in wood and had handled much North Carolina pine.

Pope then asked him if he were familiar with tools. When the witness nodded, the defense counsel asked him about planes.

Q. What usually causes a nick in the knife of a plane?—A. Grit on the board, sometimes a nail.

Pope produced the attic board.

Q. In your examination of this board and the rail in the ladder, were you able to say they were part and parcel of the same board?

Wilentz objected that the witness had had no experience in the identification of wood and should not be allowed to answer.

"He's not called as a wood technician," Pope explained, "but as a practical man in handling lumber."

Wilentz questioned him.

Q. How long did you examine these boards?—A. About five minutes.

In his work of matching cabinet wood, the witness told Wilentz he had never determined whether any two pieces had come from the same board.

Q. You are not attempting to tell now that you can say if two pieces of wood came from the same board? A. I could if a piece hadn't been cut out.

Q. If there was any separation you could not tell?—A. Positively not.

Claims Difference in Wood.

Q. If the boards had been cut and a piece taken out between them, you would not be able to tell if the two were once the same piece?—A. I could not and no one else could, I don't think.

Pope resumed questioning.

Q. If there was an inch and three-quarters missing, could you identify two pieces?—A. If the grain was matching.

Pope had the witness tell the jury he had handled 10,000,000 feet of North Carolina pine and was familiar with the various grades.

The mill man said the attic board was "No. 2, common" North Carolina pine, used in sheathing and similar uses.

Q. What part of the tree did it come from?—A. The upper part.

Q. Why do you say that?—A. Because of the spacing of the knots. They are wide apart. It's not butt pine.

Q. I show you the ladder rail number 16. What kind of wood is that?—A. North Carolina pine.

Q. How does it grade?—A. Number 2, common. Same grade.

Q. Is there any difference between this ladder rail 16 and this other board (the attic board)?

Defense Rests.

Wilentz took the witness and drew the admission that he noted the difference in the rail from the attic board because of the color. (The discoloration was produced by the finger-print solution).

A short recess was called and as soon as court reconvened Chief Defense Counsel Edward J. Reilly announced "defense rests."

Joseph J. Farber, a New York insurance man, was called immediately by the State in rebuttal.

He told of his automobile being in collision with that of Benjamin Heier, defense witness.

Heier had testified that he saw Isador Fisch leap from a wall of St. Raymond's Cemetery the night of April 2, 1932, at the time the ransom payment was made by Dr. John F. Condon.

Wilentz examined Farber.

Q. Now on the night of April 2, 1932, where were you?—A. I was on the premises at 1350 Sixth avenue, Manhattan. It is a delicatessen and lunch room.

Q. Did you have your car with you?—A. I did.

Q. Did you have an automobile accident that night?—A. I did, sir.

Q. With what?—A. With a car driven by one Benjamin Heier.

Farber said the collision occurred on the easterly side of Sixth avenue, between Fifty-fourth and Fifty-sixth streets, Manhattan.

The scene of the accident, he said, was eight and one half miles from St. Raymond's Cemetery in the Bronx.

Witness Cross-Examined.

Wilentz released Farber to Reilly for cross-examination and the defense attorney adduced that the witness had not measured the distance to the cemetery "with a tape measure."

Wilentz asked one question.

Q. Have you ever been convicted of a crime?—A. No.

"Mr. Arthur Larson," Wilentz called.

Last week when Elvert Carlstrom, defense alibi witness, testified, Larson was identified as the man who lived with Carlstrom in a new house at Dunellen at the time of the kidnaping.

Q. In 1932 what did you do?—A. I was a painter.

Q. Did you work in Dunellen at some time in that year?—A. Yes.

Q. In February and March, 1932, did you work there?—A. I did.

Q. Now, on the night of the kidnaping were you in Dunellen?—A. Yes.

Larson said he and Carlstrom occupied the new house while doing work there.

Q. Where was Carlstrom on the night of March 1, 1932?—A. In the house where I slept.

Q. What was the last time you saw Carlstrom that night?—A. Between 9:30 and 10 before I went to bed.

This was about the time Carlstrom said he saw Hauptmann in a Bronx restaurant.

Q. How many weeks did you work in Dunellen?—A. About two weeks.

Q. Did you or Carlstrom leave at any time during that period on a week-day night?—A. No.

"I went home week-ends," Larson said, and was turned over for cross-examination.

Unable to Give Date.

Q. What date did you go to work at Dunellen?—A. February.

Q. What day?—A. I don't know.

Larson said he and Carlstrom slept on the same mattress.

Q. Did you know March 1 was Carlstrom's birthday?—I don't know.

Q. Tell me what you were doing at 9 o'clock the night of February 29, 1932?—A. I think I was working.

He corrected his answer to say "I think I was sitting around."

Wilentz asked Larson one question.

Q. Have you ever been convicted of a crime?—A. No.

The owner of the Dunellen house, Oscar Christenson, told of building the house and keeping a record of the building expenses.

Q. Did you pay Carlstrom for March 1, 1932?—A. I did.

Q. Do you know whether Larson's wife was ill March 1, 1932?—A. Yes, sir.

Corpl. George J. Wilton, photographer of the State police, was called to identify pictures he made of the kidnap ladder March 8, 1932.

Two photographs, he said, showed a part of rail 16 of the ladder—that which the State contended came from Hauptmann's attic.

Wilentz offered the photos for identification.

Reilly began cross-examination, bringing out that they were not dated when taken and no other person was present.

Wilentz resumed his direct examination.

Q. Can you tell us what rail these pictures portray?—A. I found out later it was rail 16 (the attic board upright).

Denies Changing Ladder.

Reilly took the witness.

Q. Where did you take the photographs?—A. In my office, at Trenton, N. J.

Q. Did you change anything about the ladder before you took the picture?—A. No, sir; I did not.

Harold S. Betts, senior engineer of the United States Forestry Service, took the stand and testified he inspected the kidnap ladder May 23, 1932.

Wilentz asked if he had seen nail holes in rail 16 and made a report.

He said he had.

Q. How many nail holes in the rail? What kind?—A. Old-fashioned square cut nails. Four.

Wilentz released the witness to Reilly.

Q. You don't know when these nail holes were put in the ladder?—A. No.

Alfred Budreau was then called by the State in an attack on defense testimony that he and Isador Fisch visited the defense witness, Mrs. Bertha Hoff, in October, 1933.

He said he knew Mrs. Hoff, but he stated emphatically he never knew Isador Fisch.

Assistant Attorney General Robert Peacock examined him.

Q. Do you know Isador Fisch?—A. No.

Q. Did you go to Mrs. Hoff's house with Fisch and did he have a bundle?—A. No, sir.

Reilly asked if the witness had an epileptic fit in court yesterday.

"No," said Budreau.

Prompted by Peacock, he explained he had fainted because of the heat.

Reilly resumed.

Q. Who was on the farm with you when Mrs. Hoff visited?—A. A young fellow named Martinez from Philadelphia.

Bronx Realty Man Called.

Joseph Levenson, a Bronx real estate man, was called next. He said on the kidnap night he was at the house of a Mr. and Mrs. Henry Young for a business deal. Isador Fisch came in shortly after he arrived, he swore.

The State was out to destroy defense insinuations Fisch was at the kidnap scene in Hopewell and played a part in the crime.

Reilly began a detailed inquiry into Levenson's business activities and the length of his friendship with the Youngs.

The witness said he could not recall the weather on March 1, 1932.

Q. Where did you first see Fisch?—A. That night.

Q. Describe him?—A. Dark complected, about five four or five five.

Q. How many times did he cough in your presence?—A. I don't remember.

Q. How long was he in your presence?—A. About four hours.

Mrs. Erma Jung, resident of the Bronx, testified next to the visit of Levenson and the friendship with Fisch.

Q. Did you know Isador Fisch?—A. Yes.

Q. Did he call at your home the night of March 1, 1932?—A. Yes.

Q. Was there some business transaction at your house that night?—A. Yes.

Q. Was there a series of promissory notes drawn in your house that night?—A. Yes.

She said Fisch came to her house about 7:30 or 8 o'clock that night and stayed until 11:15 or 12 o'clock.

Reilly took the witness.

She said she knew Fisch about two and one-half years, but did not know many of his friends.

Mrs. Jung could not recall exact dates when other parties were held.

Reilly questioned the accuracy of the times Mrs. Jung gave for the arrival and departure of Fisch.

Q. That's guess work, isn't it?—A. Yes, I told my husband—

She was prevented from answering further.

Q. You didn't tell the police you knew Fisch?—A. No.

Q. You didn't tell any newspaper people?—A. No.

"Expenses Paid."

Mrs. Jung said the New York detectives brought her to the prosecution headquarters at Trenton Wednesday and that she understood her expenses were being paid.

Henry Jung, Mrs. Jung's husband, was the next witness. He corroborated his wife's testimony that Isador Fisch was at his home on the kidnap night of March 1, 1932.

Reilly took the witness for cross-examination.

Jung told Reilly of notes made to a man named "Bohm" through Fisch. Jung said Fisch, Bohm and Levenson were present when the notes were made.

Prof. George M. Priest, of Princeton University, was sworn as an interpreter for Miss Henna Fisch.

Miss Fisch was then sworn, the Princeton professor interpreting the oath to her.

Wilentz conducted the examination through the professor.

The witness said she lived in Leipzig and her brother was Isador Fisch.

Q. Did he come home in December, 1933?—A. Yes, he did.

She described the luggage, among it a suitcase about 3 feet long.

Q. Tell us, as best you can remember, what was in the suitcase?—A. Two suits, blue and gray. Six shirts, a woolen shawl, two neckties, two pairs of shoes and a pair of slippers.

Fisch's shaving outfit was in a separate kit, she recited through the interpreter.

Q. Do you remember what date it was when he arrived in Germany?—A. Saturday, the 16th or 17th of December.

Q. 1933?—A. Yes.

Q. How long did he remain at your house before he went to the hospital?—A. Until March 27.

Q. Did you observe each and everything in the baggage he brought with him or received by express?—A. Yes.

Q. After he left your house March 27 and went to the hospital, how long was he there?—A. He was in the hospital two days.

Q. Did he die after those two days?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know how much money he had in his possession at your house?—A. He had all together 1,500 marks.

Q. How much is that in American money?—A. About $500.

Miss Fisch said the State was paying all her expenses in this country, to which she came with her brother and the nurse who attended her brother during his last illness.

Q. When your brother arrived in Germany did he have anything else of value beyond what you have described?—A. No, not that I know.

Reilly then took the witness.

She described Fisch's physical condition, saying "he coughed hard enough to frighten me."

Q. You have no means of knowing whether he met anybody when he arrived at Hamburg?—A. No. He stayed all night at Hamburg before coming to Leipzig.

Q. Do you know whether your German lawyer tried to retain an American lawyer to adjust Fisch's estate?—A. Yes.

Q. Did he want a retainer of $100?—A. Yes.

Q. And did you and your family submit to the New York lawyer the following list of assets: Furs, pelts, stocks, a restaurant company, and a bundle that was hidden?—A. No, we did not.

The "hidden bundle" referred to was apparently the ransom money shoebox crammed with the $15,000 ransom money.

Q. Did you put in a claim for a $20,000 estate?—A. No, I did not know what Isador had in America.

Denies Reilly's Claim.

Reilly sought to bring out that the Fischs balked at paying the $100 retainer asked by the New York lawyer. Reilly said Lowenstein, the Leipzig attorney retained, decided to send Pincus, Isador's brother, to the United States to settle the estate.

"We came to no such decision," the witness said.

Q. Did Isador have you tear up papers he gave you and, while he sat beside you, watch you throw them into the fire?—A. There were two slips.

Q. Did he burn up any money?—A. No.

Isador was an American citizen, Miss Fisch went on, and she reported his death to the American Consul.

She explained she asked the consul how she should determine Fisch's American estate, but he made no investigation.

Nor did she appeal to the German foreign office, she added.

Reilly asked if she knew of any letters sent to the authorities in New York. She said she did not.

Reilly concluded and objected to Wilentz's query what the burned papers were.

The witness was allowed to tell that they were lists of gifts sent home the year before.

"They were lists of the money he sent home, ten dollars here and ten dollars there," she said.

Q. How much altogether?—A. A little over $1,000.

Q. For how long a period?—A. 5 or 6 years.

Q. Did you ever send Isador money over here?—A. Yes.

Q. In 1932?—A. Yes.

O'Ryan Takes Stand.

Maj. Gen. John F. O'Ryan, police commissioner of the City of New York in September, 1934, at the time of Hauptmann's arrest, was then sworn.

O'Ryan told Wilentz the money had been found before Hauptmann explained to him where it could be found.

Wilentz turned O'Ryan over to the defense.

Q. You are a lawyer?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you know what you were going to testify to?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you know it was irrelevant and incompetent?

Wilentz's objection was sustained.

"I move," said Reilly, addressing the court, "that the testimony of Maj. Gen. O'Ryan, United States Army, on reserve, be stricken."

"Motion denied," said Justice Trenchard.

Gen. O'Ryan was excused.

The State then called Mrs. Selma Kohl, of New York, the woman who was the landlady of Isador Fisch from April 23, 1932, until December 6, 1934, a few days before he sailed for Germany.

Q. What kind of a room did he have?—A. He had the smallest room I had.

Q. How much did he pay a week?—A. $3.50 a week.

Reilly inquired if the woman knew whether Fisch employed a Miss Helfert as a bookkeeper, and she said she was not aware of that.

The defense chief then asked if she knew the young lady and Mrs. Kohl replied indignantly that she "certainly" did. She said the girl had lived in her house for seven years, then she put her out and announced she wouldn't have her back again.

Mrs. Kohl enumerated Fisch, the Henkels and Miss Helfert among her roomers.

Q. Did he have any bundles?—A. No.

She was excused after she said Fisch had few belongings.

He told of bringing Lou Harding, Princeton street worker, to the Lindbergh estate the day after the kidnaping. He said Harding never mentioned seeing a car with two men and a ladder in it the day of the crime. Harding gave such testimony for the defense.

Court adjourned at 4:37 p. m. until tomorrow at 10 a. m.

Reilly Shows Client When Trial May End

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

As Bruno Hauptmann smilingly looks on, Edward J. Reilly, right, chief defense counsel, points to February 12, Tuesday, indicating he thinks that it will be the date trial will end.

Reilly Is Called 'Liar' by Ickes For Trial Slur

Secretary Denies Refusing Aid Permission to Help Hauptmann's Case.

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Ickes said yesterday Edward J. Reilly, counsel for Bruno Richard Hauptmann, was a "liar" for his intimation that Ickes had denied a public works official permission to appear as a defense witness in the Lindbergh trial.

Told by reporters that Reilly had intimated Ickes had refused Arch W. Loney permission to appear, Ickes said:

"I wired Reilly some time ago it was a matter between him and Loney."

While Ickes was talking with reporters, Loney, a PWA official, sent in a record of his communications with Reilly relative to his appearance as a lumber expert.

"You please tell Loney that's a personal matter," Ickes told his secretary.

Prepared to Testify.

Loney said he would go to Flemington if Reilly asked him again. His name was mentioned at the Hauptmann trial yesterday, Reilly asking a witness if Loney had not been refused permission to testify when his "secretary" found out he had rendered a report which would be favorable to the defense.

Loney said he received specific authorization yesterday from Maj. Philip Fleming, deputy public works administrator. He said he had not communicated with Reilly since then because he believed the defense had closed its case.

Denying that Secretary Ickes had refused him permission to testify, Loney said he was told several days ago to "use his own judgment."

He was asked to examine the kidnap ladder several months ago by Col. H. Norman Schwarzkoff, head of the New Jersey State police, he said.

He added he replied that it would be impossible to identify the lumber from planing marks.

Planing of knotty lumber, he said, requires that the knives be sharpened every other day. For that reason, he added, it would be impossible to determine from the condition of knives whether they were sharp or dull a year before.

Loney also challenged the prosecution's use of Hauptmann's carpenter tools to smooth the lumber. He said the tools had been in possession of police since Hauptmann's arrest, and there had been an opportunity for "monkey business."

He contended to reporters that the ladder was not made by a carpenter, and that the absence of wire reinforcements showed it was not intended to be pieced together.

He expressed belief the three sections were on the Lindbergh estate.

Reilly Says He'll Call Loney Immediately

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 8 (AP).—Edward J. Reilly, defense chief, informed tonight that Arch W. Loney, PWA official, had indicated a willingness to testify for the defense, said, "I'll get him on the long-distance wire and ask him to come here right away as our witness."

or $10 occasionally—but in his later years adversity set in and the home folk sent the money back to him.

There probably were only three people in this courtroom who could understand her testimony. One was the official interpreter. The other two were Bruno Richard Haupmann and his wife. The cords in Hauptmann's neck were taut today and he had a sullen expression on his face as he listened to Henna Fisch.

His guards say he has been despondent for the last two days, and this afternoon he leaned over frequently and had many nervous, whispered conversations with Edward J. Reilly, his chief counsel.

"You met your brother when he came back to Germany?" asked Attorney General David T. Wilentz.

"Yes."

She said his cheeks were sunken, his skin loose and in his cheeks two red spots, indicating the advanced stages of tuberculosis.

"He was so changed I hardly knew he was my brother," she said.

In his pocket he had $500. He owed $4,300 in America.

"When did your brother go to the hospital?"

Didn't Burn Money.

"Do you remember your brother giving you a package of papers and asking you to burn them?"

"Yes."

"Did he burn any money?"

"No, we burned only papers."

"Who unpacked his baggage?"

"The rest of us did. My brother was too weak."

"Tell us, what was in the bags."

"What were the papers you burned?"

"On the slips were lists of things he had shipped to us from America."

Reilly went through a brief cross-examination and Henna Fisch walked off the witness stand. She had taken only about 20 minutes to relate this story which she had come 3,000 miles to tell.

Earlier there came into court Mrs. Erna Jung and her husband, Henry, to dissolve some of the fog of suspicion that hangs over the grave in Leipzig, Germany. Once more there rang through the courtroom that question that has become threadbare from reiteration:

"Where were you on the night of March 1, 1932?"

Knew Isador Fisch.

Mrs. Jung said she was at her home in the Bronx.

"Did you know Isador Fisch?"

"Yes."

"Was he there at your house on the night of March 1, 1932?"

"Yes."

"What hours was Fisch there that evening?"

"From 7:30 or 8 until about a quarter of 12."

Henry Jung followed his wife on the stand. He, too, testified Fisch was there that night. And how did he remember? Because another guest had given him some promissory notes. He hauled them out of his pocket and showed the date—March 1, 1932. Joseph Levinson said he was in the Jung home. It was the first time he ever met Fisch.

Still the State of New Jersey fought on in Fisch's behalf. They called in Mrs. Selma Kohl, from whom Fisch once rented a room.

"Three dollars and fifty cents a week."

"What kind of room did he have?"

Bruno's Last Witness.

Hauptmann's last witness was Ewald Mielke, a planing mill proprietor, who testified that a board in the kidnaper's ladder bore no relation to a piece of wood in the floor of Hauptmann's attic. The State contends Hauptmann ran out of lumber when he was building the ladder and took a board from his attic to finish the job.

Then Reilly got to his feet and said:

Wilentz sprang into action, calling one rebuttal witness after another—keeping them on the stand for only about 10 minutes—trying to chip away Hauptmann's alibi.

Joseph J. Farber was the first one. He was concerned with the testimony of a defense witness named Benjamin Heier, who said he drove up to St. Raymond's Cemetery on the night of April 2, 1932, and parked his car by the wall. That was the night that Dr. John F. Condon paid $50,000 ransom to somebody on the other side of the wall. Heier said some time between 10:30 and 11:30 o'clock that night a man leaped over the cemetery wall, stood in the glare of the automobile headlight for six seconds and fled. The man, he said, was Isador Fisch.

Tells of Auto Crash.

Farber swore today that Heier was not within 8 miles of St. Raymond's Cemetery that night. Their automobiles collided on the evening of April 2, Farber said, down in midtown New York and Heier's car was in no shape to be driven to the cemetery later that night.

Arthur Larson was the next witness. He had some things to tell about where Elvert Carlstrom was on the night of the Lindbergh kidnaping. Carlstrom said he was in Fredericksen's Bakery in the Bronx and there saw Bruno Richard Hauptmann at about the time the crime was committed.

Larson testified that he and Carlstrom went to bed in Dunnellen, N. J., about 9:30 o'clock that night in a house owned by Oscar Christianson. They were working on the house, Larson said. He was painting it and Carlstrom was keeping the furnace going.

Then came H. S. Betts of the United States Forestry Service. He said he examined the kidnaper's ladder shortly after the crime and found four nail holes in the board that is alleged to have come from Hauptmann's attic. Dr. E. M. Hudson, a defense witness, said there was only one nail hole in the board.

Picture Shows 4 Nailholes.

Hauptmann's lawyers contended police tried to frame their client by taking the ladder to pieces after his arrest and building a board from his attic back into it. As proof they offered Hudson's testimony that a board that originally had only one nailhole in it now contained four. Wilentz produced a photograph of the board—taken at the time of the kidnaping. It showed there were four nailholes.

While Betts was being questioned, Reilly charged that Public Works officials in Washington had refused to let one of their employes named Loney come to Flemington "because his testimony would be favorable to our case." Justice Thomas W. Trenchard ordered the remark stricken out and cautioned Reilly against making such statements in court.

Some time before rebuttal testimony ends, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh is expected to return to the witness chair and swear that he had and still has complete confidence in Betty Gow, the late Ollie Whately, his butler, and Mrs. Whately. That is designed to counteract insinuations of the defense that some of the Lindbergh servants participated in the crime.

It is possible that Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow, grandmother of the Lindbergh baby, will testify tomorrow concerning Violet Sharpe, her housemaid, who committed suicide during the kidnaping investigation. The defense also tried to implicate Miss Sharpe in the crime.

Mass Army Hop From Anacostia To Panama Set

10 Bombers to Take Off Here on or About March 1, Officials State.

A mass flight of ten Army bombing planes from Bolling Field, Anacostia, D. C., to the Panama Canal Zone will be undertaken "on or about March 1," it was learned at the War Department yesterday. One stop will be made at Miami, Fla., for refueling. Capt. Harold D. Smith, Air Corps, will be in charge.

News of the projected long-distance flight, which involves a jump across the Caribbean Sea from Florida to Panama, came on the heels of word that Brig. Gen. Frank M. Andrews, new General Headquarters Air Force commander, had completed selection of the principal officers to serve on his staff.

Lieut. Cols. Henry H. Arnold, Henry C. Pratt and Gerald C. Brant will command the First, Second and Third Wings, respectively, of the new military aviation set-up. Arnold and Pratt will be temporary brigadier generals while Brant will become a temporary colonel.

To Fly Bombers.

Capt. Smith will lead 15 officers of the Thirty-first Bombardment Squadron and 16 enlisted men on the Panama flight. Martin bombers similar to the ones flown from Washington to Alaska last summer will be used.

The pilots chosen for the flight will leave their home station at Hamilton Field, San Rafael, Calif., tomorrow for Coronado, Calif., where the planes and other equipment will undergo final checking. Smith plans to lead his fliers to Washington the last week of this month, preparatory to the take-off from Bolling Field.

War Department officials explained that the purpose of the flight "is to provide routine air navigational and technical training for Air Force personnel." The Thirty-first Bombardment Squadron selected to make the trip is a unit of the first wing of the General Headquarters Air Force. The pilots selected for the Panama flight are: First Lieuts. John C. Moore, Edgar T. Noyes, James W. Spry, Charles B. Stone 3d, Donald J. Keirn, Donald R. Lyon. Second Lieuts. Lloyd R. Watnee, Richard C. Lindsay, Marvin L. Harding, Eugene H. Beebe, William Ball, Charles G. Williamson, William M. Garland and Roy Lynn. Maj. Fabian L. Pratt will serve as flight surgeon. No plans have been announced as yet for the return flight.

Gen. Andrews' Staff.

In addition to the selection of the wing commanders for the new Air Force, the names of officers chosen for duty on Gen. Andrews' staff were announced. Eventually the new Air Force commander will have about 23 officers as aids.

At present, however, only five of his principal assistants have been named. These are Maj. Hugh Knerr, chief of staff; Maj. Harvey S. Burwell, assistant chief of staff in charge of personnel; Maj. Follett Bradley, intelligence and public relations matters; Capt. George C. Kenney, in charge of operations and training; Maj. Joseph T. McNarney, in charge of supplies and war plans.

11-Day-Old Baby Can Not Be Fed; Death Is at Hand

Granite City, Ill., Feb. 8 (AP).—Robert, the 11-day-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Jenkins, of Nameoki, Ill., who has been without food since birth, was barely alive tonight in St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

With a stricture of the esophagus preventing passage of food to the stomach, the baby is doomed to death by starvation unless physicians find some means of artificial feeding.

They say only the infant's robust physique has enabled him to withstand lack of food until now. The baby was apparently normal at birth but became ill and an operation was performed to correct an intestinal deformity. The more serious deformity was discovered later.

President Names Keena Minister to Honduras

President Roosevelt yesterday sent to the Senate the name of Leo J. Keena, of Detroit, now consul general at Paris, to be Minister to Honduras.

A veteran of the foreign service, Mr. Keena has had much experience in South America. His appointment was to succeed Julius Lay, of Washington, who recently was named Minister to Uruguay.

The President also sent to Congress, with his approval, a request by the State Department for an appropriation to reimburse foreign officers for losses incurred by virtue of "catastrophies, war and other causes." The amount approximates $46,000.

'Little Nicky' Arrested In Florida Jewel Theft

New York, Feb. 8 (AP).—Nicholas Montone, 25, also known as "Nicholas Monte" and "Little Nicky," was held tonight as a fugitive wanted at Miami Beach, Fla., for a $272,000 jewelry robbery.

Miami Beach police sent word that a warrant would be forwarded charging Montone with participation in the hold-up of Mrs. James Bell, wife of a retired New York stock broker. Montone admitted taking part in the robbery, police said.

Realty Inquiry Fund Voted.

Further investigation of real estate bondholders' organizations was assured yesterday when the House voted $50,000 for expenses of a special committee of inquiry.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

Miami Beach, Feb. 8.—The day after the party tendered in honor of your representative at the Deauville Beach Club the telephone rang lustily.

It was a long-distance call and that, coupled with the fact that your representative was a bit sleepy, made it difficult for me to hear exactly what the man on the other end was saying. The closest version of his speech was:

"Friday night, we want you to run in a special handicap race at the dog track, and we will call it the Ed Sullivan handicap."

"Old boy," I said, with considerable dignity, "it is true that in my younger days I was a sprinter of no mean distinction and you undoubtedly have heard of my sprinting exploits. However, I have just come from a party where considerable brandy was distributed along with the gay repartee, and I assure you that I could not make a decent race against a greyhound, even if he happened to be a very old greyhound."

The man on the other end of the phone became excited and almost hysterical: "No, no, no," he stormed, "I don't want you to run in a dog race. We want you to be the guest of honor at the Hollywood Kennel Club. The race will be named for you, but all you have to do is to sit in a clubhouse box and pose for the photographers with the winning dog." That seemed reasonable enough, so just about the time you're reading this, I will have gone to the dogs.

Jack Pearl ran off with top honors at the Deauville party Tuesday night, although this is not to be misconstrued as a slight to Sophie Tucker, Vincent Lopez, Harry Richman, Cross and Dunn, Lee Shubert, Raquel Torres, Lou Holtz, Helen Morgan, Sailing Baruch and the 20 or 30 other noted Broadwayites who distinguished the evening.

Pearl, about to depart for the North, panicked the crowded ballroom with his story of the Irishman who left his modest home for the local Catholic church on a Saturday afternoon.

Pat, the Irishman, was walking peacefully down Main street when suddenly he flung a brick through a store window. The crash of the broken glass attracted a cop and he set out in pursuit. A few blocks further, Pat leaned down, picked up a cobblestone and shattered another store window. At this point, the cop grabbed him: "Pat McCarthy," said the astonished policeman, "I've known you and your family for years and I've liked you, but this is too much. Tell me now, why are you throwing bricks through windows?"

Pat explained his strange behavior: "I'm on my way to confession, Mike, and I'm short of material."

Mammoth Carved Bed Brings $80; Collector Gets Guitar for $15, and Piano Nets $32.50; Auction Leaves Gallery Room.

The sacking of Henderson Castle continued yesterday, with the mammoth carved bed of the late Senator from Missouri being knocked down for $80, and his son's golf clubs leaving the auction block for a consideration of $10.

Representative Clarence J. McLeod, of Michigan, was high bidder, at $32.50, for a piano. The guitar which belonged to John B. Henderson, jr., and which had lain unused in his room since he died several years ago, went for $15 to Jesse Jonathan Hawes, a collector, who also took down the golf sticks, a plaster dinosaur ($2.50), and a dozen dining chairs at $8 each.

Two bidders thrilled the crowd with their hot competition for Senator Henderson's bed and heroic-sized dresser. F. G. Smith, 1419 Columbia road, won the contest for the bed, with which a chiffonier was thrown in, while G. Fred Olbrecht, buying for the Jerome Bonaparte collection in Baltimore, bested him in the duel for the dresser, the bids rising from $5 to $120.

A group of three plaster busts—Beethoven, Venus and a chap who looked like Mercury—commanded only $4.50 for the lot. Bidding for rugs and carpets was brisk, but no one made an offer for an extra long and alluring divan with pink-silk covering.

"Ah yes, I suppose it's too big," sighed Auctioneer Ralph A. Weschler. "Now here's a mahogany dresser. Do I hear $5?"

The divan was the first of hundreds of items, ranging from wood baskets to champagne sets, to go bidless since the auction opened last Monday morning.

Also yesterday was the first time the sale has been conducted elsewhere than in the gallery room on the first floor of the celebrated mansion. The session opened there but, when the auctioneer came to the heavier pieces which could not be moved into the room with ease, bidding was transferred to the rooms where the various articles stood.

Everything is now disposed of except the noteworthy collection of paintings and statuary which, with the late Mary F. Henderson acting a guide, have known the compliments of Presidents and ambassadors. Among them are several oils by Mrs. Henderson herself. The art sale will begin Monday and continue until everything is gone.

Bus Concern Sues Rival For $300,000 Damages

Cleveland, Ohio, Feb 8 (AP).—The Great Eastern States, Inc., filed suit here today, asking $300,000 in punitive damages from the Blue Ridge Transportation Co. of Hagerstown, Md.

2 Pals Accused By Tri-Stater In Weiss Death

The accusations were made in a heavily guarded courtroom as six members of the band were held in connection with the abduction of the reputedly wealthy Philadelphian last fall and his subsequent slaying.

William Eckart, one of three of the gangsters held without bail on murder charges, testified Martin Farrell and Frank Wiley, the other two similarly held, with Walter Legenza, electrocuted co-leader of the mob, were the principals in the crime.

Other Called Accessories.

Named as accessories and given hearings at the same time were Mrs. Beatrice Wilkinson, mother of three; Joseph Coffey and Harry Seibel, all captured last December at the headquarters of the gang, which has headed by the killers, Legenza and Robert Mais.

Eckart asserted Wiley "told me himself" the shots that killed Weiss were fired by Legenza and Wiley.

"Willey told me that Walter Legenza fired the first shot into Weiss' head and then he fired the second. "Wiley told mehimself that he hated to kill Weiss, because he had never done anythink to him."

Eckart descriped the disposal of Weiss' body in Neshaminy Creek, just north of Philadelphia, on November 6 after he was shot.

Tied Weights to Body.

"After he was knocked off," Eckart testified, "I got the iron weights and wire which was used to tie up his body. I got them on Legenza's order.

"Wiler later told me they had a terrible time wrapping up the body, and once, just before they dumped him in the creek, they had to lay the body on the road and rewrap it.

"I threw one of the guns in the creek a few days afterward," Eckart continued, "but Legenza wouldn't give up his gun. He said he didn't care how many people he killed."

Eckart explained also the distribution of the $8,000 ransom money the gang got from Weiss' friends in a futule effort to obtain his release.

"The money was divided up between us," he said. Mais, Legenza, Wiley and Farrell got $1,500 apiece. I got $500. Coffey got $500 and Mrs. Wilkinson and Seibel each got $400.

Electric Train Trips to Start

Through electrified passenger train service between Washington and New York on a regular schedule will be launched tomorrow by the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The first train to make the trip will be "The Congressional," leaving Washington at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon and a half-hour later the southbound "Congressional" will leave New York, Washington-bound.

At present the railroad announces the two trains will continue to operate on the regular schedule of four and one-quarter hours. Later, step by step, this running time will be cut until the trains make the trip in three and one-half hours. The road also announces that other trains will be put on the electric basis as soon as equipment is delivered.

Today two of the 87 specially designed electric locomotives which have been ordered by the railroad will be exhibited at the Union Station.

Transients Sought For Davis Attack

Hamilton Innocent in AAA Employe's Abduction.

Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 8 (AP).—Abandoning the theory advanced by the victim that Raymond Hamilton, notorious Texas fugitive, was one of his captors on a wild automobile ride through Mississippi, Department of Justice agents tonight sought two transients in their investigation into the abduction of Edward Hewett Davis, 20, of Clarendon, Va., an AAA employe, and the theft of his car, which was recovered here today.

Fingerprints on the automobile, found abandoned here today, do not check with those of the Texas outlaw, police fingerprint experts said, and this information, together with reports from Gulfport, Miss., led agents to seek others than the Texas desperado for the theft of Davis' automobile.

Sweet Potato Stuffing
Spiced Cranberry Sauce

Order the pork cracked and dressed for a crown roast. Cover the exposed ends of bone with a cube of raw potato to prevent charring. Dust with salt and pepper, and place in a well oiled baking pan or roaster. Roast in a very hot oven (450) for 15 minutes to sear the meat; then reduce the heat to 375 degrees, and continue roasting, allowing 35 minutes to the pound. Baste every 15 minutes with the drippings in the pan. For the last half hour fill the center with sweet potato stuffing; dot with butter or margarine, and brown. Arrange on a heated platter, surround with spiced cranberry sauce on orange slices, and garnish with sprigs of cress or parsley.

Attack Is In Order.

Congressional spoilsmen have at last come out into the open with their outrageous demand that Government institutions be converted into happy hunting grounds for job-seeking constituents. For months their threat has been brewing under cover. Finding casual agitation ineffective, they have now decided to make a united drive upon those Federal agencies which place merit above politics in selecting their personnel.

In many respects the investigation ordered by the Democratic caucus is a salutary move. It places the patronage hunters in their true light. Even a biased investigation designed to concentrate pressure upon the Administration will bring to focus this vital issue of merit versus politics. The public will have an opportunity to see which members of Congress are willing to sabotage the recovery program to promote their own political interests.

Representative McFarlane's tirade against officials who have refused to accept his dictation on personnel matters leaves no doubt as to the soundness of their judgment. To compromise with politicians who are thoroughly actuated by the spoils philosophy would be a grave dereliction of duty for any administrative officer. If the Representative from Texas had a sense of humor, he would realize that repudiation of his influence deserves a mark of credit in any circles advocating planned economy.

Nevertheless, the patronage rebellion is a grave challenge to the White House. The President has not been able to placate irate Congressmen by promises that he will inquire into their complaints. Now that the fight has come out into the open the Administration will have to repulse the spoilsmen and strengthen the civil service system or risk a gradual undermining of its recovery program.

The attitude of the public is well illustrated by the enthusiastic indorsement of Senator Logan's bill to bring New Deal jobs under civil service regulations and by the failure of any witnesses to appear against the bill at the recent hearings. Even the spoilsmen who are openly demanding more patronage do not like to be counted as opponents of the merit system. But they will concentrate all their influence privately to sidetrack the bill.

The best defense against the patronage raiders will be a vigorous attack in which the Logan bill may well be used as a spearhead. If this measure is given the active support of the Administration, the spoilsmen's grip upon governmental agencies can undoubtedly be broken. But if their demands are granted, even in part, the country may as well prepare for progressive demoralization of the agencies to which the task of recovery has been assigned.

Playing Fields Of America.

Last night marked the beginning of a year's celebration of the twenty-fifth birthday of the Boy Scouts of America. President Roosevelt, addressing the members over the radio, described the organization as "the basis of good citizenship, the basis of good government and the basis of orderly progress in our country." There is no one to deny these words; the significance of 1,324,000 boys with a quarter of a million men volunteering their time and energy to lead them is not to be ignored in any estimate of the country's future.

In August, 30,000 boys are expected to gather in Washington for a 10-day jamboree. Then will be seen the knot-tying, the wig-wagging, the handicraft and the athletics of the Scouts. What may not at first be appreciated, however, is important: the New World counterpart of the "playing fields of Eton," on which England traditionally depends for its leadership and strength, will be presented. For the Boy Scouts and the principles they so actively exemplify have become a powerful influence among the youth who must meet the problems of the next generation.

Montgomery County Harvest.

Ploughing its furrow through the rich humus of a carefully spaded discontent, the Fusionist organization of Montgomery County was successful last fall in implanting a hybrid political organism in the field of county administration. To the confusion of those who expected some advance from this outcome, it now appears that the hybrid produces nothing but the most ordinary fruit—in fact, the early samples are definitely sub-standard.

Twelve of the 27 members of the county police force have been dismissed to date, with politically loyal but at best inexperienced candidates to fill their places. In addition, non-Fusion employes in the county treasurer's offices are obviously slated for dismissal, while a number of loyal Fusionists have been presented with contracts to checkmate any legislative action that might be taken at Annapolis to stop this political racketeering.

Such, then, is the harvest. Experts agree, however, that a young tree is often blighted by too greedy a reaping in its early years. A short life, even though a merry one, would seem to be the prediction of the political almanac for such intemperate horticulturists in the orchard of unashamed patronage.

The Automobile Report.

New and disconcerting light on labor conditions in the automobile industry is cast by the report of the Research and Planning Division of the NRA. As the product of a neutral, fact-finding agency the assertions of this report must be given careful attention, even though they are implicitly critical of the President's action in extending the automobile code with relatively minor changes.

Under our economic system, with its dominating profit incentive, pressure to cut down production costs without regard to the human element is inevitable. There are only two ways in which this pressure can be kept within reasonable bounds. One of these is active resistance by organized labor. The other is governmental leadership to secure safeguards which are socially desirable without being injurious to industry. The latter is obviously not merely the more civilized, but also the more efficient and economically constructive procedure.

After presumably careful study, the Research and Planning Division of the NRA finds evidence of an industrial unrest in the automobile industry of "a higher degree than is warranted by the depression." Many factors for this unpleasant situation are cited.

Peak-load operations, over-rapid technological changes, speed-up methods, irregular and seasonal employment are among the conditions cited as a consequence of the developing mass-production tendency. These are distinctly the sort of problems which the code system was designed to take into consideration, and to ameliorate so far as possible.

It is apparent that in the automobile code, as extended, little attention has been given to elimination of these causes of labor unrest. Something has been done to level the rate of production over a longer period, and a certain discouragement to overtime is afforded by payment of time and a half when the working week exceeds 48 hours. This last, however, is in the nature of a withdrawal from earlier code standards. Sentiment for the 30-hour week, which without question would be destructive of the aim sought by its advocates, will unfortunately not be lessened by the failure of this industry to regard as feasible the NRA suggestion that a 40-hour maximum would in its case be reasonable.

It is possible, though it would not seem probable, that in making its recommendations the NRA committee disregarded the economic ability of the automobile industry to accept substantial modifications in its present mode of operations. But it is not possible to argue that, in view of the pressure on the workers in this industry, some pressure on employers to stabilize their working conditions is improper. Fortunately, the extension of the code under the terms approved by the President is merely temporary, and in a few months further revisions can be made if they are proved to be both socially and economically desirable.

The real question at the moment is what information the President had which caused him so to disregard the recommendations of the NRA. If these last are thoroughly unpractical and undesirable, that should be stated. For there does not seem much point in having an extensive Research and Planning Division in the NRA if its findings are to be ignored as completely as has been the case in this instance.

Clarification Needed.

A suit has been instituted by the Department of Justice to prevent the contemplated merger of the Republic Steel Corporation and the Corrigan-McKinney Steel Co. and its subsidiaries. The Government alleges that the proposed merger will "substantially lessen" competition, although it is said that the combination would not sell much more than 16 per cent of the semifinished steel produced in the country and but 12 per cent of the merchant bars.

This case, together with the suit to forbid interlocking directorates in a number of steel companies, indicates that the Government may be about to embark upon a policy of strict interpretation and enforcement of the antitrust laws. At any rate, such proceedings increase the need of clarifying the status of these acts. For years governmental prosecuting agencies have played fast and loose with business men who have sought to discover what they might or might not lawfully do in concert without rendering themselves liable to punishment under the varying interpretations of the law. Now these statutes have become more than ordinarily vague because of the confusing provisions of the recovery act, which authorizes agreements that formerly would have been regarded as unlawful restraint of trade.

Without venturing to pass judgment upon the merits or disadvantages of the merger proposed in the present instance, it seems unfortunate for the Government to bring suit at this time without indicating how far it is prepared to go in approving reasonable agreements in restraint of trade and authorizing mergers that fall short of monopolistic control. There is certainly something decidedly anomalous about the institution of suits to prevent mergers of restricted scope, while official efforts are simultaneously being made to encourage industrial organization under codes that unquestionably involve extensive interference with trade among competitors.

It is quite feasible to protect consumers against unfair and monopolistic practices by invoking the "rule of reason" and interpreting laws and regulations in accordance with some consistent principle. So far, the Government has never succeeded in doing this, but has harassed and bewildered business men, large and small, by vacillating and inconsistent policies.

What Price Parity?

The AAA announces that the price level of 14 basic agricultural commodities has been raised practically to the prewar parity point. Adjustment payments made on seven of these commodities account for part of the increase, but the rise in prices has been due in very large part to the drought, as evidenced by the fact that advances were especially pronounced from May to September. During that time, the prices of "basic" commodities rose from 77 per cent of the prewar level to 101 per cent, and by the middle of January had advanced to 106 per cent, with the recent upturn in livestock prices.

On the whole, a very large measure of success has crowned the efforts of the AAA to attain the goal set for it. Nevertheless, it is evident that spokesmen for the AAA regard these achievements as fortuitous, precarious and in many respects perplexing.

In the first place, a devastating drought has created shortages not planned for and which are not likely to recur. Meantime, there has been no pronounced improvement of domestic business and no expansion of foreign markets that would warrant a belief that restrictions upon agricultural output can be discarded. Indeed, the economic adviser to the AAA, Louis H. Bean, expresses fear that "larger crops anticipated from the adjustment programs for 1935 will replenish existing shortages and will tend to lower this average price of the basic commodities unless there is support from a rising domestic demand in the form of increased industrial activity and factory pay rolls." Moreover, if farm income declines, Mr. Bean fears the effect upon trade and industry which has been aided by a rise in farm income during recent months.

In other words, price increases in farm products can not be expected to endure, unless a better permanent adjustment of supply to demand can be assured. Thus, Chester C. Davis, Administrator for the AAA, recently stated that the improved position of agriculture could not be maintained if control were abandoned. Our effort should be directed, he said, toward regaining our foreign markets, and making adjustments that will unlock the doors of foreign buyers. This is a surprising conclusion coming from the representative of a governmental agency that has been curtailing exports by its efforts to raise farm prices to prewar parity.

A conspicuous illustration of the loss of export markets is afforded by cotton. How are foreign markets for cotton to be recaptured if prices are maintained above the world market level? Shall production be limited to amounts that domestic mills can consume? If so, what alternative use can be made of cotton lands released from cultivation? And how will higher prices for cotton and other industrial raw materials fit into the program of Administrator Davis, who regards increased industrial production and lower prices for industrial goods as essential to a program of agricultural improvement?

Demands for a shorter working day, with consequent increases in labor costs, and price maintenance policies under codes also introduce conflicts of policy that the AAA can not possibly ignore. In view of the complications and inconsistencies of the recovery program, it is easy to understand why official spokesmen for the AAA worry about the future instead of congratulating themselves upon the success of emergency farm relief measures which have created innumerable new problems.

Philatelic Fury.

Nineteen months (the time element is important) after the President had suggested that his Postmaster General might well prepare legislation to turn postmasterships into civil service jobs, such legislation has been introduced into Congress. By itself this action, delayed as it is, may be important. It may spell the end of the Hill-speak-to-Charley-for-you technique of appointment. But in the light of another occurrence, also in the Postoffice Department, it has even broader implications.

Within the past month (considerably less than a month) Mr. Farley ran afoul of an apparently innocuous coterie of citizens known as stamp-collectors. In the confusion of a rapid-fire interchange of charges and explanations it is difficult to ascertain the precise facts, but it is generally agreed that imperforate sheets of new stamps were cordially autographed by the Postmaster General and mysteriously conveyed to the delighted hands of favored collectors.

The tumult of outraged philatelic cries which followed this generous action re-echoed throughout the land, even provoking talk of an investigation by a Congress presumably involved in the billion-dollar intricacies of work relief and social security programs. Mr. Farley agreed to make available similar irregularly imperforate sheets to any and all collectors. But he seems to have forgotten the importance of his signature. He has yet to learn that to assuage an outraged philatelist may be more disastrous than to ignore a President.

Earhart In Honolulu.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial captioned, "Honesty in Heroics," which appeared in your issue of January 14, has just come to my attention out here in the middle of the Pacific. Excellent as it is, there is one reference, doubtless based on erroneous or inadequate information, which gives a wholly wrong impression of the attitude here toward Amelia Earhart's flight, before the event.

In referring to her mother's confidence in the successful outcome of the adventure, and to her husband's apparent nervousness, you say: "Nor, to judge from earlier dispatches from Honolulu, was the maternal complacency shared by the islanders who besought the aviatrix not to attempt the flight." This statement is wide of the truth so far as the attitude of "the islanders" is concerned.

The only suggestion of opposition to the flight appeared in one daily, signed by an Australian reporter who is a close friend of Kingsford-Smith. His sensational article was a mass of outrageous and unwarranted statements, surmises and petty criticisms which he never would have had the audacity to make had the person contemplating the flight been a man. The general reaction, immediately manifest, in the press and otherwise, was an upsurge of resentment that anything so outrageous should have been allowed to mar the visit of our distinguished visitor.

So far from beseeching her not to make the flight, the general feeling was that if and when Amelia Earhart decided to undertake the venture she would successfully finish it. Everywhere, during her stay, there was manifest enthusiasm for her undertaking, and a feeling of pride that we were being made the sharers of her enterprise to the extent that she had chosen our cross-roads island for her starting point, and that feeling has grown. BENIGNA GREEN.

Coughlin's "Truth."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read with interest the letter in your issue of February 2 entitled "Credit to Coughlin," by Mr. Leland F. James, and heartily agree with him that we owe Father Coughlin a debt of gratitude for bringing up the "reserves" at the right time on the World Court issue. And I believe that the best way to repay him and which would be most acceptable to him is for every person who listens to him on Sunday afternoons to send him the financial assistance that he needs. You may not agree with everything he has to say, but you can not afford to let a man of his righteous standing and ability leave the air. Who is going to give the people the truth? We have learned more about our money situation through him than ever before.

It seems to me that all the issues, such as the World Court, prohibition, armament reduction, etc., are all hatched up by certain groups to keep Congress and the people off the real issues, such as our economic condition now. Why the World Court should come up at this time I do not know. You give the laborer a "full dinner pail" and you have very few strikes. So I believe if you give the peoples of the earth a full stomach you will have few wars and will not need a World Court.

I believe that the next election will really be between two parties, the conservatives and the liberals. The President will keep to the right when it comes to the parting of the ways. The article by Mr. Clapper in your same issue relative to G. O. P. coalition seems to bear this out.

On Legal Robbery.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Is it not true that men are prone to give too little attention to the problems of cause and effect in social and political life? We try to extirpate crime and to dispose of the criminals without giving much attention to the chief cause of crime, which, of course, is poverty—the inability to get honest employment.

If an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure it might be well to give more consideration to the remedy for poverty, which after scientific investigation of the matter was given to the world by Henry George. Society is today startled by the audacity displayed in ominous degree by those who would "share the wealth" of others. It is equivalent to a threat of the Huns and Vandals to despoil a civilization presumably based upon the sanctity of personal property. Here again we have been blind to the unintentional encouragement given to these movements by our lawmakers at Washington.

What shall be said of the robbery which now goes on through legal channels as a result of the monstrous system of taxation which continuously robs one class for the benefit of others? What shall be said of the income tax which takes from those who have for the benefit of those who have not?

Two per cent of the population, it is said, have already been robbed of more than $55,000,000,000 by means of attacks that were very properly deemed unconstitutional. Then the sixteenth amendment was passed in order to make it legally possible to deprive one class of citizens of their wealth without compensation. The same objection can be raised with still greater force against the protective tariff which robs the general public of billions of dollars, a large portion of which never reaches the Federal Treasury—a system of taxation which has no justification either in morals or expediency.

No Milking In TVA.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Challenging Mr. Recourt's misstatements in his February 2 letter to the Post:

The Wilson Dam at Muscle Shoals did not cost $60,000,000, but $47,000,000. Even this figure is excessive for present valuation because of war-time inflation of material and labor expenses. Besides, not all of that sum can be charged against power alone. There are locks for navigation, and flood-control factors.

TVA not only pays 5 per cent—eventually 7½ per cent—taxes to the States in which it generates power, but contracts it enters into with municipalities provide payment of "at rates equivalent to the taxes assessed against other (private) property of a similar nature."

The Government frank is considered in the TVA rate structure, which includes direct operating expenses and administrative overheads, interest, depreciation and all taxes.

The Government gets reduced freight rates over land-grant railroads only; at other times it pays the same charges as private shippers.

But more than all this, TVA and the municipalities handling its power do not pay excessive salaries to a few individuals, "milk" home neighborhoods of income for outside holding companies, and consider 6 per cent a reasonable return on a public utility investment.

WISNER M. THORNTON.

Concerning The Gold Clause.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The answer to Chief Justice Hughes' question as to whether Congress has the power to fix and regulate money value and as an incident thereto to forbid the enforcement of executory contracts, both public and private, except in accordance with the value so established, is reasonably certain to be yes, if the court follows the broad, general principles heretofore established by it in the interpretation of our Federal Constitution.

While the powers granted to the Federal Government do not cover the whole field of Government, yet within the powers granted, the Federal Government is just as sovereign as any other nation. Congress may, in its discretion, employ any appropriate means, not forbidden by the Constitution, to accomplish the object of the powers given to it by the Constitution. Thus, the power to declare war and to regulate interstate and foreign commerce, etc., by necessary implications gives the Federal Government in general the same broad powers enjoyed by other civilized nations. And, in the case of interstate commerce, it has been repeatedly held that rates duly established by governmental authority abrogate and supersede executory contracts inconsistent therewith.

The Constitution itself imposes no limitation upon the power of Congress to coin money and regulate the value thereof. It is a sovereign power which nations generally have regulated and controlled as they saw fit from earliest history.

The United States Supreme Court has ever been noted for its practical common sense and its appreciation of the importance of not denying to our Government in exercising the governmental functions conferred upon it the usual powers enjoyed by other civilized governments. It is scarcely conceivable, therefore, that the court will deny this Government a power that is freely exercised by every other Government and which has already been exercised by this Government in such manner to affect billions of dollars of property.

The Federal Government, no doubt, by various means within its power, can rob an adverse decision by the Supreme Court of much of its detrimental effect, but a narrow adverse decision as to the Federal power in the regulation of money value would be a great blow to the prestige of the United States Supreme Court and inconsistent with the broad principles heretofore established by the court itself.

The Post Impressionist

Jersey Lit'ry Justice.

Post Office, Saturday.

THIS winter there is no real race on the old Literary Track, no genuine contest for the famous Best Seller Cup. There is no real race because one horse took an irreducible lead at the start. In the first lap he hopelessly outdistanced all other entries. He is already heading down the home stretch with every competitor—if the other ponies may be called competitors—lost far behind.

This 1,000-to-1 shot is the Hauptmann case.

* * *

"Main Street" never did such a business, nor the well-nigh equally formidible "American Tragedy"—itself one of the direst tragedies in American literature. Go farther back in years, still lower in content: those best sellers of the days when the term "best seller" was invented, "David Harum," "Richard Carvel," "When Knighthood Was—" something or other—neither these nor their contemporaries attained records comparable with the record of the Flemington story. Not even Mrs. Stowe in the still earlier and longer-lived "Uncle Tom's Cabin" found an audience equaling (numerically) the audience that, every morning and evening, devours every installment of the Jersey serial.

Our forefathers have told us how crowds used to fill the bookstores and throng the postoffices immediately after the arrival of any British packet bearing a new "number" of the current Dickens novel—until enterprising American publishers began to pirate Boz. Yet what were those crowds to these which snatch at each edition of each newspaper containing the briefest fragment from the brains of 1935's master collaborators, Wilentz and Reilly?

* * *

If all that is being printed about the Hauptmann trial were put into book form—may Heaven forbit it!—the Library of Congress would have to grow another wing to its already seraphic body. Not only does the case drag out a length beyond the precedents of even most American causes celebres: apparently it can not elongate itself beyond the interest of its readers.

Concerning every detail of it, regarding every possible prediction or supposition, the newspapers publish more "material"—in the instances of certain newspapers, more fiction—than they have ever published about Harry Thaw and Huey Long combined. And, of course, there will be still more to come after the trial, when (whatever its issue) Bruno Hauptmann will write (at a price as large as a lawyer's fee) his "true story" in the terms of the tabloid.

* * *

As you may have gathered, the Post-Impressionist is not maintaining that all this popularity implies literary merit. There is one outstanding sob-sister, for instance, whose narrative style is as far removed therefrom as her prejudgments of the case are close to contempt of court.

But popularity is no accurate measure of worth in an art form. And most of what is being written at Flemington is at least as good as much of what was being published between covers before Justice Trenchard "called the case."

Our interest lies in the popularity, not in the writing. We have ventured to guess that the sales of detective novels have seriously declined since the trial began. And now we shall venture to guess why.

* * *

The interest in this affair owes much to the prominence of Col. Lindbergh. But Lincoln was prominent, too—and, even relatively, there was less interest in the capture of Booth than in der Fall Hauptmann.

The brutality of the Hopewell crime accounts for much. But Landreau was almost as brutal, and there was less interest shown by France in his trial than there is by America in this one.

Readers are always interested to some degree in an exciting murder story, especially if it be a true story developing from day to day. But there has been less interest in many a piece of fiction that was far more thrillingly constructed than the Flemington facts—and there has been less interest in real murder stories that were more exciting.

* * *

It seems to us that the chief interest in the present affair is, so to speak, seasonal. Un-Marxian though we are, we could almost account for it by a sort of economic interpretation of literature.

The mystery story became popular as a method of resting the tired business man (which means any weary worker) in those glad days when his fatigue resulted from earning a lot of money. The mystery story remains as a necessity to divert him in these sad days when his weariness results from losing a lot or not earning any more.

* * *

That solution strikes us as easy.

What we can't account for is the element of unreality in some of the story's characters. . . .

We used to have a splendid old uncle, who, doubting medical specialists, declared that a general practitioner would be good enough for him when he came to die. By the same token, if ever we get into trouble with the law, a country lawyer will look pretty good to us.

Father Knickerbocker May Subsidize Opera

By Ralph E. Renaud.
(Special Correspondence of The Post.)

New York City.

IT begins to look as though the Metropolitan Opera House, now in the act of one of its annual agonies for enough funds to keep "O Sole Mio" and body together, might creep into final refuge beneath the broad coat-tails of Father Knickerbocker. That will mean a profound change in the life and direction of the Metropolitan, the beginning of State-subsidized opera in America, and a number of other things.

Mayor LaGuardia, himself of the blood of the Renaissance, is a fiend for art in all its forms, including cookery and especially music. He has fathered the most elaborate plans for a municipal art program ever offered New York by a mayor, one which runs years ahead of his own administration. It includes a municipal art center for the graphic arts, music and the drama. The talk at present is that the Metropolitan Opera House, just as she stands, plush seats and all, may become the hub of this center.

Up to 1910 it never occurred to anyone that the Metropolitan Opera Company could, or was expected, to make money. But in that year the control passed from Andreas Dippel into the hands of Gatti-Cassazza and for a long time, especially during the reign of Caruso, plenty of money rolled in. In fact, it was possible to pile up a handsome reserve of $1,000,000, despite the always exorbitant demands of foreign prima donnas. But in 1929 the economic Big Wind came crashing down on the roof of the Temple of Music and the old place has never been the same since.

• • • •

SEASONS had to be cut and services dispensed with. Some of the stars became very vocal indeed, telling the world that they would never lower their art by so much as a dollar bill. Francs, marks and lira were kept dancing in the air with more energy than was formerly devoted to high C's. Gatti maintained his prices and productions pretty well and offered many novelties, such as the rather tame American operas, to stimulate interest. But the boxholders of the diamond horseshoes were getting poorer and even started taking their yachts out of commission and economizing on red caviar instead of black. This put the opera company from the black into the red and for several years now the directors have been at their wits' end—if any.

But a little old Italian company from not much of anywhere stepped into the Hippodrome one summer and began giving opera at popular prices. They filled that huge place, hung out the S. R. O. sign and minted much fine gold. They have been at it more or less ever since with unflagging success. It is they, apparently, who have hewed out a rough draft of the coming municipal art center.

The Metropolitan Opera House has a double operating system, the Metropolitan Realty Co., now headed by the energetic Robert Brewster, and the Metropolitan Opera Association, Cornelius Bliss, chairman, which runs the destinies of the singing company, subject, of course, to the direction of Gatti-Cassazza, whose contract runs out in May and who has announced that he will not renew it. Messrs. Brewster and Bliss have recently held a series of palavers with Mayor LaGuardia and it is rumored that their minds are meeting.

THE Metropolitan Realty Co. pays the city every year something like $150,000 in taxes. They are handicapped in doing this by the shortness of the opera season, which never runs more than 20 weeks and seldom more than 14. If the city had an interest in the opera the taxes would certainly be remitted and the season extended. The Metropolitan this year has already spent $300,000 in renovating the old house and is prepared to spend another $300,000 installing a cooling plant. That would make it possible to keep the theater open all summer. In this way the famous company might be rescued from its difficulties, with the public enjoying at the same time a full year of music offered by the world's finest singers and musicians.

One of the resuscitating ideas suggested has been that of summer promenade concerts. The present seats would be removed and the space they occupy floored over. Tables would be set out and patrons would be served with cooling drinks as they listened to the programs of the Metropolitan Orchestra. This plan has worked successfully, both in Boston and London. Another suggestion is the production of huge spectacles, such as "The Miracle" which filled the big Century Theater.

Nobody wants to see the Metropolitan go under. Conferences are coming along pleasantly and it is a reasonably safe bet that Calliope, if she happens to be the Muse of Music, will continue to preside at Forty-first and Broadway, though she may be a changed woman. She may be getting ready to welcome Max Reinhardt in place of Gatti. He feels equally at home in drama, spectacle or opera.

• • • •

IT was the wolf at his door which drove Mayor LaGuardia to his present broad plans for civic art. It was the wolf at his door which made him thoroughly mad at his municipal art commission, causing him to ditch them completely and substitute an art committee of 100, headed by Mrs. Henry Breckenridge.

In 1928 Prince Potenziani, former governor of Rome, presented New York with a replica of the famous bronze, now in the Capitoline Museum at Rome, of the she-wolf suckling Romulous and Remus. Jimmy Walker, who didn't profess to know Romulous and Remus from Amos 'n' Andy, didn't take much interest, but the art commission did and had the statue raised just to the left of the City Hall steps.

Every day Mayor LaGuardia saw and admired the Roman group as he entered his office. Then one day it was missing. The Mayor located it finally among the janitors' mops under the City Hall stairway and learned that the art commission had ordered it there. Being himself a member of the commission and knowing nothing of any such orders, he got decidedly warm under his large-size collar, holding it an unkind gesture toward a friendly government. Flouting the authority of the commission he had Romulous and Remus and the wolf transported to the Museum of the City of New York, where they now are.

• • • •

A WHOLE series of these episodes pried the Mayor and his art commission apart. They refused to change their hours to suit his, even after he had pointed out that he was a member of 59 boards and had to cut his time rather fine. When he sought to have some of the historic portraits at City Hall cleaned the art commission intervened and curtly refused permission until they had time to consider the matter. That's about the time the Mayor began to talk about the "pomposity" of the commission.

On another occasion the Mayor asked the commission to take the initiative in the city's art projects. They declined.

"Why, Mr. Mayor," the spokesman of the commission is reported to have said, "we haven't time to take the initiative. We have little time to do anything more than to exercise our veto power on unworthy projects."

"How many projects has the commission approved since it was organized in 1898?" asked the Mayor.

"Ten to twenty thousand," the spokesman replied.

"Well," advised LaGuardia, "I wouldn't talk about them if I were you."

The breach is too broad to be healed now and the commission finds itself with a nice title and nothing to do. It is curious to consider how this quarrel leads to the door of the Metropolitan Opera House, with Mayor LaGuardia in the role of Perseus rescuing Andromeda from her financial dragon.

Doris Doe to Sing With the Symphony

Opera Star Replaces Miss Breslau, Who Is Ill.

Doris Doe, contralto of the Metropolitan Opera, will appear as soloist with the National Symphony Orchestra tomorrow afternoon in Constitution Hall, replacing Sophia Braslau, who is ill. Miss Doe at the Metropolitan has sung such roles as Brangaene in "Tristan und Isolde," and Amneris in "Aida," and she has appeared with many of the principal orchestras.

Miss Doe's numbers at tomorrow's concert will be Erda's scene from "Das Rheingold" and Wagner's "Treaume," with orchestral accompaniment. She also will sing, with Edwin McArthur at the piano, a group of songs by Brahms, Richard Strauss, Sibelius and Rangstrom.

The concert will open with Handel's "Ombra mai fu" from "Xerxes," commonly known as the "Largo." The principal work on the program is the second symphony of Sibelius, which is being played for the second time this season in response to many requests. The remaining item is a suite of five selections from Delibes' light opera, "Le Roi l'a dit."

Roanoke Company Submits Low Bid

Winchester Postoffice Work Sought for $40,500.

The Wood Construction Co., of Roanoke, Va., was the low bidder yesterday on extending and remodeling the Winchester, Va., postoffice with an offer of $40,500, according to the Associated Press.

On a proposal for the Government to permit the Postoffice Department to continue operations in the present building at Winchester during the period of reconstruction, the Smythe Co., of Washington, D. C., was low bidder, offering to perform the work on the occupied building for $41,046. The Wood company's bid for remodeling the building while occupied was $42,500.

Smythe & Co. was second in the bidding with an offer of $40,546.

With Carlisle Bargeron

The Works Bill.

THERE are many amazing things about the pending works bill and not the least of them is the fluctuating fortune of Mr. Ickes.

BARGERON.

It goes back and forth like a pendulum. A few weeks ago when the bill was before the House, it seemed the pendulum had swung so far out as to swing him entirely out.

Indeed, the House members, being careful guardians of the public weal and not understanding the bill but feeling quite sure of their enmity toward Mr. Ickes, demanded and were given assurances he would not administer it. About the implications of the measure the members had not the slightest idea and cared less, but they did know that Mr. Ickes had not been any too friendly with them and that their patronage and pork under him seemed jeopardized. It looked pretty bad for the gentleman.

• • • •

Now, over in the Senate they know no more about the bill than the House did, but they have come to feel very kindly toward Mr. Ickes. If the approximately $5,000,000,000 is authorized, they want him to have a part in the spending of it. In fact, they intend to insist upon it.

It's strange that he should fare so differently at the opposite ends of the Capitol—that on one side the attitude should be against passing the bill if he is to have anything to do with it, and at the other the inclination is not to pass it unless he does. Close investigation reveals he didn't change in his passage from the House to the Senate He is the same Mr. Ickes with the bill on the Senate side as he was when the bill was on the House side.

• • • •

One explanation is that he won the Senators' regard because he was the only one who appeared before the Senate Appropriations Committee who could tell it anything about the bill. Examination of the printed hearings, however, reveal that he didn't tell the committee anything.

In fact, he said he had been left out in the preparation of the bill, that he didn't expect to have anything to do with the administration of it. He did know, though, how about a billion dollars could be spent; how he, himself, could spend that much. That the President intended to spend a billion this way he didn't know.

The Senators had come to such a low point in their quest for information as to how the money was to be spent, however, that a man who gave them a hypothetical expenditure gained their admiration. Relatively speaking, he gave information.

• • • •

The Senators are apparently of the opinion that inasmuch as he is the only one who has the vaguest idea about how the money can be spent he is an integral part of the plan; that if he has to do with it, a billion will be spent while if he has nothing to do with it nothing will be spent. As the situation presents itself to them an expenditure of a billion by Mr. Ickes is the only definite thing they can find out about the bill.

In the meantime, one story going the rounds is that Mr. Roosevelt really has nothing definite in mind but that he wants the five billions to head off the inflationists and the 30-hour week bill. Authorizing him to spend five billions in a year, even if he can't do it, should be about as grand as anything the radicals can suggest. This explanation isn't official, of course, but it is about as reliable as anything that can be found out about the bill.

If the study of the measure can't develop any better understanding it might be wise to revise it to provide simply that Mr. Ickes shall have one billion to spend and Mr. Roosevelt four billions to ward off the inflationists and proponents of the 30-hour bill. This would preclude his going into the gasoline filling station business as suggested by Admiral Peoples or from conducting a war on an industry for which he has an aversion such as the power industry. Such a draft of the bill would at least minimize its danger.

Forest Warden Resigns.

Centreville, Md., Feb. 8 (AP).—After having served more than 20 years as State forest warden here, William Voshell has resigned because of ill-health. He was recently elected a life member of the Maryland Forestry Association.

How to Comprehend the U. S. Financial Situation.

In response to many requests, this department is glad to clarify the Government's financing program and explain the situation in a way that can be understood, or nearly so. Expenditures for the coming year as contemplated are $3,000,000,000,000,000.02. Those uncontemplated are given as $1,000,000,000,000,000.10. Accidental, incredible and incidental expenditures will reach $50,000,000,000.00½. Probable expenditures under the heading of loose ends, mistakes, errors in bookkeeping and misunderstood signals should approximate around $3,500,000,000,000.

• • • •

This leaves the country at the close of business yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock with a total debt of approximately eleven and a half yards of ciphers, six commas and the usual decimal point, all preceded by the orthodox dollar sign. This fills the bases with nobody out.

• • • •

A careful study of the figures shows, however, that there is no cause for alarm, as the Government still has a large surplus of ciphers in all sizes. In analyzing the situation today one must realize how the financing department of the Government has grown. Ten years ago the Treasury Department kept its books in one large room. Today it has 36 floors devoted to storage alone in a plant 55 stories high in which 40,000 lightning calculators are employed night and day figuring or groping.

• • • •

Of these men, 10,000 are in the cipher department. They are responsible for the steady supply of ciphers. It is their duty to weed out the worn or defective ciphers and see that only good ones are sent to the assembly plant. Other workers are divided as follows:

Cipher polishers and fitters	10,000
Decimal point makers and cutters	15,000
Decimal point hurlers	5,000
Comma throwers	2,000
Dollar sign designers and varnishers	3,000
Minus sign custodians	4,996
Plus sign custodians	4

(Note—There is nothing for the plus sign custodians to do, but they are retained for sentimental reasons.)

• • • •

All these men work under the direction of the present Congress, the first Congress in history to operate without eyebrows. (Note—The eyebrows were shaved off all Congressmen at the opening of the present session in order to eliminate expressions of amazement, surprise or extreme concern at the mention of large sums of money.)

• • • •

The following is a table showing appropriations asked for the next fiscal year and the purposes for which the money will be used:

(Note—On second thought, we will omit the table, as it would only make the matter more complicated.)

• • • •

To sum up: This leaves us with a debt of about $600,000,000,000.04, or possibly it should read the other way around.

• • • •

This leaves us with 1,456,786 barrels of ciphers, 11,879,456 cases of extreme indignation and Mickey Mouse. Result: Brooklyn 11, Philadelphia 4.

Optimistic Note.

Times must be a little better. Here and there you find a man complaining again because the steak is tough.

If there is a second Hauptmann trial it may have to be staged in the Rose Bowl.

Applications Filed By 2 Motor Lines

Seek Western Maryland Freight Routes.

Baltimore, Feb. 8 (AP).—Western Maryland will receive two new motor freight services if applications made today to the public service commission are approved.

One application is by Horn's Motor Express, Inc., which seeks authority to operate from Hagerstown to Greencastle and Waynesboro, Pa., then to Emmittsburg, Taneytown, Westminster and Baltimore.

J. Norman Geipe, Inc., seeks authority to operate a freight line from Cumberland to Frostburg, Midland, Lonaconing and Westernport. Hearings were set for February 18 and 19 by the commission.

Annual 'Show-Off' Presented by Faculty

Winchester, Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Three plays were presented here tonight by members of the faculty of Handley High School in their annual "faculty show-off," for which rehearsals have been in progress several weeks.

In the first play, a farce, Miss Opal Robinson, R. L. Stickel, James B. Yates and Mrs. Gertrude Peery were cast. The second play, entitled "Drums of Oude," was written by Garland Quarles, superintendent of schools. In the cast were Mr. Quarles, John Ramey, Mrs. Warren Eddy, Lawrence Fries, Robert Sutton, E. P. Browning and J. W. Boltnott. The third play, entitled "The Wedding," was staged by Johnnie Parsons, Russell Joyce, Miss Ruth Beery, Miss Electa Stombook, H. I. McIlwee, Lola C. Johnson and Otis Sargent.

Wild Geese Throng Shore.

Easton, Md., Feb. 8 (AP).—Hundreds of people have been attracted to the Bar Neck section to watch more than 1,1000 wild geese feeding along the shore each day. Nick Harrison, who has been feeding them, said the fowl are rather tame. He uses several barrels of grain daily.

Howard And Charm

By Wm. Lyon Phelps

CHARM is a quality we associate more often with women than with men; the best discussion of it in stage dialogue is in Barrie's great play, "What Every Woman Knows," where the men of the family are discussing the character of their sister Maggie, and speculating, not too hopefully, of her matrimonial prospects. To every person who is conscious of a deficiency in this asset I recommend reading the first act of Barrie's play. It is not necessary to recommend reading the second act, for every one who reads anything by Barrie finds himself forced to continue. Those who have charm do not have to read about it to analyze it.

• • • •

That it is possible to have a superfluity of charm without losing any of the more masculine virtues, is proved by the case of the British actor, Leslie Howard. On the stage he is the personification of grace and refinement, but there have been other actors who possess these qualities, with whom they often seem as external as an overcoat. With Mr. Howard they are not a mask or a garment, they are an organic part of his nature. One would guess this if one saw him only in various roles, but the moment one meets him in mufti, one is certain of it.

Some years ago that beautiful play "Berkeley Square" had its first performance in America at the Shubert Theater in New Haven; the company was naturally a little nervous, as no man can ever predict what a first night will bring forth. About 6 o'clock I went over to the theater and told Leslie Howard to forget that in a few hours he would be playing; that he had better come with me to Mory's (the college tavern), have an informal dinner with a group of undergraduates, and forget everything else.

• • • •

He seemed to enjoy himself immensely at this dinner and the students became so devoted to him that he was immediately elected an honorary member of the Pundits, the name by which this group of students was known. Then we all went over to the theater; "Berkeley Square" was a shining success and ran out the whole season in New York.

That play seemed made for him; the leading character had just the elusiveness that seems to belong to Leslie Howard; for he never seems wholly of this world, never of common clay.

This same elusiveness, and this time of a more material kind, was the cause of his immense success in John Galesworthy's play "Escape." I should not care to see anyone else in that role.

And now, in Mr. Sherwood's "The Petrified Forest," he contrives to maintain intact that same elusiveness in an impersonation where perhaps another actor might not betray it at all.

I am convinced that the source of Leslie Howard's charm, so far as it can be analyzed at all, lies in the fact that he is naturally affectionate. He really loves human beings.

Restriction Is Put On Duck Hunters

Gun Magazines Limited to Three-Shell Capacity.

Duck hunters' gun magazines were limited to three-shell capacities by an amendment to Federal water fowl regulations approved by President Roosevelt yesterday.

In announcing the regulation the Bureau of Biological Survey of the Department of Agriculture declared that the limitation, long advocated by sportsmen and conservationists, was "made urgent by the alarming decrease in the number of ducks."

The regulation becomes effective immediately and applies only to automatic-loading or hand-operated repeating shotguns used in hunting ducks, geese and other migratory game birds. Gun magazines must either be stopped with plugs that can not be removed in the field or cut down to the three-shell limit, the bureau said.

League Entrance Leads In Pool of Colleges

The vote stood 50.17 per cent for the United States entering the League of Nations and 48.83 per cent opposed; 83.60 per cent voted they would bear arms in case an enemy invaded the United States and 16.40 per cent voted negatively; 82.17 per cent voted not to bear arms if the United States invaded another country; 90.78 per cent advocated Government control of armament and munitions industries.

"The Great Emancipator"

It was on his birthday eve, 74 years ago this week, that a gaunt, solemn country lawyer left his home town in Illinois for Washington, D. C. The troubled star of Abraham Lincoln was that of a man destined to rise from obscurity to the greatest elective office in the world, to find the terrible weight of a civil war on his shoulders . . . to die a martyr at the hands of an assassin.

In this Sunday's Post, Joseph Tausek portrays a new side of Abraham Lincoln—a human, touching, little-known side of "The Great Emancipator." It is not the story of Lincoln, the President—but the story of Lincoln, the man. Be sure to read this intensely interesting article in the

Britain Offers Idle Constructive Relief

Government Devises Schemes To Convert Leisure Into Gain For Unemployed.

By Frank Darvall.
(Special Correspondence of The Post.)

London.

IN the reorganization of the British insurance, relief and poor law systems sight has not been lost of the necessity of providing work to supersede bare maintenance. The present government has, however, no expectation that unemployment will soon sink beneath its present tragically high level. It has, moreover, no belief in a policy of creating employment by state expenditure on public works. It is because it expects that the unemployed as well as the poor will be problems for a long time to come, that it has felt the creation of a coherent, permanent, financially sound national system of dealing with them to be so important.

It does, however, in certain special directions see an opportunity of doing more than relieve the needy. It has provided in its recent legislation for the opening of a greater number of juvenile instruction centers, and it has empowered the unemployment assistance board to make attendance at such centers a condition for the receipt of relief by young persons. It is encouraging those efforts which have long been made by especially enterprising authorities to take youths from overcrowded, depressed trades and regions and, taking actual advantage of their periods of enforced idleness, to train them, in these centers, or at special camps, for new openings in more promising directions.

It has been studying the reports of the four commissioners it appointed last year to inquire into the condition of the particularly depressed areas, South Wales, southwestern Scotland, Cumberland and Durham, and the Tyneside, each of which has a huge, and according to present indications permanent, labor surplus.

• • • •

IT has appointed two special areas commissioners, one for England and Wales, and the other for Scotland, to carry out some of the suggestions made in these reports, and to try to bring new trades to these distressed regions. It has made available at once a special grant of $10,000,000 as a first installment of the much larger sums it is apparently willing to spend to create new industries, and new avenues of employment, in these now so largely derelict industrial districts.

In this connection it has apparently much hope of settlement on the land, believing that its agricultural policy will create profits, and therefore openings, for a much larger farming population in Britain. It also looks with favor on what Americans now call "subsistence farming," which is not normally a very hopeful proposition for unemployed industrial workers, but which may be one to desperate men in difficult times.

Stirred into action also by the now evident fact that recovery in general is falling sufficiently to reach those trades and regions in which the core of British unemployment has always been since the war, it has even been hinting at more ambitious measures still.

Its great housing and slum clearance campaigns, though undertaken primarily for other purposes, are also thought worth pressing forward as a means of stimulating recovery and reducing unemployment.

• • • •

ITS financial policy is very largely directed to securing cheap money rates and an atmosphere of confidence in which private enterprise will take advantage of them.

It is lifting its ban on new capital issues, not only because it has for the moment completed its own huge conversion operations, or because the British budgetary and foreign trade positions are sounder, but also because it feels the time has definitely come for extensive national reequipment.

It is even turning a polite, if skeptical, ear to Mr. Lloyd George's revived program of reemployment and recovery through state-aided and financed national development.

On the whole, however, it still believes mainly in private enterprise rather than the state as the active partner in reemployment.

Pending that reemployment it is lending its sympathy, and to a very limited extent its financial support, to what has now become an extensive national effort to prevent idleness becoming a source of national demoralization.

A number of years ago various private bodies, particularly the Society of Friends, began to develop occupational centers for the use of the unemployed. These were places where the latter could learn various arts and crafts. Tools and material were provided so that unemployed men and women could mend or make clothes, furniture, toys, etc. In this way not merely were idle people given something with which to occupy their hands and hours, but they were enabled positively to provide for their own material needs, making for themselves things they could not afford to buy.

• • • •

THESE centers were paralleled by allotment schemes, pieces of waste land being acquired and allotted to various unemployed men and families so that they could use their ample leisure in providing a few of the vegetables, fruits and flowers they had been forced to cut out of their budgets since losing their jobs.

More ambitious than these, and more altruistic, were schemes for laying out playing fields and public gardens and building clubhouses and swimming pools, and for providing by labor of the unemployed other public amenities which poor districts could never have afforded heretofore.

All such schemes, and others providing merely educational or recreational opportunities for the unemployed, have been recognized to be of great value. They help to prevent jobless men and women becoming unemployable, because they are unused to work, or because they have become generally demoralized.

SINCE 21 per cent or more than half a million of the persons in receipt of relief last year had been unemployed for more than 12 months continuously, and since many of these were young people who had never been employed long enough to get the habit of regular work, the importance of activities which maintain their competence, health and morale can not be overestimated. It is not surprising therefore that the Government while anxious that such schemes shall continue to be largely voluntary in character, has openly thrown its weight behind them.

For Britain, though she has reduced her volume of unemployment from 3,000,000 in 1932 to just over 2,000,000 in 1935, is sadly reconciled to having for a long time at least that million of unemployed which has been her minimum since the war. And she is therefore, though striving for trade revival and reemployment in every way, gradually developing permanent methods for minimizing the human suffering resulting from the unemployment of a tenth of her employable population.

Wheeling Reports A Boom in Steel

February Employment Is Highest Since 1929.

Wheeling, W. Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Boom conditions in the steel industry of the Wheeling area are shown in a report just issued by the Wheeling Steel Corporation.

Exceeding any month in the last ten years and topping the high mark of April, 1929, the total number of workers on the pay rolls of its various plants reached 18,529 men the first week of February, the report shows.

The plants included are those in Wheeling, Benwood, Beech Bottom, Martins Ferry, Ohio; Steubenville, Ohio, and Portsmouth, Ohio, all of which are operating at or near capacity at present.

Cumberland Kiwanis Honors Late Members

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—The Cumberland Kiwanis Club yesterday paid tribute to two members who died recently—A. Taylor Smith, attorney and former president of the club, and Alexander Adams, the oldest member, who was a retired coal operator.

Finley C. Hendrickson, of the Allegany County Bar, and Edwin T. Dixon, eulogized Mr. Adams, while former State Senator William A. Gunter memorialized Mr. Smith, who was attorney for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and the Consolidation Coal Co. here for a number of years. Next Monday Mr. Smith will be eulogized by the Allegany County Bar Association.

'Tent City' Sought For 100 Families

'Wholesale Evictions' in Arkansas Denied.

Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 8 (AP).—Gubernatorial aid in establishing a "tented city" in Poinsett County to house 100 families was sought today by Ward H. Rodgers, storm center of the east Arkansas tenant and share-cropper disturbance.

Rodgers said he would appeal to Gov. J. M. Fultrell of Arkansas to assist in caring for the 100 families he claims have been evicted from plantations.

The proposal was pronounced "absurd" by Fred H. Stafford, deputy prosecuting attorney for Poinsett County. The Rev. J. Abner Sage, a Methodist minister at Marked Tree, describing Rodgers as "a young fanatic," said there was no evidence of any "wholesale evictions" in Poinsett County. Gov. Futrell had no comment.

Ihlder Urges Play In Gordon Alley

Logan School Recreation Ground Suggested.

The use of Gordon alley as a playground for the Logan School was suggested yesterday to the Board of Education by John Ihlder, executive director of the District Alley Clearance Authority.

The alley, located in the square bounded by F, G, Second and Third streets northeast, could be obtained by the alley authority and reconveyed to the school board, Ihlder suggested. When an appropriation has been secured from Congress, the Board of Education could repay the alley cost, he said.

An addition to the school will occupy most of the present playground, and the alley site was suggested as an extension to it.

Christian Scientist Subject Is 'Spirit'

Golden Text Taken From II Corinthians, 3:17.

"Spirit" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The golden text is from II Corinthians, 3:17: "Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty." Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit." (I Corinthians, 12:4.)

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science Textbook, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "A knowledge of the science of being develops the latent abilities and possibilities of man, it extends the atmosphere of thought, giving mortals access to broader and higher realms."

Student Union Is in Session At Lexington

Missionary Conference Speakers Include Four Leaders.

Lexington, Va., Feb. 8 (AP).—Four widely known speakers on missionary affairs will be heard at the twentieth annual conference of the Student Volunteer Union of Virginia here today, tomorrow and Sunday.

Heading the list of those to be heard is Dr. E. W. Smith, of the Presbyterian Foreign Mission Board, Nashville, who has just returned from a tour of the mission fields of the Southern Presbyterian Church. He spoke tonight, and will be heard several more times before the conference is adjourned.

Others on the program are Dr. Howard T. Kuist, of the Biblical Seminary of New York, who will conduct a series of Bible studies; Dr. Churchill Gibson, of St. James Episcopal Church, Richmond, who will lead the devotional services, and Miss Mary E. Lakeman, of Mary Baldwin College, who will lead discussion groups.

The meeting is held under auspices of Washington and Lee University and the churches of Lexington.

The student volunteer union is part of a national and interdenominational student volunteer movement, with headquarters in New York. Membership in the union is limited to students of college age who intend to become foreign missionaries.

PWA Fund Probe Finds No Misuse

Beltsville Construction Is Pushed, Quiz Continues.

Although investigation of charges of juggling Public Works Administration funds has not been completed, work of completing construction of new units at the Beltsville Experimental Farm is being pushed with the idea of opening them in the spring.

C. B. Baldwin, assistant to Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, said yesterday that he was anxious to close the investigation as quickly as possible and that he thought no further "disclosures" would be made.

Erection of the new units is being financed through a $450,000 grant which has been transferred from other PWA money allocated to the Agriculture Department.

Investigation of charges of juggling funds began last fall when it was alleged that discrepancies had been found in accounts. So far, however, it was understood, the investigation ... revealed only shifting of funds.

Jury Is Completed For Bank Probe

Inquiry Into Failure of American Opens Tuesday.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 8 (AP).—Next Tuesday was set as the time for opening of the investigation of the failure of the American Bank & Trust Co. of Richmond after a special grand jury was completed in Hustings Court today.

Joseph F. Sorg, president of the Milhiser Bag Co.; G. Moffett King, sr., secretary of the Mutual Assurance Society of Virginia, and C. A. Watkins, of the Standard Oil Co., were chosen for the jury duty today. They will serve with Walter S. Robertson, broker; Melville C. Branch, banker and broker; Walter G. Turpin, real estate agent, and Frederick S. Valentine, sr., who previously were chosen.

More than 25 prominent business men were summoned before a properly disinterested group could be secured to investigate the failure of the $20,000,000 institution which had 50,000 depositors.

Death Car in Trunk Murder Case

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

'Flying Bandit,' Carefree, Waits Return to Trial

Florida Seeks to Link Him to Rumble Seat Haul of Body.

Nevada City, Calif., Feb. 8 (AP).—Clarence Frechette waited nonchalantly tonight for police to return him to Michigan for the trunk killing of Robert Brown.

The 25-year-old former convict, once known as the "flying bandit," sat alone in the small county jail, his transcontinental automobile journey with the body of Brown apparently among the least of his thoughts.

Florida authorities asked for copies of the dapper killer's fingerprints on the chance that they might lead to the solution of another case in which the victim's body was placed in the rumble seat of an automobile and hauled through the South.

In a brief court appearance, during which he dropped a hint that he would contend the killing of Brown was an act of self defense, the dapper killer was arraigned on a charge of murder and an extradition hearing was set for Wednesday.

His first night in the jail after his arrest Wednesday night at a lonely, storm-bound highway patrol station in the mountains on the California-Nevada border, where Brown's body was found jammed into the trunk of an automobile Frenchette was driving, passed uneventfully.

Tired out after hours of driving wildly westward from Howell, Mich., where Frechette admitted he killed Brown in a quarrel over a girl, Grace Curran, the prisoner slept soundly, awakening late.

He took a bath, washed his clothes and smiled cheerfully when breakfast was served. The weather displeased him. "I thought California always had sunshine," he scoffed, looking at the drizzle of rain and low-sweeping clouds.

He made but one reference to the case confronting him.

"I want to get back there and get this thing over with, now that the jig's up," he said.

$600 Hoard Buried In Woods 'Raided;' Owner Invokes Law

Berlin, Md., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Edward Dryden, 55-year-old farmer of Atkinsons District, drew his savings amounting to $600 from the bank a few days ago, placed the money in a tin can and buried it beneath some pine needles and brush in a neighbor's woods near his farm.

Yesterday Dryden appealed to William W. Davis, Worcester County constable, asking him to apprehend a certain person who, Dryden said, found the $600 and extracted three $20 bills.

Dryden has retrieved his $540 balance and has placed the money in his pockets.

$67,000 More Given Montgomery by PWA

Administrator of Public Works Harold L. Ickes yesterday increased the PWA allotment of $49,000 to Montgomery County, Va., to $116,000.

The money is to be used in the construction of new county school buildings at Christiansburg, Blacksburg and Shawville. PWA officials said that the increase was due to increased cost of the construction work.

Church Row Brings $5 Fine.

Woodsboro, Md., Feb. 8 (AP).—Arrested while seated in church, Lloyd Nogle, of Legore, was fined $5 and costs by Magistrate Harry C. Dorcus for disturbing the peace in a fight at the same church in December. Three other Legore men also were fined.

Firemen Routed In Setback Tilt With Councilman

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—When it comes to setback, fire fighters will have to take a few lessons from their superiors.

Two fire truck drivers, Phraener Logan and Charles Goetz, challenged Councilman L. C. Lushbaugh to a 35-game match. Lushbaugh selected the market master, Raymond Smith, as his partner. When the match, staged at a local fire hall before a large crowd, was completed, the councilman and the market master had won 26 of the 35 games.

3 Killed, 1 Hurt By Crazed Gunman

Nephew Slays Arkansas Farmer and Daughters.

Little Rock, Ark., Feb. 8 (AP).—Apparently surprised as they went about their early morning chores, a father and his two daughters were slain and the mother critically wounded at their farm home 12 miles west of here today.

Harry Luther, 46, a nephew of the family, surrendered to the police and was quoted by officers as saying he had done the shooting. Officers expressed the belief that he was insane.

Charles Evarts, about 60, Garland County politician and a member of the county board of equalization, his two daughters, Miss Ollie Evarts, 26, herself a justice of the peace and a member of the county quorus court, and Miss Lenore Evarts, pretty 18-year-old blonde, were killed by shotgun slugs.

Virginia Garden Plan For 1935 Progresses

Richmond, Feb. 8 (AP).—William A. Smith, FERA administrator for Virginia and several of his aids today discussed plans for getting the 1935 subsistence garden program under way in the State and announced that the first batch of seeds will be distributed to garden clients in the eastern counties some time before the end of this month.

Between $150,000 and $175,000 will be spent for seeds, it is estimated.

Virginia Masons Open Session Next Tuesday

Richmond, Va., Feb. 8 (AP).—High ranking Virginia Masons will gather here next week for the 157th annual session of the Grand Lodge of Masons in Virginia.

Beginning Tuesday night, the ceremonies will continue through Saturday with business meetings, degree work and addresses included on the program.

License Is Taken From Liquor Dealer

The liquor license of Herman Kaminskei, of the 400 block of New York avenue northwest, was ordered revoked yesterday after Kaminskei had a hearing before the Alcohol Beverage Control Board on several charges of violations of the liquor law.

Kaminskei was charged with selling on Sunday, selling liquor without stamps affixed to the bottle, selling in bottle form on a license allowing sales for consumption on the premises, selling in a closed container and selling drinks to standing patrons.

Welfare Aids Hold Dinner.

The Montgomery Council of Social Agencies held a dinner meeting last night at Hungerford Tavern, which was addressed by Harry Greenstein and Mrs. Christine Adams, of Baltimore, officials of the Maryland Emergency Relief Administration. Miss Lavina Engle presided.

Auto Afire, Youth Burned.

Edward Shaffer, 23, of Rockville, Md., was burned about the hands yesterday while trying to extinguish flames which threatened to destroy an automobile parked at Third and E streets northeast. He was treated at Casualty Hospital.

Maj. Shepard's Defense Rests In Murder Trial

Mouth Wash Could Have Caused Wife's Death, Witness States.

Topeka, Kans., Feb. 8 (AP).—The defense rested today in the second poison murder trial of Maj. Charles A. Shepard after producing a witness who declared a mouth wash could have caused the death of the 63-year-old defendant's second wife.

Final testimony in the defense case was offered by Lieut. Col. George R. Callendar, Fort Sam Houston, Tex., pathologist. He took the stand in support of the defense contention Mrs. Zenana Shepard's death was accidental or by suicide. She died at Fort Riley, Kans., 5½ years ago.

The Texas expert hit pointedly at the Government's charge Shepard poisoned his temperamental wife to free himself for romance with Grace Brandon, Army post stenographer—a charge of which he was convicted at a former trial, later reversed by the Supreme Court.

Callender's Testimony.

If, said Callender, Mrs. Shepard had received a lethal dose of poison in a highball the night of May 20, 1929, when she became ill, she could not have lived 26 days. She died June 15, 1929. He added that the dead woman could have died from poison absorbed in a mouth wash she used.

Robert L. Crawford, colored private attached to the Ninth Cavalry, Fort Riley, was unshaken under cross-examination in his statement that he suffered no harmful effects from liquor the Government has hinted was poisoned. Crawford worked for the Shepards.

Remembers Container.

Q. Do you recall a container of whisky on a shelf in the Shepard quarters?—A. Yes, I sure do remember it.

Q. How much did Mrs. Shepard drink out of that bottle before her death?—A. About half of it, sir.

Q. You drank some of it, too?—A. Yes, once or twice I went into it.

Charles Hardesty, colored cavalry sergeant, was among the first rebuttal witnesses called by the Government. He said he had known Crawford 15 years and knew his reputation for veracity.

"It is bad," the sergeant said.

Error Writ Given Condemned Slayer

Johnson Wins New Trial by Virginia Action.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Haywood Johnson, inmate of the death cell at the State Penitentiary, today took a new lease on life, after the Supreme Court of Appeals granted him a writ of error.

Johnson has reason to be doubly thankful, for he was originally sentenced to die February 1, 24 hours before Robert Mais and Walter Legenza were electrocuted. Gov. Peery, however, granted him a reprieve until March 9, and the court's action today gives him further cause for hope.

Johnson was convicted in the Circuit Court of Princess Anne County of shooting Joseph Hogshire, a white man who he says was one of two men who attacked him.

D. K. Koonce Named To Conciliation Post

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.). Federal Judge W. E. Baker, of this district, has named Attorney Darrell K. Koonce, of Charles Town, W. Va., former assistant district attorney for the northern district of West Virginia, conciliation commissioner for Jefferson County.

A recent amendment to the bankruptcy act permits an insolvent farmer further time to meet his debts before being adjudicated a bankrupt by filing a petition with the conciliation commissioner and complying with the requirements governing extensions under the amendment.

Swanson Calls Weyerbacher Inquiry Court

To probe an alleged offer five years ago by Commander Ralph D. Weyerbacher, at present aircraft procurement officer, to serve as "technical adviser" to an aviation concern at $1,500 a month, a court of inquiry headed by Rear Admiral Frank H. Clark was ordered yesterday by Secretary of the Navy Swanson.

Weyerbacher's offer was said to have been made in a letter recently brought to light by Chairman McSwain of the House Military Committee, who announced that he was interested in knowing what the Navy proposed to do about the case.

Swanson's action was taken following examination of evidence by Rear Admiral C. C. Bloch, judge advocate general, and Capt. Benjamin Dutton, jr., of the Bureau of Navigation.

The board, convening at the Navy Yard next week, will "inquire into certain alleged unethical actions" on the part of Weyerbacher, the department said in making the secretary's action public.

Secretary Swanson said the inquiry is being called to give Weyerbacher an opportunity to state his side of the case. He will be permitted counsel and the privilege of cross examining witnesses testifying against him. The court will determine if any disciplinary action is to be taken.

Serving with Admiral Clark on the court will be Rear Admiral Walter R. Gherardi, Navy Department hydrographer; Capt. William G. DuBose, assistant chief of the Bureau of Construction and Repair, and Capt. W. W. Wensinger, of the Marine Corps, who will act as judge advocate.

Waynesboro, Pa., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held this afternoon for Mrs. Pearl Rosetta Fleagle, 25, wife of Lloyd Fleagle, of near Edgemont, Md., who died Wednesday at the Washington County Hospital in Hagerstown.

Pleasant Plains Asks More Police

Citizens Appoint Committee to Meet Captain.

Increased police protection for the Pleasant Plains area was requested last night by the Pleasant Plains Civic Association at a meeting held in the auditorium of the Monroe School, and a committee appointed to discuss the matter today with the captain of the Tenth precinct.

Dr. Howard H. Long, assistant superintendent of schools, explained the nature and purpose of the newly organized Advisory Council of Colored Organizations as a source of mutual support among organizations for policies of community benet.

A report by Mrs. Edith Grubbs with reference to possibility of establishment of a branch library in the section indicated no immediate likelihood of such establishment as part of the public library twelve-year program, and no facilities immediately available for training of colored persons for public library service.

Dr. Tyler's Condition Better.

Holdcroft, Va., Feb. 8 (AP).—Some signs of improvement were reported today in the condition of Dr. Lyon G. Tyler, president emeritus of the College of William and Mary, but Dr. Russell Parker, who is attending him at his home here, said Dr. Tyler still is "a very ill man."

Maryland Militia Inspection To Get Under Way Next Month

Capt. MacGregor, Regular Army Officer, Will Accompany Col. Marker, Commander of First Infantry.

Frederick, Md., Feb. 8 (AP).—Col. D. John Markey, commanding officer of the First Infantry of the Maryland National Guard, has announced the dates of inspections of the various units of the regiment, beginning with those stationed at Frederick.

Col. Markey will be accompanied on his inspection tour by Capt. L. E. MacGregor, Regular Army officer on duty with the regiment. Col. Markey will represent the State and Capt. McGregor the Regular Army.

All inspections will be held at 8 p. m. after the records have been examined at 3:30 p. m. The units on the western shore will be visited during March and the eastern shore outfits and Aviation corps during April.

Company A, of Frederick, will be first, being reviewed on March 4. The following day the band section of Frededick will be inspected. The regimental headquarters and staff and the regimental headquarters company, all of Frederick, will be inspected on March 7.

The dates for the other inspections are:

March 11, Company H of Westminster; 12, Company D and Headquarters of First Battalion of Bel Air; 13, Company M of Annapolis; 16, Headquarters Company of Second Battalion of Laurel; 19, Company F of Hyattsville; 21, Service Company of Silver Spring; 23, Company B of Hagerstown; 26, Howitzer Company of Kensington; 27, Company G and Headquarters of Second Battalion of Cumberland.

April 1, Company E of Elkton; 2, Medical Department Detachment of Chestertown; 3, Headquarters Company of First Battalion of Easton; 8, Company I of Salisbury; 9, Headquarters Company of Third Battalion of Pocomoke City; 10, Headquarters of Third Battalion and Company L of Crisfield; 15, Company K of Centreville; 17, Company C of Cambridge; 27, Twenty-ninth Division Aviation Corps of Logan Field, Dundalk.

Oh, look! See the little bride. What is the little bride doing? She is baking a cake, a lovely Lady Baltimore cake with gorgeous icing all covered with cherries and nice things.

But won't her cake be terrible, and won't her husband pay the janitor to haul it away?

Then he will get a raise (maybe). Of course not. It will be a very good cake, and her husband will eat three slices. He will boast about her cooking and he will invite the Boss out to dinner some evening.

You see, this little bride is a constant reader of Dorothea Duncan's column on cookery in The Washington Post each morning. So she knows all about cookery now. Her cakes never fall and her biscuits are better than those mother used to make. Oh, much better.

For Dorothea Duncan is not only a good cook; she's also an excellent teacher, and it's her job to teach the young brides (and older housewives, too) how to make strawberry shortcakes, and beef stews, and candied sweet potatoes, and lamb roasts. Each day she discusses new phases of the culinary arts, and when a bride reads her column and follows her advice, that bride is perfectly at home on the range.

Because of Dorothea Duncan, indigestion is now a thing of the past in many Washington households, and Junior (thank goodness) has been tempted into eating his spinach. Her practical menus make the meals brighter, and actually lessen the labor of preparing them. Too, you'll find she knows all about the newest kitchenware and appliances.

Miss Duncan's excellent advice on cookery is found each day on the Household Pages of The Washington Post. Why not turn to her column right now?

This Country's 'Preview' Committees Decide Which Films Are 'Best of Month'

Several 'Best' Already Lauded By Washington

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

The evaluations of current films by West and East Coast preview committees, reporting their findings through the office of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., of which Will H. Hays is president, like the later Broadway estimates of plays that have previously opened here, demonstrate that Washington's appraisal of its entertainment, both stage and screen, is sound.

In the February 1 report, the preview committees list the pictures deemed "best of the month" as "Bordertown," starring Paul Muni, with Bette Davis and Margaret Lindsay; "The County Chairman," starring Will Rogers; Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's all-star production of "David Copperfield," "Lives of a Bengal Lancer," with Gary Cooper, Franchot Tone, Sir Guy Standing and Richard Cromwell; Gaumont-British's "Power," with Conrad Veidt and Benita Hume, and "Society Doctor," with Chester Morris, Virginia Bruce and Billie Burke.

Capital Has Seen Many.

Of these, the Capital already has passed judgment on "Bordertown," "The County Chairman" and "Lives of a Bengal Lancer." "David Copperfield," universally hailed as one of the screen's masterpieces, opens at the Palace today and the Gaumont-British production of "Power" probably will be included among the releases to be presented at the Belasco Theater when that house reopens on February 21 as the local home of foreign-made pictures.

Few will dispute that such of the listed best as have been seen here are entitled to the distinction the preview committees have accorded them, although in view of the habitual tardiness of their reports it is not entirely clear why they should be dubbed "preview" committees. The benefit of their findings, if any, comes along far behind the public release of the subjects they celebrate.

Among what are termed "social dramas," Sinclair Lewis' "Babbitt," in which Maxine Doyle is more or less prominently cast with Guy Kibbee and Aline MacMahon, is rated first, with "Forsaking All Others," "Life Returns," "Mills of the Gods" and a few others unknown to Washington trailing along not too distantly.

In the "comedy" designation "The Mighty Barnum" holds undisputed sway, with "Biography of a Bachlor Girl" and "Enchanted April," both Ann Harding vehicles, heading the "light comedy" group—not entirely justifiedly, I should say.

Bing! Goes the Musical.

"Here Is My Heart" is rated the best screen musical comedy; "Murder in the Clouds" the No. 1 release in the department of "mystery, melodrama and crime," and "Helldorado," opening today on the screen at Loew's Columbia, the ace example of fine "Western."

Other recent productions that are given high ratings, especially in the East, include "Baboona," the new jungle subject sponsored by Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson; "Clive of India," starring Ronald Colman; "The Gilded Lily," in which Claudette Colbert soon will be seen locally; "The Iron Duke," with George Arliss in the title role of the Duke of Wellington; "Maybe It's Love," the feature at the Metropolitan beginning today, and numerous others.

These ratings are important because they represent an authentic cross-section of national opinion in determining the merits of the motion picture releases by all film companies.

They are frequently cited here because they increasingly demonstrate that the critical judgment of the National Capital is as discriminating and as reliable in its selection of worthy motion picture entertainment as is to be found anywhere on the continent.

It was with keen regret that this column returned to its peregrinating desk yesterday from a few fast rounds with Dr. Frank T. Shyne's ultra-violet ray machine and other tonic gadgets to discover that that eminent publicist, Mr. Beverly Kelley, had been a caller during our absence. Mr. Kelley, who was passing through town in one direction or another, at least had the thoughtfulness to leave a hurriedly written and sketchy note. It confided that he is still dedicating his illustrious talents to the celebration of Roland Stebbins' epochal production of Mare Connelly's enduring masterpiece, "The Green Pastures," and that that perennial revelation of the Negro's primitive view of the Old Testament scriptures now is playing in Florida. On February 26, it will reopen on Broadway on its fifth anniversary, reaching the metropolis following a two-day engagement in Baltimore on February 18 and 19. Richard B. Harrison, the venerable actor who plays the role of De Lawd, still keeps his record clean, never having missed a performance of the part in which he has appeared more than 1,600 times.

Mr. Kelley also lets it be known that he and "Bill" Fields, a favorite showman among the ladies and gentlemen (sic) of the Fourth Estate—which is polite slang for newspaper racket!—will constitute the press department of the Hagenbeck-Wallace Circus next summer. So we shall see them then—if summer ever comes, what with that perverse ground hog and all!

Dear, Dear, the Deers!

By a sudden change in booking—possibly influenced slightly by the indifference of the Washington Zoo deer pen to the most exciting sequences it had to offer—"Sequoia" has been withdrawn as the attraction on the screen at Loew's Fox the week beginning Friday, February 15, a week from today, and "After Office Hours," costarring Clark Gable and Constance Bennett, put in its place.

Next week's presentation of "After Office Hours" at the Fox will mark the world premiere of what is enthusiastically described as a picture that is the superior of "It Happened One Night," in which Mr. Gable scored one of his most sensational successes opposite Claudette Colbert.

The story is of a young newspaper reporter who discovered that the only way he could fulfill his assignment was to wheedle the yarn out of a glamorous young thing from Park avenue. He not only gets the story, but turns up a murder mystery and finally marries the girl in the bargain. Without indulging in the absurd extravagances of the usual "newspaper picture," "After Office Hours" is said to abound in humor and to possess every quality necessary to be an overwhelming box-office smash.

The principals and staff of the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company, from the Savoy Theater, London, will be entertained at luncheon in the Willard Hotel on Tuesday, February 19, by the English Speaking Union. The social activities planned for this distinguished group during their week at the National Theater is characteristic of the social attentions that have been heaped upon them ever since they landed in America for one of their most successful seasons. Their New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Washington and subsequent routings are rapidly developing into one long, unbroken succession of ovations and public honors. They are already beginning to regret the necessity of embarking from Montreal in early May to reopen the Savoy Theater in London in June.

A Military Premiere.

Tonight will be "Marine Night" at the Earle Theater, when a military premiere will be accorded "Devil Dogs of the Air," the new Cosmopolitan production released by Warner Brothers and made with the active cooperation of the U. S. Marine Corps and the Navy Department of the Federal establishment. Gen. John H. Russell, commandant of the Marine Corps, will head the list of guests. The auditorium of the theater will be appropriately decorated with flags and bunting, the orchestra will present a special arrangement of Marine and other military melodies and a color guard of Marines will stand guard at the entrance.

Other prominent guests include five Congressmen who were former members of the Marine Corps, Representatives Melville J. Moss, Minnesota; C. W. Darden, Virginia; Lawrence E. Imhoff, Ohio; J. W. Houston, Kansas, and J. W. Tenroy, New York.

"Among Those Present."

Additional members of the corps who will be present include Gen. Hugh Matthews, Gen. David D. Porter, Col. Harold C. Reislinger, Col. Joseph Fegan, Col. Ralph J. Mitchell (technical adviser on the film), Col. E. F. Archer, Col. W. P. Upshur, Col. C. B. Vogel, Col. Geiger, Commander Robert Monroe, aid to Secretary of the Navy; Maj. John W. Thomason, aid to Secretary of the Navy, and Col. John Marston.

Now would be as good a time as any to begin boning up on the lyrics of that "From the halls of Montezuma to the shores of Tripoli" business. If you can't get through the first stanza of either "The Star-Spangled Banner" or "America," what chance will you have with that one!

That box-office line signalizing the opening of the seat sale for "As Thousands Cheer" at the National for the week beginning Sunday night, was reminiscent of the old days when the late Flo Ziegfeld habitually brought his new "Follies," "Show Boat" and other musical productions to the same theater for their premieres. The queue curled three or four times around the heated lobby of the theater and then strung its attenuated length down to the frigid corner of Thirteenth street and, at times, beyond. So what? So the theater is dead. I am laughing to you!

Dig Into Your Trunk.

The Drama Guild of Washington announces a play-writing contest, open to anyone living in the "metropolitan district of Washington." Precisely what geographical limits are implied by that description, I do not profess to know.

Manuscripts of one-act plays, or three-act plays will be accepted in competition, with the proviso that the one-act plays must be of not less than 20 minutes acting time, nor more than 40.

Other requirements are that all plays submitted must be original works, not previously published or produced, and that the prize-winning plays become the property of the Drama Guild for production by them.

Two prizes will be offered. For the best three-act script, the prize will be $35; for the best one-act play, $15. If in the opinion of the judges no three-act play seems to merit a prize, the prize money will be divided among the best three one-act plays submitted.

Authorship to Be Concealed.

The plays will be judged on the basis of their artistic merit and suitability for stage production.

Manuscripts should be typed and each should bear its proper title, but not the name of the author. Each manuscript must be accompanied by a sealed envelope with name of the play on the outside and the name of the play, the name of the author and his address on the inside.

All manuscripts entered for competition must be in the hands of Miss Elizabeth Sypher, 2310 Connecticut avenue, not later than March 15, 1935.

Exhilaration Note.

Camping within earshot of the sports department has its compensations. For example, one of the bright young men just hollered across the room to ask: "When is George Washington going to swim again?"

Can you imagine, with him dead all these years!

In New Pictures Opening Today

Columbians in Difficult Play Score Success

In presenting "The Mask and the Face" for the first time before Washington audiences on Wednesday and Thursday nights, the Columbia Players are to be acclaimed again not only for bringing to the Capital a brilliantly written satirical comedy of modern matrimonial life and jurisprudence, but for choosing a play whica permits the players to show once more that skill in acting and stagecraft that has made the group outstanding.

At times the lines seemed to be a bit more than the players were able to carry, but overlooking what few slips there were, the Players, have presented no more completely satisfying evening in the theater.

They were at all times sure of the content of the drama and the author's intent, and, in making no attempt to assume an Italian dialect, the Columbians devoted their energies to giving an evening of unalloyed pleasure.

The play revolves around the proud, arrogant Count Mario Grazia who, thinking his wife unfaithful, secretly banishes her to England. Immediately he confesses the "murder," and after ten months of prison is acquitted and finds himself a great national hero. The wife, however, reappears, and, with the ultimate reconciliation, everything works out all right.

As the Count, Arthur Westover, Balboan beard and all, gave an excellent reading of the self-satisfied, conceited husband who vowed he would do thus and so, if——. Opposite him, as the wife whose love would permit the enduring of a ten-months' exile, Bess Kilkirson did one of the finest jobs in the Columbian's distinguished catalogue.

To Frank Jamison, Helen Mead, Bunnie Skinner and Robert M. Miller should go especial credit for commendable support.

Postlude - By Ray C. B. Brown

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

National Symphony Orchestra in Constitution Hall; Viola Mitchell, soloist; Hans Kindler, conductor. Program: "A Negro Parade" (Stringfield), Grave from "Dido and Aeneas" (Purcell), Variations on a Theme by Haydn (Brahms), Concerto for violin and orchestra (Malipiero), "Carneval" overture (Dvorak).

Adapting the old and familiar form of a passing patrol, Lamar Stringfield, in "A Negro Parade," has made ingenious use of those syncopated rhythms and harmonic intervals which are spontaneous with the Negro and artificially cultivated by the Caucasian writers of jazz and blues. The obstinate ground rhythm which underlies the greater part of the composition has an odd likeness to the monotonous beat of Ravel's "Bolero," although the resemblance ends there, and does not extend to instrumentation.

The point wherein this patrol differs from its forbears is the middle section: a meditative pause after the marchers have passed out of hearing, a period of day-dreaming before the returning drums and trumpets approach once more. Its exact significance is evasive, but one imagines it to be a recollection in tranquillity of some incident suggested by the stirring march. It is undoubtedly effective, whatever its symbolism, as a contrasting relief from the rhythmic pulse preceding and following. The absence of that relief is what makes Ravel's piece so exasperating, once its novelty has worn off.

Of Henry Purcell's music we hear so little that Dr. Kindler should be thanked for having given us the fine example from "Dido and Aeneas" of that composer's power to evoke the dignity of grief. Here is a true poignancy of melody expressed in stately movement, a sorrow too deep for excitement of the nerves, a resignation to fate without the outcry of weakness. This excerpt shows what a master of opera Purcell might have become had he devoted more time to dramatic writing.

The Brahms variations, so adroit in weaving, so sturdy in spirit and so revelatory of the composer's duality as poet and peasant, were played with an excellence that made them doubly welcome—on their own account and because of the manner of performance. Had Brahms been less fecund in ideas of his own, the delight he took in writing variations on the ideas of others would be easier to explain. The reason remains recondite, but the results are charming elaborations of his fancies.

Viola Mitchell has courage to introduce herself as the interpreter of a composition which by virtue of its personal idiom and novelty diverts attention from its performer. Even with that disadvantage she made a good impression with her technical facility, her clarity of tone and her musicianly insight. Her admirable qualities would have appeared more obviously had she chosen a familiar work. That she has a pronounced artistry was evident in her sympathetic reading of the concerto.

One hearing of Malipiero's intriguing work is but a stimulant, for it abounds with ideas which can not all be assimilated at the same time that one is attracted by the harmonic fabric and the richness of instrumentation. Repeated hearings will be necessary before its full values are revealed.

The first impression is that of a tone-poem in which the solo violin is given a virtuoso place, uttering a monologue, bits of which are taken up and discussed by the other instruments. It would seem to be descriptive, in the opening and closing allegros, of a festival from which one of them is led away during the central lento into the quieture of a starry night. The lento is the gem of the work, a lovely reverie, yet impassioned withal.

To those not thoroughly acquainted with Malipiero's idiom, the loveliness may be unquestionable, for he speaks a personal dialect of modernism. Once one has caught his turns of phrase and identified his idiosyncratic grammar, what he has to say is continuously interesting. And he has tried some experiments in form which are stratling, such as placing the only solo cadenza, an exceedingly intricate and brilliant one, at the beginning of the last movement.

After this stirring new work which, unfortunately, we shall probably not have the opportunity to hear again for some time, the audience was called back to familiar surroundings by the "Carneval" overture of that jolly Bohemian soul, Antonin Dvorak. Jolly he was, in spite of the lugubrious wailing to which his most famous "Humoreske" is frequently subjected, and this overture is Exhibit A for any fair-minded jury.

Carmen .....Luisa Casellotti
Jose .....Ralph Gerard
Escamillo .....Martino Rossi
Micaela .....Maria Olla
Zuniga .....Guido Guidi
Frasquita .....Bianca Fioro
Mercedes .....Bernice Schalker
Morales .....Eugenio Prosperoni
Dancario .....Natale Pinetti
Remendado .....Constante Sorvino
Gabriele Simeoni, conductor.

A surprise, held in reserve by the management for this performance, was produced in the person of Luisa Casellotti—a Carmen, who can sing, dance and act with a spontaneity most engaging. Her voice, in the best display of which she seems curiously uninterested, has the color, the warmth and the emotion which the role demands. It is an opalescent voice with glowing depths and surface glints, and if she gave as much care to its full disclosure as she does to her impersonation of character, it would be more richly rewarding to the ear.

Slim, lithe and graceful in movement, Miss Casellotti is a vivid visualization of Merimee's fiery and fickle heroine. Into the changing moods of the role she throws herself with impetuosity, and she knows how, as well, to be a quiet and unobtrusive part of the stage picture. An interesting artist, she is on the right road to success.

She was fortunate in having Ralph Gerard as the Jose upon whom to depend for commensurate support. He, too, has the ease of presence and the dramatic instinct for a romantic part. He was in good voice and sang with a freedom of lyric tone that blended well with the mezzo-soprano. The remainder of the cast played up to the pace set by the protagonists, and the result was a spirited performance.

At the matinee "Faust," only one act of which this reviewer was able to hear, Ruth Peter acquitted herself well in the jewel aria. Her voice has clarity and flexibility, and she uses it without strain. Giuseppe Barsotti gave a sonorous reading of the "chaste demeure" aria, and Mephistopheles was in the dependable care of Guido Guidi.

EMMETT EMERT, 56, of Grafton, W. Va., has been enriched $40,000 by the Federal Government and, as a consequence, has moved from his meager quarters at the local transient bureau.

Suspected of being a German spy during the war, all of Emert's belongings, including a large sum of cash, were seized by the Government. Recently an act of Congress restored all his property with interest. He is going to buy a farm in the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia.

John P. Kibler, formerly connected with the Luray Caverns, is said to have one of the smartest dogs in Page County.

For hours the large police dog is reported to carry cut wood from the wood pile and stack it beside the back porch of the Kibler home.

Those who go hunting in the West Virginia woods will know exactly how to handle a gun if a bill introduced by Delegate Charles B. Morris, of Monongalia County, is passed. The measure would require certification of one's ability to handle a gun satisfactorily before issuance of a hunting license. Examinations would be conducted by the State police. It also pointed out that the examination would not include a test of the marksmanship of the applicant.

A new brand of 15-cent cigarettes is now being produced in bulk by the Farmers Cooperative Tobacco Association, Danville, Va., at a rate of 4,000 packages per hour. The farmer delivers a quantity of his tobacco to the association's factory and receives a proportionate dividend when the cigarettes are marketed. Clyde Jones, president of the body, expressed his confidence in the idea on grounds that a number of orders had already been received from jobbers throughout the country.

The mayor and town council of Keyser, W. Va., upon being asked by the FERA to suggest projects that could be done to improve the town, have suggested virtually rebuilding the city.

Here is the list of projects they have listed as worthy of consideration: a new city hall, new police headquarters, new fire station, garbage and rubbish disposal plant, resurfacing of eight streets, a municipal swimming pool, municipal auditorium, public gymnasium, installation of storm sewers, and the elimination of a railroad crossing on the main street.

Phantom Barely Eludes Capture in Hagerstown

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 8 (AP).—The thief known as the "phantom burglar" because of his operations in the southern section of the city during the past two months, came near being captured.

C. H. Leatherman, awakened to see the doorknob turning, jumped from bed and chased the man out an open rear door of his home.

Man Found Dead Traced by Army

Fingerprints Examined in Joppa Mystery.

Bel Air, Md., Feb. 8 (AP).—With at least three other men missing from Fort Hoyle for more than a month, Army authorities at the post today sent fingerprints of the remains of a body found near Joppa, to Washington to determine definitely if it was Victor Sikorsky.

The body was found yesterday by a dog along a back-woods road. Impressions of the fingerprints were forwarded to the War Department.

Sikorsky had been missiong from his unit, the Sixth Field Artillery, since December. The body apparently had lain in the woods since the first snow.

Father of Rush Holt Will Seek Reelection

Weston, W. Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Mayor M. S. Holt, Socialist, and father of United States Senator-elect Rush D. Holt, will be a candidate for reelection at the municipal election, March 19.

Two years ago Dr. Holt was elected mayor, although his name was not printed on the election ballots. His supporters wrote in his name. He plans to have his name printed on the 1935 ballots under nomination by petition as an independent candidate.

Virginia FERA Lists Officials For New Set-up

Carter Will Direct Area of Fredericksburg and Nearby Counties.

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Under the reorganization of the FERA in Virginia, the Fredericksburg area will consist of the City of Fredericksburg and four surrounding counties, Spotsylvania, Caroline, King George and Stafford, with the headquarters office here under W. F. Carter, jr., administrator.

Miss Susan Dickinson, formerly Spotsylvania County relief director, will become area social work supervisor under whom there will be social workers for each locality in the area.

Other assignments in the area office of this section are Garnett F. Beasley, area disbursing officer; Capt. Aubrey N. Daffan, area supervisor of rural rehabilitation; Mrs. W. L. Browning, area home economist; Mrs. Frances P. Daffan and Mrs. Christine C. Lightner, clerks in area office.

Assignments of project officers for each locality are John A. Meek, Fredericksburg and Spotsylvania County; W. E. Wood, Caroline County; Arthur M. Potts, King George County; H. A. Whitebeck, Stafford County; C. S. Hunter, jr., assistant for Fredericksburg; L. C. Gravett, assistant for Caroline County.

Social service directors and office personnel for the localities consist of the following:

Northrup Gets FERA Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—It was announced here today that F. B. Northrup, formerly of Keyser, W. Va., was placed in charge of the sectional office of the National Reemployment Service here yesterday, succeeding H. S. Woodhe, this city, who has been in charge since the office was established.

The change was due to merit tests, it was stated. E. M. Luttrell, who has been Woodhe's assistant, also is being relieved effective next week, it was stated.

Stafford—Mrs. Katherine M. Moncure, service director; Miss Thelma M Favill and Miss Grace De L. Moncure, stenographers.

Richmond Court Sentences Sutton To 30-Day Term

Richmond, Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Howard Sutton, who told on January 26 that it was he who smuggled the guns to Robert Mais and Walter Legenza with which they shot themselves out of the City Jail, received 30 days in jail after a police court hearing today.

Sutton stuck to his story for two days after his arrest, then told officers he had been under the influence of narcotics at the time and had been lying.

"Were you lying all the time?" Justice Folkes asked him today.

"Yes."

"I thought so, but I'm not going to stand for that sort of thing," the judge said, and imposed the month term.

Sutton had said that he, aided by a guard, managed to get the pistols to the gangsters and received $200 in return. He was in jail at the time, but guards said that it was an impossibility for him to have reached the convicted killers.

Police were at first disposed to believe the man's story because of many correct details which it contained. It was thought later, however, that he had picked up many small items concerning the gangsters from fellow prisoners and from the newspapers.

Tie in Names

Virginia and Mary Divide Popularity Honors.

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—A survey of names, made by Miss Lillian Boswell, freshman at the Fredericksburg State Teachers College, to find the most frequently used given name, revealed there are 30 students attending the college this term who are named Mary, and also 30 students named Virginia. Twenty-five students are called Elizabeth; 22 answer to the name of Louise. There are 21 Catherines, each nicknamed "Cat." The name Frances designates 19 of the students, which name in most instances is shortened into Frank or Fran. There are 17 Dorothys or Dots.

Suit Against Bus Firm Removed to Allegany

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—The suit of Joseph E. Stotler, Hagerstown, seeking $100,000 damages from the Blue Ridge Transportation Co. for neck and back injuries said to have been received in an automobile accident, February 3, 1934, on the Westminster-Taneytown highway, was removed to Allegany County.

Fifteen Deer Liberated.

Edinburg, Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Fifteen deer, brought to this section of the Shenandoah Valley from Pennsylvania by the State Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries for restocking purposes, today were liberated in the Massanutten Mountain, east of here.

Blind Virginian Granted Right To Run Business in Postoffice

Implied Assistance of President Enables Him to Operate First Commercial Enterprise Ever Allowed in Postal Building.

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 8 (AP).—Through the implied assistance of President Roosevelt, a Norfolk blind man has been given the privilege of operating, free of rent, the first commercial enterprise ever allowed in a postoffice building in this country.

Henderson T. Hedrick, jr., 33-year-old resident of Norfolk, who was blinded by accident eight years ago, has opened a news stand in the new Norfolk Federal Building on Granby street.

That this is the first and only such enterprise in an American postoffice building is the belief of Postmaster Robert W. Shultice. "I never heard of one before," he said.

The privilege came to Hedrick, a sturdily built, neatly dressed man, as the result of a telegram he dispatched to President Roosevelt at Warm Springs, Ga., last November 21. The answer to Hedrick's message came from the Postoffice Department, which announced that an investigation was to be made.

Some time later Postmaster Shultice was asked by Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Purdum, who is in charge of buildings, to investigate. The postmaster was asked to select two persons interested in assisting the blind to serve with him on a committee. Their report on Hedrick's request was favorable.

Recently there came to the postmaster the authority to permit the installation of the news stand, which would be allowed to sell only newspapers, magazines and other periodicals—no food, drink or confections.

Last Monday Mr. Hedrick set up his establishment, a stand, painted silver to conform to the interior decorations of the building, and a variety of periodicals. He has employed Mary Louise Colburn, 19, to assist in serving patrons.

Gas Fumes Kill Dr. Horace Davis

Well-Known Oral Surgeon Dies in Baltimore.

Baltimore, Feb. 8 (AP).—Dr. Horace C. Davis, former president of the State Dental Association and widely known oral surgeon, was found overcome by gas in the kitchen of his home today and died a few minutes later. He was 53.

Dr. Davis apparently had been using the stove to prepare a late meal upon his return from a club. A door was ajar and members of the family expressed the belief that a gust of wind had blown out the flame.

Dr. Davis is survived by his widow and two daughters, Mrs. Paul W. Watson, of San Diego, Calif., and Miss Nan Davis, of Baltimore, and his father, Horace Davis, of Poolesville, Md.

Police Believe Arrest Solves Robbery Series

Winchester, Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Police today announced that with the arrest of Howard Hockman, 29, who is being held for the grand jury in corporation court, they believe a series of five robberies extending over several months has been solved.

Hockman was arrested by Sergt. Francis Funk and Officer Frank Ritter and Detective Sergt. S. A. Sprinkles of the Pennsylvania Railroad. Police declare they have an alleged confession from Hockman that he is implicated in the robbery of a Pennsylvania freight station, the Winchester Park Association lockers, the O'Sullivan Rubber Co., an ice cream parlor and a department store. A large quantity of merchandise has been recovered, officers said.

New Envoy Coming Here From Mexico

Former Surgeon Has Been in Diplomatic Work Since 1922.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Each day brings a new and interesting personage to the Capital, either for a visit or on a tour of duty. The Diplomatic Corps, which is the most interesting group in Washington society, is the most changeable group, and this year there are many attractive additions.

The newly appointed Ambassador of Mexico, Senor Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera, will arrive next week to assume his duties as the successor of Senor Don Fernando Gonzalez Roa, who left several weeks ago.

Senor Najera was born in Durango, Mexico, in 1886. After being graduated as a surgeon in the Medical Corps he was director of the Army Medical College in Mexico City. Later he was director of the Juarez Hospital, chief of the Sanitary division of the war and navy departments, and was a delegate to numerous national and international medical congresses.

Sent to China in 1922.

In 1922 he was appointed minister to China, holding that post until 1924. In 1927 he went to Belgium as minister and was transferred to Holland in 1930. After remaining in The Hague for two years, he was again transferred, going to Paris.

Senor Najera has been the Mexican delegate before the Council of the League of Nations, with the rank of ambassador, since 1932, and has occupied the presidency of one of the extraordinary assemblies of the league. He also has presided over various committees dealing with the Chaco question, and particularly over the concilation committee of the League of Nations on the same question, to which he has devoted much time.

Attended World Parleys.

In the course of his diplomatic career, Senor Najera has represented Mexico at international conferences. He was president of the Mexican delegation to the International Convention for the Amelioration of the Condition of the Wounded and Sick of Armies in the Field, held at Geneva in 1929; president of the Mexican delegation to the Medical Journeys held at Brussels in 1929, 1930, 1931 and 1932; Mexican delegate to the Sixth International Congress of Military Medicine which was held at The Hague in 1931; delegate to the Twenty-first Congress of the International Federation of Societies of Free Thinkers, at Luxemburg in 1929; head of the Mexican delegation to the Disarmament Conference in 1931, and Mexican delegate to the Labor Conference in 1932.

Dr. Najera is the author of various works, some of them on medical themes and others on literary subjects such as "A Century of Belgian Poetry" (1830-1930), which he published in 1931.

The new ambassador will arrive in New York on the Berengaria Wednesday and will come direct to Washington. He is accompanied by Senora de Najera and their four children.

Lyttons Arrive In Capital Today From New York

British Peer to Address Town Hall Tomorrow on Far East.

The former United States Ambassador to Turkey and Mrs. Henry A. Morgenthau entertained at a large dinner last night at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York in honor of Lord and Lady Lytton, who arrived in this country several days ago.

Lord and Lady Lytton will come to Washington today to be the guests of the Ambassador of Great Britain, Sir Ronald Lindsay, for several days. The Town Hall of Washington will present the Earl of Lytton at the meeting in the Shoreham Hotel at 8 o'clock tomorrow night. Lord Lytton is a former undersecretary of state for India, and was chairman of the League of Nation's Mission to Manchuria in 1932. The subject of his lecture will be "The Far Eastern Problem and World Peace."

Considerable literary interest centers in Lord Lytton. His father wrote under the pseudonym of Owen Meredith, and his narrative poem, "Lucile," was in its day one of the most popular poems in the English language.

Lord Lytton's grandfather was Bulwer Lytton, the well-known novelist. An earlier generation of Americans were all assumed to have read "The Last Days of Pompeii" and "Lucile." The present Lord Lytton is the author of "The Life of Edward Bulwer, First Lord Lytton, 1913."

Miss Rankin Back in House Fighting War

(Associated Press.)

JEANNETTE RANKIN is back in Washington carrying on the same fight she was waging the night Congress voted to enter the World War. She was the first woman member of Congress and was sent here from Montana. When the war vote was taken, Miss Rankin's name was called. She said, "I'd like to stand by my country, but I can not vote for war."

She still can't vote for it, and she is busy as an associate director of the National Council for Prevention of War, trying to make the average voter feel the same way.

She stepped back into the limelight as a witness before the House committee inquiring into taking profits out of war. She is a slim, vivacious little figure. Her hair is white and fluffy. Her dark eyes shine. Intense in her viewpoint, her sense of humor keeps her from becoming a militant pacifist. She smiles and says:

Recalls War Stampede.

"But you can't take the profits out of war. When war threatens everyone grows hysterical. I remember in the stampede before the World War that members of the House were saying on the floor, 'What's the Constitution in wartime?'

"There are two steps we could take immediately that would help. We could merge the War and Navy Departments into a single cabinet office for national defense. If people are scared, let them have an army and navy—but let it be just for national defense.

"Then, as a second step, we should take compulsory military training out of the schools. To save money, there are several little thngs we could do. Why, for instance, does the Army need polo ponies? Why do officers need dress uniforms?"

Campaigned in Summer.

Miss Rankin believes she has the view of the common voter. She spent last summer talking to hundreds of them. She used the old suffragette methods of campaigning. After plotting all the voting districts in seven Georgia counties she talked to the three most influential people in each district. She came back to her Georgia farm, where she spends the summers, with 300 new members for the peace campaign.

"By the way," she laughs, "I bought that farm to prove you can't make a living on a farm. And I certainly proved it."

That farm, Washington, and Missoula, Mont., her home, see her for a part of each year. She gets home to Montana, usually, in time to vote, and to see her lawyer brother, and her sister, who is dean of women at the University of Montana.

The next war hasn't started yet, she says, "because European governments know the poor man is tired of fighting rich men's wars."

"If a war is started now, there won't be anything left," she says. "The next war will start as a rich man's war, but it will end as a poor man's war—in rebellion and revolution."

Child Chats

By Alice Fox Pitts.

SO MUCH has been written about colds and the necessity for guarding against them that further comment might seem superfluous. Yet repetition of the familiar warnings is warranted by the fact that respiratory diseases present a constant hazard to child health.

From Dr. Ella Oppenheimer, of the Children's Bureau, comes the following advice, timely because respiratory diseases take their greatest toll in winter:

Cold infections, of course, enter the body through the nose, mouth and throat, transmitted ordinarily by sneezing and coughing. Remember that the spray which carries infection is projected some 4 or 5 feet, which shows the tremendous importance of covering nose and mouth when coughing or sneezing.

A mask of four layers of cheese cloth, to which pieces of tape are fastened at each end, to tie around the back of the head, is a simple device which any mother who has a cold will do well to employ when handling the baby.

Avoiding crowds helps to cut down colds. More fresh air and sunshine also provide an additional safeguard against them.

What TODAY Means

"Aquarius."

IF FEBRUARY 9 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 12:30 to 2:30 p. m., from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m. and from 9:30 to 11:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:30 to 9:30 a. m., from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 6:30 to 8:30 p. m.

Today it might be well to remember that the prerogatives of friendship have their limitations. It will be unwise to be unduly familiar with one in whose good graces you have reason to wish to stand well and with whom you probably will be thrown into close contact today. Responsibilities of a more or less social nature may be thrust upon you today, and it might be poor judgment to refuse to assume them.

It will pay to be gracious in accepting or declining invitations today. Do not take for granted that your appreciation or regret will be understood unless you express it in understandable terms. Delays may threaten plans, but any inconvenience can probably be counteracted by using the telephone or a telegram.

Social errors can be prevented today by not allowing yourself to indulge in absent-minded carelessness while you are in company. An unusual surprise may bring gratifying results by causing you to change your opinion regarding a person who at present does not stand very well in your good graces. Married and engaged couples, as well as those seriously contemplating taking the matrimonial route, should be careful not to be extreme in word or action today.

If a woman, and February 9 is your birthday, do not let your love for sports or out-of-door activities tempt you to assume a masculine pose if you wish to appeal to and hold the high esteem of men. Your natural womanly grace should assure you of many admirers and prove a social asset. Wealth may play an unexpected but important part in your life, giving you opportunities undreamed of at the present time. The study of music, art, literature or the drama may pave the way to great achievement. You should be very happily married.

The child born on February 9, when it reaches its teens, may attach undue importance to its clothes and other personal belongings. The right line of common sense reasoning will make it view things in a rational light.

If a man, and February 9 is your natal day, you have the happy faculty of being able to make your home anywhere and friends among all classes of people. You may find law, medicine, exploration, journalism, or engineering advantageous means through which money can be made.

Bossy Women Rule Germany, Countess Says

NEW ORLEANS, La., Feb. 8 (U.P.).—Germany is bossed, not by Hitler, but by about 10,000,000 nagging women, says the Countess Herbert von Einsiedel, of Berlin, who is visiting relatives here.

"Women of Germany don't know anything about housekeeping, less about cooking, and they have perhaps more freedom than any other women in the world—too much."

The countess' indictment of her sex was almost as intense as her defense of the dictator, who, she says, is merely doing what Roosevelt is trying to do here, and is doing a much better job of it.

"You hear so much about how arrogant the German men are, strutting about so majestically in their Mardi Gras uniforms. The poor devils, strutting is about the only fun they get out of life. At home they are the most henpecked creatures on earth. They are to be pitied."

Slim, brunette and vivacious, the countess is a native of New Orleans, the former Irma von Tresckow, but Germany is the land of her forefathers. Her husband is an army officer.

"Every time that man opens his mouth he makes new enemies for the country," she said.

German movies are "terrible," the countess agrees, and so is the beer, but champagne is very cheap.

Trend Turns to Bright Colors In Men's Styles at Miami Beach

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Feb. 8 (AP). If, after all these drab years, man does return to bright colors and a few furbelows in his dress, the 1935 season here must go down in history as one of the starting points of the contagion.

Ever since the war there have been predictions the male would return to the gayer habiliments of his fathers—with a sly bow to the ladies—resume his rightful place among the world's other animals as the brighter of the sexes.

Each year the Nation's tailors meet and listen to solemn assurances that color and pattern will soon make obsolescent every dun wardrob in the country.

Pastel Mess Jackets Worn.

But this year for the first time, this resort's streets and sands are spotted with man's hues and pastel mess jackets are actually being worn in expenive supper clubs.

Rare—almost extinct—is the black bathing suit. Even primary colors are avoided as dowdy. Shorts, robes, slacks, blouses, jackets in yellows, tans, blues and black-and-white combinations gleam on the vacationing populace, as well as in shop windows.

Patterns are still generally restricted to plaids and checks, but some are as bold as Jim Brady.

Blue Linen Suits Smart.

The brilliance is not confined to beach clothes alone. Silk gabardine suits in smoky cocoas, grays and deep, dull greens shine in the sun like a courtier's breeches. Blue linen suits are smart. So also are black linen shirts and black canvas shoes under white suits, frequently set off by a pastel cravat.

And for extremists there are "cocktail ties," emblazoned with such moody legends as "say when;" the backgammon tie which, spread out, becomes a backgammon board and the hunter's kerchief with pink-coated border riders.

Results Worth the Fight, Margaret Sanger Says After Her 21-Year 'Birth Control' Campaign

'Coming of Age' of Her Work to Be Marked Wednesday.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

WHO IS THIS WOMAN who won the first award for achievement given by the American Woman's Association as one who has "fought against almost every influence which in the past was considered necessary for the success of a cause?" Who is this woman of whom H. G. Wells said, "She has created a unique position for herself in that she has changed the thinking not only of her nation but of the world?"

She is Mrs. J. N. H. Slee, better known as Margaret Sanger, coiner of the words "birth control" which she has made significant. Publicized by her enemies as "that Sanger woman" and that "birth control fanatic"—called by her friends "one of the greatest living women," and recognized by those who neither censure nor indorse her as a pioneer and an outstanding personality—Margaret Sanger has battled for her cause with dogged persistence for more than two decades.

The "coming of age" of her work will be celebrated Wednesday at the Hotel Mayflower when the American birth control movement commemorates its anniversary.

Perhaps no woman, in the last 21 years vitally concerned with any cause, has battled against greater odds than Margaret Sanger.

Results Worth the Fight.

"But what stormy, yet thrilling, years those have been," Mrs. Sanger said yesterday in her apartment at the Fairfax. "Looking back now and considering the great change in public opinion toward birth control, the result has been more than worth the fight.

"Every inch of the way has been gained in desperate battle, with theological prejudices to be overcome, ethical questions to be considered, scientific points to be settled. No wonder I am used to fighting by now."

Yet there is nothing of the fighter in Mrs. Sanger's appearance. Mild in manner and calm even while discussing the most turbulent of her experiences, she is the antithesis of the proverbial feminine champion of Amazon proportions, booming voice and mannish attire.

In a blue wool dress that brought out all the beauty of her reddish hair and hazel, amber-flecked eyes, she looked very much the attractive, unassuming type of woman who is serene in the face of any difficulty.

One senses beneath that composed exterior, however, a steel that has sustained this courageous woman in the face of ridicule—a steel that has strengthened her through arraignments and even a prison sentence and prompted her to continue her fight for a cause that seemed hopeless two decades ago.

One of the 11 children, Mrs. Sanger, was interested in birth control long before the movement began. "Very early in childhood I associated poverty, toil, unemployment and debts with large families. My experience with over-burdened mothers when I was a nurse on the lower East Side in New York crystalized my determination to do something to help those poor unfortunate women."

The birth-control movement had its inception in that determination.

"And from then until now it has been a struggle," she said. "I had three children of my own to look after and very little money, but what has been accomplished convinces me there was reason enough for such a fight.

"At times, of course, the battle has been almost unbearably difficult." (Was she thinking of the eight times she had been arrested? Her sentence to a penitentiary? The numerous times when halls engaged for her lectures were closed against her at the last minute? Her encounter with the postal authorities relative to her publications, "The Rebel Woman" and "The Birth Control Review?")

Opened Clinic in Brooklyn.

"Eighteen years ago I opened a clinic in the crowded Brownsville section of Brooklyn, where mothers could obtain information on birth control for a registration fee of 10 cents," she reminisced. "Within a few days more than 500 women applied for and received this information."

Among them, however, was a police woman who having been given advice by the nurses in charge of the clinic, returned later with five policemen who promptly arrested Mrs. Sanger and her two helpers and took them to court.

"But harrowing as that experience was, it was that incident that brought my fight to the fore and attracted attention to the cause."

Harris & Ewing.

MARGARET SANGER, pioneer in the birth control movement, whose 21-year-old fight in the interest of the cause has made her a figure of international prominence.

Next Goal Is Amending of Comstock Law; Forecasts Victory.

Sanger's own words, "The first ten years were spent in divorcing the term "birth control" from illegal means of avoiding childbirth. In other words, we devoted most of those first years trying to show people what birth control was not. We had to prove that it was not the taking of life; that it was not against nature; that it did not make for race suicide."

The next period, she pointed out, was spent in educating and organizing those who were interested, those who understood the real purpose of birth control. "After agitation, came education and organization," she said. "Now we are working for proper legislation."

She mentioned her goal now is to bring about an amendment to the 62-year-old Comstock law, which forbids the dissemination of birth control information as "obscene."

Bill Tabled by House.

"This antiquated law," Mrs. Sanger explained "prohibits even physicians from sending or receiving through the mails such information or necessary medical supplies. It is illegal to transmit the address of a clinic where information may be obtained, although many clinics are legally operating in a number of States."

Mrs. Sanger pointed out, also, that the latest birth-control bill was tabled in the House of Representatives last Monday. "Tabled, without discussion," she said. "When that happened I was dreadfully discouraged at first. But now, I have a clearer picture of the situation. I realize we can accomplish more by throwing forces into the field where the need of birth control is so apparent.

"Once the Comstock law is amended, our fight in this country will be won, as it has already been won in many others," she said. "What transpires after that will be merely a matter of time."

Did she think it would be long before her goal was attained?

"Not another 21 years, I hope," she laughed, for the first time during the interview. "No, seriously, I don't think it will be long. I can't bear to think it will be 10, or even 5 years before the poorest woman can obtain the same information and the same contraceptive supplies any woman with enough money can get now from a private physician.

"Surely with the turn of the tide of public opinion prejudice and opposition will be conquered soon, so that birth control information will no longer be available only to those who can pay for it. For 21 years my fight has been for the poverty-stricken, the inarticulate women to whom motherhood has become a burden. Ultimate victory will come only after every intelligent voter has been awakened to the importance of proper birth control legislation."

Air-Mail Marvels Interest Kindergarten Children

Editor's note: How a Valentine Day's observance opened up new vistas of the world to kindergartners is told in the following article.

By Ruby Nevins,
(Kindergarten Supervisor, Nelson Teachers College.)

IT WAS THE DAY before Valentine's Day and the children in the kindergarten were busily engaged in making valentines for their parents and friends.

"How shall we send our valentines?" asked a little boy. Various ways were suggested and it was finally decided to build a postoffice in the kindergarten and send the valentines by mail.

In order to learn more about the sending of mail the postoffice was visited. On the way the children met their own postman. He knew many of them and stopped to speak. Hearing that they were interested in his work, he showed them his suit, cap and his bag of mail. He also told them of his route, and how he came every day in all kinds of weather in order to bring mail to their families.

Little Postoffice Built.

At the postoffice the children watched the weighing of packages for parcel post. They agreed that a scale should be included in their postoffice. Stamps were purchased for valentines to be mailed to little sick friends.

After returning to school they built a postoffice out of orange crates. The valentines, when mailed, went through all the stages that a real letter goes through from the time it is placed in the letter box up to the time of its delivery.

Ways of sending mail were discussed. The mail pilot flying high up in the air with his bag of mail appealed to the children's imaginations. They drew and painted many pictures of pilots and mail planes. They also constructed small planes out of wood and flew them by means of pulleys attached to ropes stretched across the upper part of the room.

Trace Airmail Route.

The day the teacher received a letter by airmail was a memorable one. Interest was immediately aroused in the names of the different States and cities flown over by the pilot and his journey was traced on the map. This interest developed an awareness of distance and time. A sense of direction was fostered by a growing knowledge of the points of the compass; the words north, south, east and west became meaningful.

The beginnings of map work resulted. The children made a representation of the community on the floor of the classroom with the aid of blocks, miniature stores, houses, garages, toy street cars, automobiles, buses and trucks. The names of streets were noted and put on signposts. The principal buildings on the streets, such as the church, flower shop, postoffice, fire department, bank and school were indicated by reproducing the structure.

An inclosure was made out of blocks indicating the airport. From here each day the mail plane made a dramatic ascent.

A discussion of weather reports developed an interest in the effect of clouds, fog, rain, frost, snow and wind on man and travel; especially as it concerned aviators.

How the radio gives news, messages and warnings of impending storms to pilots when traveling high in the air seized the imagination of the children as did the beacon lights that guide the mail pilots by night. These marvels of science filled them with a sense of wonder as they do the adult when he meditates upon them.

This trip to the postoffice made the children in the kindergarten keener observers of their environment. It enlarged their understanding of the world and gave them a deeper sense of appreciation for the workers of the world. May not the way of leading a child to a true expression of living by enlarging his sympathies and understanding of the world about him release a power that will transform the present world and create a new world for a new day—a day when the social significance of life shall be the dominant theme of every life?

Distribution of valentines is lots more fun if it's done through a postoffice such as shown above. Two orange crates were used to make the postoffice compartments. Kindergartners are serving as mail clerks and postman.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

Wife Practices Every Economy, Yet Husband Refuses to Stop Smoking.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Don't you think it's selfish and foolish of a man to spend money on cigars and cigarettes when his wife is denying herself everything to meet expenses? We are a family of four, living here on $100 a month. Prices have gone up so in the last six months that I have to spend almost half as much again as I used to, to serve the kind of meals my husband demands. We find it impossible to save a cent, and I often walk miles, actually, to save street car fare and cut down the grocery bills.

• • • •

My husband smokes constantly, and spends around $2 a week just for cigars and cigarettes. I have told him several times he ought to cut out smoking, that it would be better for his health and would mean at least $100 a year saved. I have told him I think it indicates lack of character to smoke when we're so skimped on everything. But he says he's entitled to some pleasure, considering he's the one who earns the money, and that he'd rather do without one meal a day than give up smoking at his age. He's 42.

• • • •

Don't you think he's wrong and selfish? What argument can I use to make him see it? Please tell me what to say. PENNY PINCHER.

Don't Nag About It.

DEAR PENNY PINCHER: At the risk of sounding cynical, I must say a man who possesses no greater character defect than an addiction to smoking, and whose sole extravagance is the indulgence of his craving for nicotine, isn't an altogether reprehensible citizen.

• • • •

When one considers the much more flagrant derelictions which countless wives endure from husbands without complaint, including such grievances as habitual intoxication, failure to provide, willful, physical or mental cruelty, infidelity, nagging and so on, it seems to me you are possessed of a fairly praiseworthy husband. And I believe you must find such consolation as you can in that fact.

• • • •

You have your husband at an obvious disadvantage, in that you are able to reckon his selfish inconsideration in terms of dollars and cents; yet I question if his stubborn allegiance to smoking is potentially any more ruinous to your prosperity and happiness than is your inclination to nag about a thing that can't be helped.

• • • •

I once heard a bit of homely philosophy which I believe applies to this case: two things we should never worry about; one is the thing we can help; the other, the thing we can't help. In other words, what can't be cured must be endured, as gracefully as possible.

Eclipse of Virtue Seen With Decline Of Individualism

VIRTUE is a quality that has almost disappeared from present-day existence, believes Paul Valery, head of the French Academy. Man's tendency to desert individualism for collectivism is to blame for the eclipse of virtue, M. Valery is convinced.

"Virtue is an individualist quality," he said recently while making the annual monetary awards to winners of the de Montyou prizes. "But now the world, after having been engaged for centuries in developing the individualism of man and in securing his freedom and individual place in politics, law, literature, morals and social life, has turned to the conception of man existing merely as part of a collective organization in which liberty is sacrificed and individual excellence and distinction are out of place."

Not only is the quality of virtue considered unimportant in present-day life, but the word itself is seldom used today except in ironical vein, M. Valery added.

Indiana Dance Will Be Given Tuesday Night

The president of the society, Representative Louis Ludlow and Mrs. Ludlow will receive the guests. Assisting them will be Representative Virginia Jenckes, member of Congress from Indiana; Senator and Mrs. Sherman Minton and Senator and Mrs. Frederick Van Nuys.

Others in the receiving line will be Thomas Littlepage, who was recently awarded a medal as the outstanding citizen of the District of Columbia, and Dr. R. R. Sayers, of the Public Health Service, also the recipient of a medal given for his distinctive contribution to medical science this year.

Dancing will begin at 9 o'clock and the floor show at 10:30 o'clock under the direction of Leonard Callahan, as master of ceremonies.

Presiding at the coffee tables will be Mrs. Patrick Maloney, Mrs. James Wallace Baldwin, Mrs. Jenckes, Mrs. John Mock, Mrs. Ludlow, and Mrs. John W. Boehne, jr. Assisting in serving will be Miss Virginia Jenckes, Mrs. John J. Reinhard, Mrs. John M. Hogan, Mrs. Leonard Callahan, Miss Grace Sloan, Mrs. Franklyn Evanson and Mrs. Oswald Ryan.

Dinner at Mayflower.

DR. S. JOSEPHINE BAKER, of New York City, widely known child welfare authority, will be among the honor guests at the "Birth Control Comes of Age" dinner at the Mayflower Hotel Tuesday. This dinner will be in commemoration of the twenty-first anniversary of the American birth control movement.

Dr. Ira S. Wile, of New York City, will be toastmaster. Lowell Thomas, writer and news commentator, will also participate in the program.

Zonta Club Bridge Party.

FOR the benefit of the permanent work loan fund, the Zonta Club will give a bridge party at 8 o'clock tonight in the lounge of the Dodge Hotel.

Through this fund deserving young women are advanced money to continue training in their chosen professions. So far the Zonta Club has assisted 20 young women to complete their studying.

Mrs. Florence Sindell and Miss Ann Sorber, accompanied by Mrs. Emily Dickinson, will present a musical program.

Alumnae Council Meeting.

THE annual meeting of the Alumnae Council will be held at 3 p. m. next Friday, when reports will be heard from the board of directors, the executive board and the alumnae fund committee.

Dr. William M. Lewis, president of Lafayette College, will be the guest of honor at the dinner next Saturday, which will mark the close of the Alumnae Council sessions. He will address the 65 council members on "Alumni Colleges and Adult Education Projects in the Colleges." Mary E. Woolley, president, will preside at the dinner.

The alumnae of the Immaculate Conception Academy will hold its annual subscription dance for the benefit of the academy next Saturday.

Members of the committee in charge are Miss Dorothy Newell, chairman; Miss Florence Davis, Miss Martha Slagle, Miss Elizabeth Swadley, Miss Dorothy Mattingly, Miss Clara Magruder, Miss Peggy Bogue, Miss Olive Summers, Miss Doris Payne and Miss Dorothy Brown.

All members of the District of Columbia League of American Pen Women have been invited to a tea in honor of the national and District of Columbia executive boards from 4 to 6 o'clock tomorrow at 3401 Macomb street northwest. The hostesses will be Mrs. Richard L. Hoxie and Mrs. Robert Clay Sherrill.

Washington Alumnae Club, of the National Honorary Musical Sorority, Mu Phi Epsilon, will celebrate Valentine's Day with a dinner dance Monday night at the Shoreham Hotel. Mrs. Isabelle P. Middlekauff is in chage of the arrangements. Miss Carol B. Wagner is publicity chairman.

Package Cuts Kitchen Work Of Housewives

Gift Section of Downtown Store Features Lemon Squeezettes.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

AN EFFICIENCY expert who had given some study to housekeeping problems made a suggestion to a manufacturer. The result was the neat little packages displayed in the notions department of a downtown store.

It contains numerous essentials which make the general duties of a housewife lighter by hundreds of steps. In one fairly small box come a dishcloth which has been especially processed to make it sourproof; a utility cloth for wiping off the drain board and the kitchen table; a dust cloth that is so absorbent it literally blots up the dust, and a hot pan holder which has sufficient inner linings to make it burnproof. Besides these there is a choice of a window cloth which cleans and shines glass and a silver polishing cloth which keeps your sliver like new.

The housekeeper who has all these at her beck and call is prepared for any kitchen duty. The complete package costs little and proves a convenience par excellence.

Lemon Squeezettes.

The hostess who asks her tea guest, "And will you have lemon?" should use the unique little lemon squeezettes featured now in the gift section of a downtown store. These are in reality small metal clips which fasten around the edge of a lemon slice. They enable you to pick up the lemon and squeeze the juice without getting your hands the least bit sticky.

The squeezettes come six to a card and the cost is small.

Compacts at Reduced Prices.

Those of you who shopped for compacts at Christmas will remember those small flat round ones with the petit point tops that were selling for $2.95. Now those same compacts and others with handpainted tops are reduced to $1.25.

These dainty and different little vanities were imported from France, and always prove a welcome gift. Now that they are selling out at this interesting price you should keep them in mind for party prizes or approaching birthdays.

New Patterns in Chintz.

Are you a chintz enthusiast? If so, you will find a haven in the drape department of a downtown store. Here you can see all the newest patterns in chintzes and you'll readily understand why they've been referred to as exciting and unusual. One particular pattern is a conventionalized treatment of sailboats, waves and life preservers. This is called "Newport." Just as definitely fashion news are others called "Rambling Rose," "Chinese Chippendale," "Mandarin" and "Polka."

One called "Lido" is particularly interesting. It is a tile effect in delicate shades especially appropriate for the bathroom.

Cruise Jewelry.

Naturally those who were southward bound literally gobbled up the cruise jewelry displayed in a downtown store. Now the stay-at-homes are finding it irresistible, too, and highly flattering to gay little print dresses.

The jewelry comes in several patterns. There are anchor pins and chips, life-saver bracelets, pilot wheel brooches, and propeller pins. In fact, almost anything nautical you can think of you'll find in this jewelry display. It is made of a lightweight composition and touched off with red and blue lines.

Ornaments in Brass.

Those who are shopping for brassware will do well to visit a local store where a large center aisle table is devoted to this type of display. There are brass ash trays, vases, cigarette boxes, candlesticks, candy bowls, and nut dishes, and many small, interesting little ornaments.

In the same department you'll find numbers of attractive trays which are particularly adapted to the modern home as they're guaranteed alcohol proof.

Elephants for Luck.

Try your luck with an elephant. You know there's an old saying that elephants in the miniature or otherwise will inevitably bring their owners good luck. There are some elephant models now on display that are sure to take your fancy. They are carved from a light wood and left in their natural coloring. The tusks are imitation ivory.

Toothbrushes on Special.

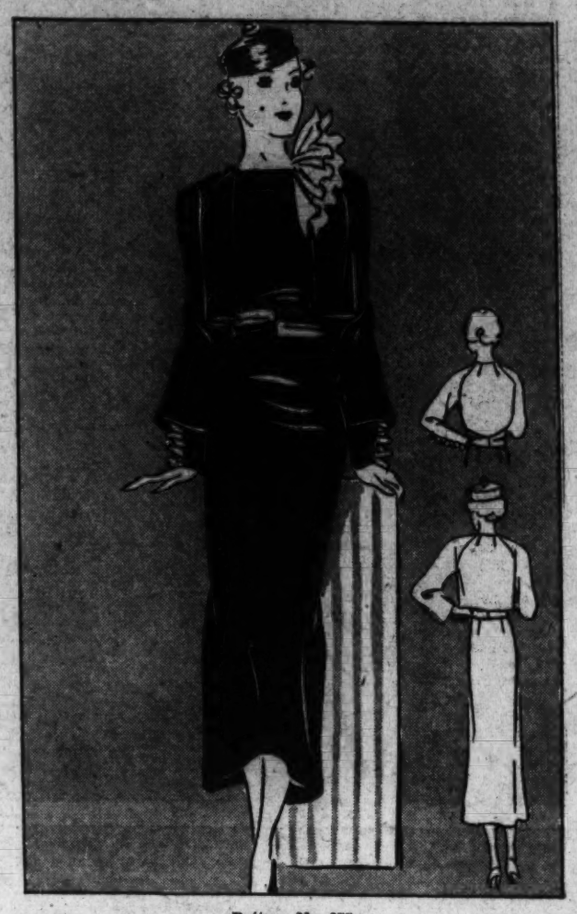
If you're in the market for toothbrushes you should take advantage of the excellent offer made by a local store. Here brushes which formerly sold for 30 cents apiece are reduced for the time being to 18 cents.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 105, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

Navajo Tongue to Be Taught.

Young Navajo Indians will soon have an opportunity to learn the language of their fathers. The Commissioner of Indian Affairs has just completed plans whereby the Navajo language will be taught at an Indian institute in the Southwest.

Light Accents Add Interest to Dark Frock



Pattern No. 877.

THE DISCRIMINATING use of light accents on a dark frock makes this an interesting design. It is a refreshing change from the usual dark street frock. The little collarless bolero has seven-eighths length raglan sleeves—just short enough to show the frill on the frock sleeve. Yes, the dress can be worn without the bolero. The blouse of the gown buttons diagonally to the left side. The skirt is slightly flared.

This pattern is cut in sizes 14 to 20; 32 to 38. Complete yardage requirements are given on the pattern envelope. An accurate and easily followed instruction chart is included in every pattern.

AIR STEWARDESS

By VIDA HURST.

Irene Gardner becomes an air stewardess so that the thrill and adventure of being far above petty troubles will help her to forget Dr. Bart Ralston. Bart plans to marry Peggy Reagan, daughter of a famous surgeon, merely to further his ambition for a medical career.

In a few months Irene is no longer disturbed by thoughts of Bart. Instead she finds herself drawn to gay, impudent Barney O'Sullivan, one of the pilots. Despite her protests, he accepts the challenge of her resistance to love-making and kisses her soundly. Even while she protests, Irene knows that she couldn't resist his kisses.

Peggy is jealous of Bart's renewed interest in Irene, but later realizes she may as well face the fact that Bart doesn't love her. She assures Irene solemnly that she has come to her senses.

One of Irene's uniforms disappears, and she is puzzled over the mystery of who could have taken it from her room.

Irene went home, determined to ransack the apartment in her effort to find the uniform, but this proved unnecessary. She had no sooner opened her closet door than the uniform appeared, hanging neatly in place among her other dresses.

But it couldn't have been there when she looked before. She must be crazy. While she was wondering about it, the telephone rang. It was the chief stewardess and her voice was serious.

"Come back right away, Irene! I want to talk with you."

"Where were you Monday morning between 1 and 3?"

"At home in bed. Why?"

Who Was the Girl?

"A girl was seen drinking in a speakeasy in Emeryville between 1 and 3 that morning wearing an air hostess' uniform."

"I know it wasn't you because this girl was a blonde but all the blondes on the line—there are only five of them—happened to be working. You admit you lost your uniform?"

"Yes, but I found it when I went home today. Hanging in my closet, where I thought it had put it."

"Do you know of any one who might have worn it and put it back later?"

"I live with Paula's sister," she admitted reluctantly. "But I can't believe she would do such a thing."

Eve Was Not There.

"Better get rid of her, Irene! Because of the fact that the girl was a blonde and couldn't have been one of our girls, nothing will be done about it this time. But if it happens again—in your uniform—no matter how innocent you may be, it will cost you your job."

Irene went home, prepared to have it out with Eve. But the other girl did not return.

She was sitting in the firelight, wearing a plain little dress she used to wear on her days off at the hospital, when there was a knock at the door and she opened it to Bart.

"I took a chance on finding you at home," he cried. "I had to come. Peggy has told me everything."

"Do you mean about her trip to Los Angeles?"

Engagement Broken.

"Yes, and the part you played in it. Darling, you're wonderful! I've always known it. I've always been in love with you."

She drew away from his encircling arms.

"Just a moment, Bart! Sit down and explain it to me."

"Everything is going to be all right for us, Irene. I'm so happy I'm still in a daze.

"Peggy has broken our engagement. She did it of her own accord. She says she knows now she never loved me any more than I did her."

"But your work with Dr Reagan?" Irene interrupted.

"Stephen Reagan is the finest person who ever lived. I'd give my life for him. We talked for almost two hours this afternoon and he told me, no matter what had happened between Peggy and me, he still wanted me for his assistant.

Forgetting herself, Irene leaned toward him.

"That's wonderful, Bart. You deserve it and I'm so happy for you. I can imagine how much it means to you."

"It means the first free breath I've drawn for weeks," the doctor admitted, throwing back his head, his eyes shining. "It means regaining my self-respect."

Still Loved Her.

"It also means that we can be married at once, darling! There is no reason under heaven why we should wait even another month."

She was pushing him away from her with determined arms.

"But there is, a very important reason . . ."

The doctor laughed, and imprisoned her fluttering hands in a grasp like steel.

"Don't be capricious and feminine at this point. Haven't I suffered enough? What is to be gained by punishing me?"

"I'm not," she denied. "I forgave you a long time ago. It's too late now, that's all."

"It's never too late if we love each other."

"But that's just it," she insisted. "We don't."

"I adore you. I always did. I never once said I didn't."

"But I don't love you any more, Bart. I'm sorry, but it's all over."

Unwilling to believe her even then, Bart asked. "Do you mean that you have fallen in love with someone else?"

"Yes, I do," Irene admitted.

Dummy Talks.

The value of the exposed dummy to both sides lies in the location of some known cards and of others that may be inferred. When experts defend, the inferences drawn are often so clear that the dummy figuratively speaks—but it should not be forgotten that the dummy played by a shrewd declarer sometimes lies.

South, Dealer.

	♠ J 7 ♡ K J 4 ◇ K Q J 5 ♣ J 10 7 4
♠ Q 8 5 4 ♡ 9 8 7 ◇ 10 8 4 ♣ K 6 5	N W E S	♠ A 10 6 3 2 ♡ A 6 5 3 ◇ 9 7 6 ♣ 3
	♠ K 9 ♡ Q 10 2 ◇ A 5 2 ♣ A Q 9 3 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♣	Pass	1◇	Pass
1NT	Pass	2NT	Pass
3NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

The Play.

The West player considered his spades worthless, since reentries were conspicuous by their absence, and opened the top of his three-card heart suit. When the dummy went down, declarer instantly noted the spade suit was wide open and a shift from East was inevitable. The King of hearts went up from dummy which the Ace won. The expected spade return was made, up came the King of spades without hesitation and when that held, the Jack of spades was carefully played from dummy. Declarer then led his five of diamonds, winning with the King in dummy, and returned the Jack of clubs, which lost to West's King. West went into a long huddle with himself since it was clear that his next lead might well be the crucial play of the hand. He had noted that declarer had led the five of diamonds, on which his partner had played the six; the deuce was missing. It was possible his partner still held the Ace and had started an echo to indicate the master card. It was obvious that the club or diamond return could do no good, the choice was between the major suits. Did East hold the Ace-Queen-ten of hearts and return a spade merely to obtain another heart lead from West or was the spade return attempting to set up that suit? Declarer had put up the King of hearts in dummy and on the King of spades the dummy had discarded the Jack, which he would have done had he held Ace-King-Ten to prepare for a second round finesse. That's all West knew. He finally guessed wrong and returned the heart, after which declarer took the rest of the tricks.

It is possible West might have guessed wrong in any event, but due credit must be given declarer for giving him all the reason in the world to make the wrong play.

Lexicographer Assails 'Okie-Doke' Expression

On being told yesterday that the "okie-doke" retort was gaining wide prevalence as the latest derivation of "O. K.," Dr. Vizetelly declared its use indicated a mental age of not more than 10 years.

Louisiana Gumbo Recipe Is Awarded First Prize in Post's Weekly Contest

By Dorothea Duncan.

THE RECIPES submitted in The Post's contest this week prove that America has many soups truly representative of this country. Here are the prize winners:

First prize, $3, is awarded Mrs. Lilly Ferguson, 811 Philadelphia avenue, Silver Spring, Md., for her recipe for Louisiana gumbo; second prize, $2, to Miss Myrtle Keys, 10 Quincy street, Chevy Chase, Md., tart lima bean soup, and third, $1, Mrs. Walter E. Reid, 1621 T street northwest, dried split green pea and vegetable soup.

Honorable mention is awarded Miss Dorothy Nalley, 371 Charles street, Winchester, Va., for Philadelphia pepper pot; Mrs. Caroline E. Bacon, 3044 R street northwest, peanut soup; Mrs. Cora S. James, Route 2, Annapolis, Md., oyster bisque, and Mrs. Geraldine Busher, 13 Second street northeast, Friday night chowder.

Louisiana Gumbo.

1 stewing chicken, about 3 pounds
12 okra pods
1 onion
2 cups strained tomatoes
1 cup sliced celery
2 teaspoons salt
2 quarts water
1-3 cup rice

Clean the chicken, cut up as for stewing, put in cold water, add salt and put on to cook. Cook slowly until meat leaves bones, remove chicken and separate from bones. Return chicken to broth, add more water to have two quarts, then add sliced okra, tomatoes, celery, thinly sliced onion and rice. Cook gently about half hour longer. Stir to prevent sticking and add more water if too thick.

Tart Lima Bean Soup.

1 small onion sliced
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon dry mustard
2 teaspoons brown sugar
7 cups cold water
1 medium-sized carrot, sliced
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon vinegar

Soak the dried lima beans in one cup cold water at least four hours, or overnight. Then drain. Combine beans with rest of the water, vegetables and all seasonings except brown sugar and vinegar. Cover, bring to boil, simmer gently two hours. Next rub through a coarse sieve. Add brown sugar and vinegar. Heat and serve with a small lump of butter in each soup dish. Sprinkle with paprika or minced hard cooked egg. Serves six.

Dried Split Green Pea and Vegetable Soup.

1 cup dried split green peas
1 medium-sized onion
6 cups cold water

Clean, rinse, then soak peas overnight in two quarts cold water. In morning, rinse peas, put in large kettle with onion, sliced thin, six cups cold water, simmer until reduced to pulp, then rub through a fine sieve.

While peas are cooking prepare other vegetables.

1 medium-sized can tomatoes—cut tomatoes fine and salt to taste and simmer 20 minutes. 1 medium-sized carrot, 1 small turnip, 2 large outside leaves of cabbage, coarse stalks and tender leaves of 1 bunch celery, leftover vegetables (except potato) or additional green vegetables, enough to make about 3 or 4 cups when cooked. Chop all vegetables fine, cover with cold water, add salt, simmer until tender.

Combine all vegetables with pea puree, bring to a boil, simmer one-half hour, stirring occasionally. Add salt and pepper to taste.

This makes a delicious economical soup which can be varied by using any kind of dried peas or beans as a basis.

Philadelphia Pepper Pot.

Put 2 pounds of tripe and a knuckle of veal in a soup pot. Cover with cold water. Add a pod of red pepper (or cayenne) and boil until tender. Remove, and chop fine. Return to the liquid and if there is not enough liquid, add more boiling water.

Flavor with ½ teaspoon sweet marjoram, sweet basil and thyme, two sliced onions, some sliced potatoes. Add salt and when these have boiled until tender, add a lump of butter.

Make dumplings as follows:

1 cup flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt

Milk enough to make a soft dough.

Sift the flour, baking powder and salt together. Add the milk. Roll out (not too thin), cut into small cubes and lay on top of stew. Cover closely and cook for 20 minutes without raising the cover and serve hot.

Peanut Soup.

One large potato, 1½ cups celery, 1 white onion, 1½ cups peanut butter, 2½ cups milk and ¼ teaspoon salt.

Cut up and cook potatoes, celery and onion until soft, and put through sieve. Add peanut butter, milk, salt. Bring to boiling point, stirring constantly, or cook in double boiler. Serves four.

Recipes for Pie To Be Featured In Post Contest

HERE IS a recipe contest that every Washington housewife will want to enter, for it concerns that great American favorite—pie. Any recipe boasting the name pie, whether it be a two-crust affair, crisscross, or meringue, is eligible for entrance in The Post's recipe contest next week.

Send your favorite recipe for pie to Dorothea Duncan, Home Economics Editor of The Washington Post. Three prizes will be awarded, $3 for the best recipe, $2 for the second best and $1 for the third best. Remember that recipes should be received on or before Thursday of next week.

Type your recipes if possible. If not, write them neatly in ink. All recipes should be checked carefully for omissions. The name and address of the sender should appear on each sheet submitted.

How To KEEP WELL

By Dr. Irving S. Cutler.

Spastic Paralysis in Children.

IN early eighteenth century literature the word spastic was used to denote a condition of muscular "tightening" or "drawing," sometimes associated with pain. Later the term became more general and was used to describe involuntary contractions of muscles and their jerky, spasmodic movements.

The symptoms are quite characteristic. There is a stiffness and irritability of the muscles and a lack of control. Sometimes the effort of reaching for an object with the hand or of taking a step will increase the spasm, with the result that the movement is awkward, jerky, and sometimes impossible of execution.

On the whole these children form a group of unfortunates for whom surgery can offer only partial relief through the severing of certain nerves or the transplanting or lengthening of tendons.

The child with spastic paralysis feels physical discomfort and is in constant fear of falling and being injured. At the age of 5 or 6 these children have the greatest difficulty in adjusting themselves when their older and younger brothers and sisters seem so resourceful, so independent, and so happy. The best that they can do, as far as getting about is concerned, is a shuffling gait or an exceedingly awkward walk.

In the new school of treatment the child is taught to relax before muscle training or muscle reeducation is attempted. In this way an effort is made to secure control of muscular movements that otherwise render conscious activity so grotesque. If the element of fear can be removed the first step in relaxation will have been accomplished.

Nice Protest Fails to Stay $2 Tag Bill

Phoebus, Clark Insist on Fulfillment of Pledge.

Creation of Office of Lieutenant Governor Also Asked.

(Staff Correspondent of The Post).

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 8.—A bill providing $2 automobile license tags, notwithstanding Gov. Nice's admission that such a proposal is impracticable in view of the existing financial stringency, was placed on file today before the General Assembly adjourned for the week-end to reconvene Monday night.

Other measures placed on file included provisions for a general registration of voters in Washington County, creation of the office of lieutenant governor, prohibiting a general reassessment of property proposed for 1935 and erasing from the statute books all laws pertaining to petty loan companies.

The automobile tag bills were introduced simultaneously in the Senate by Senator Phoebus (Republican), Somerset County, and Representative Allen Clark (Republican), Anne Arundel County. The $2 tag proposal was one of Gov. Nice's pet campaign slogans. But yesterday he finally admitted this promise would not be carried out until the next biennium.

Governor Protests.

The Governor attempted to persuade Senator Phoebus and Delegate Clark not to offer the bills, but they stoutly maintained the campaign pledge must be fulfilled at least to that extent. The Governor worked out a plan in his budget whereby the horsepower license fee was reduced from 32 to 20 cents as a substitute, making the average reduction in licenses $8.30 to $5.20, revenue from which he pointed out would net $1,314,921.26, compared to $2,103,874 under present regulations. Senator Phoebus said $2 tags would produce approximately $450,000 annually. He asserted that the budget can be cut as much as $2,000,000, which would more than offset the loss in auto fees.

Senator Davis (Republican), Caroline County, sponsored the bill to create the post of lieutenant-governor, who would preside over the State Senate, and be next in succession to the Governor, in event of death. A constitutional amendment would be required to effect the change, and the bill carries a referendum on that score.

Abandonment of the plan for a general reassessment is embodied in a bill by Senator Harold Cobourn (Democrat), Cecil County. This measure is part of the legislative program of the County Commissioners Association, the objection being that a reassessment would be too costly at this time.

Milk Commission Urged.

Delegate Knapp (Democrat), Baltimore County, fathered the bill to set up a milk control commission. The commission would consist of three members, the chairman to receive an annual salary of $4,000, and the two assistants, $3,000 each. The commission would have general supervision over production, transportation, processing, standardizing, storage, etc., of all milk furnished in the State.

In presenting the bill for a general registration of voters in Washington County, Senator Ernest W. Miller (Republican) said that no such registration has been held since 1914, in consequence of which books now in use are all cluttered up.

Delegate C. William Baer (Republican), Allegany County, sponsored the bill providing for a 10-day race meeting at the Cumberland track, under auspices of the Cumberland Fair Association. The bill also would permit betting at the track. It was referred to the Ways and Means Committee.

Delegate Baer also is author of the bill to wipe out laws regulating petty loan companies. Several proposals directed against these concerns already are on file. One measure directs the State banking commission to furnish information pertaining to the general operations of the companies, while the others are directed at reducing the monthly interest charges from 3½ to as low as 1½ per cent.

Other Legislation.

Senate.

By Phoebus (Somerset) and Callan (Baltimore City)—Joint resolution directing the public service commission to make a revaluation of properties of gas and electric companies with the view to bringing about reduction of rates. The resolution states that present rates are higher in proportion to other commodities.

By Fine (Baltimore City)—Bill empowering the Governor to appoint a board of three parole commissioners, instead of one as at present; salary of the chairman to be $3,000 annually and two assistants $2,500 each.

By Kimble (Allegany County)—Bill providing for another three-man board for examination and licensing of bartenders; salaries of examiners to be $1,000 each.

By Lezore (Frederick County)—Bill exempting the Emmitsburg Railroad from State taxes in Frederick County.

House.

By Baker (Baltimore City)—Joint resolution to continue the existence of the land-law commission with directions to prepare a report covering 1935 and 1936, to be submitted to the Governor and the General Assembly of 1937.

By Friedel (Baltimore)—Bill to require all automobiles to be equipped with shatter-proof glass after July 1. This measure is designed to correct a previous bill by the same author in that its provisions would apply only on new cars. The proposal is in accord with legislation adopted in 15 other States and has been indorsed by the American Automobile Association and other organizations.

By Evans (Somerset County)—Bill authorizing licensed crab packers to buy, sell or hold sponge crabs caught in Virginia waters between April 1 and June 30.

The Senate passed the bill by Senator Brice, Kent County, placing all motor boats under provisions of the State gasoline tax.

The House of Delegates passed and sent to the Governor the bill by Senator Stedman Prescott, Montgomery County, authorizing the county treasurer to appoint six clerks at salaries of $1,500 annually, and an assistant treasurer at $2,400.

The Senate passed and sent to the House Senator Cooskey's bill requiring a license for huckstering in Charles County. The measure does not affect farmers of the county selling their own produce.

Firemen Aid Pledged.

Gov. Nice today assured volunteer firemen of Maryland that he would include in his supplemental budget $20,231 to provide pensions for firemen's widows, and firemen injured in line of duty.

A committee consisting of Noble C. Rushe, of Hyattsville, president of the firemen's association, and Thomas G. Basil, Annapolis, chairman of the legislative committee, conferred with the Governor after it was learned that the Governor's budget, now before the legislature, included only $5,000 for pension purposes. When told that the supplemental budget would include $20,231 as a grand total, the committee expressed satisfaction.

Officials Deny Guilt; Post Liquor Plot Bail

Nearly Half of 34 Defendants Surrender in Virginia Conspiracy Case as Wholesale Service of Capiases Is Begun.

Rocky Mount, Va., Feb. 8 (AP).—A wholesale service of capiases today brought to a climax the return of a Federal grand jury indictment naming 34 individuals and a corporation as conspirators in an alleged liquor ring in the mountain country of Franklin County.

Federal deputy marshals moved on this town a few hours after the return of the indictment to begin the drive of placing under bond the men against whom the Government directed its fight as the "higher-ups."

Headed by C. C. Lee, Commonwealth's attorney of Franklin County, the accused promptly began to appear before the commissioners to obtain bond. Lee's bail was put at $5,000. The men were bailed to the Federal court in Roanoke March 4. A number of them promptly issued denials of any guilt.

The indictment, returned at Harrisonburg after months of investigation, charges conspiracy to violate internal revenue laws relating to the distillation of whisky.

Accused Officials Deny Guilt.

Lee issued a statement denying the charge and asserting he would not resign. Deputy Sheriff H. T. Abshire defended his record and said he was positive the charges were born of enmities growing out of his work as a law enforcement officer.

Charles D. Fox, jr., United States commissioner in Roanoke, is assisting Russell Davis, local commissioner, in taking bail. During the day Col. Thomas Bailey, of the Federal force, who had a prominent part in the investigations, arrived with Deputy Marshals M. M. Caffey, A. W. Joyce and A. M. Arnold, to assist in execution of the capiases.

Shortly after Lee appeared before the commissioners, Charles C. Greer, a special county officer, arrived and was placed under $1,500 bond.

Edgar A. Beckett, former State prohibition officer, was the third man, his bond being placed at $5,000.

Others Who Give Bond.

Others appearing were:

G. L. Martin, bonded for $5,000, with W. A. Martin as surety.
Howard L. Maxey, bonded for $1,500, with R. O. Hale as surety.
David Nicholson, bonded for $4,000, with his wife, Florence, as surety.
Posey Jones, bonded for $2,000, with A. Fonzie Hodges as surety.
Guy W. Nolen, bonded for $4,000, with H. E. Stanley as surety.
Willard R. Hodges, bonded for $5,000, with W. E. Bennett as surety.
Charles H. and Walter R. Turner, bonded for $5,000 each, with C. M. Turner, their father, as surety.

Samuel R. Price, of Roanoke, announced he would join H. D. Dillard and Warren T. Messick in defense of perhaps a majority of the men.

Officers returned to Franklin County Thomas C. Cundiff, Eugene Pugh and Alfred Smith, who appeared as witnesses before the grand jury at Harrisonburg. The former two are under sentence to short terms in the penitentiary and face other charges in connection with jail breaks.

In addition to naming 34 persons as principal conspirators, the indictment lists 55 others as co-conspirators.

Welcomes Probe, Says Lee.

Lee, who is charged with having received protection money from handlers of illicitly distilled liquor, pointed out in his statement of denial that a person charged by a grand jury has no opportunity of defending himself. He said he would welcome investigation of his official activities.

Sixty-eight overt acts charged by the indictment include:

That county officers removed blockades so that rum-carrying automobiles could get through safely.

That the sheriff directed his deputies not to serve warrants on liquor law violators until they had been warned to remove the liquor.

Gambling Fought At Hagerstown

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Aroused by the bill to be introduced in the Legislature to place an annual license fee of $2,500 upon bookmaking establishments here, a movement was launched here today against gambling of all types.

The campaign, as planned by opponents of gambling of all kinds, will be carried into the churches of the city similar to that against proposed Sunday movies here, with an open letter to the Ministerial Association requesting an expression of condemnation, while an investigation by the February grand jury which convenes Monday will also be sought.

One of the bookmakers here who operates several establishments has given approval of the proposed bill of State Senator Ernest W. Miller, of Washington County, for a $2,500 license for each establishment. This bookmaker believes that such a license would eliminate all of the branch bookmaking establishments and would reduce the number of persons who make 50 cent bets.

Death Takes Miss Cockrill At Age of 93

Historian of Civil War Succumbs at Home in Charles Town.

Melvin F. Shepley and Miss Agnes Endler Also Expire.

Charles Town, W. Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Miss Mary H. Cockrill, 93, daughter of the late David H. Cockrill, a Confederate veteran, died here early this morning.

Miss Cockrill, who lived her entire life in Charles Town, was known as one of the foremost Civil War historians in this section. She was an ardent Democrat and voted the ticket the past election in November.

Miss Cockrill witnessed the John Brown outbreak at Harpers Ferry and could relate many instances of the Civil War when the two armies were fighting in the Valley of Virginia. The scaffold on which John Brown and his band were executed in 1859-60, following their trial and conviction in the county courthouse in Charles Town, was built by Miss Cockrill's father. She was a descendant of John Harris, for whom the City of Harrisburg, Pa., was named.

The survivors are three nephews, Frank Cockrill, of Charles Town; Fred Cockrill, of Canton, Ohio, and Joseph Cockrill, of Baltimore, and several nieces.

Funeral services will be held here Sunday afternoon.

Melvin Shepley Expires.

Myersville, Md., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Funeral services will be held tomorrow for Melvin F. Shepley, 62, former register of wills for Frederick County and a lifelong resident of this place, who died suddenly yesterday from a heart attack. His body was found in the yard of his home by his wife.

A stanch Republican, he represented his home district for many years on the county committee. In 1899, he was a clerk in the House of Delegates at Annapolis and later became postmaster at Myersville, a post which he held for a number of years. For some years he was a deputy in the county clerk's office and in 1930 was elected register of wills.

Besides his wife, formerly Miss Bessie Butts, he is survived by one son, D. Carroll Shepley.

Death Claims Miss Endler.

Romney, W. Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon for Miss Agnes Otilia Endler, 67, teacher in the Romney schools for the past 48 years continuously, and last member of one of the early West Virginia families, who was found dead at her home here today by Sheriff G. M. Sanders.

When she failed to appear for school room duties this morning, Principal S. W. Judy sent a child to inquire. The child could not get into the home. The sheriff was called and forced a way in to find Miss Endler had died of heart failure.

She was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. David Endler and came here from Shepherdstown, where the Endler family was among the pioneers. She was a charter member of the local chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, charter member and first regent of the Daughters of the American Revolution here.

Two Badly Burned Fleeing Garage Fire

Baltimore, Feb. 8 (AP).—George R. Huggins, 34, of High Point, N. C., and Lucien Gregory, 33, Kernersville, N. C., employes of a trucking concern, were badly burned when they with Jerry Barbour, 31, High Point, fought their way through iron barred windows to escape a fire in a garage here.

Monoxide Overcomes Boy.

Centreville, Md., Feb. 8 (AP).—Failing to arouse after an automobile ride with his father over roads nearly blocked by snow, Little Laurence Wood was revived after considerable effort. The boy had been overcome by carbon-monoxide gas while riding in the back seat of the car.

Plea to Oust Meek Denied By Virginia

Agriculture Board Fails to Offer Comment on Decision.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 8 (AP).—Charges of incompetency made against J. H. Meek, director of the Virginia division of markets by apple growers who today asked for his removal from office, were dismissed by the State board of agriculture tonight.

In exonerating the director of the markets division of the agricultural department, the board appointed a committee to adjust inspection differences which may arise in the future between the inspection service and horticulturists in the State. On the, commission are State Agriculture Commissioner George W. Koiner, W. W. Sproul, chairman of the board of agriculture, and one other member of the board to be named by the chairman.

This action was taken after the board spent the day listening to arguments over a petition presented by G. Purcell McCue, Greenwood apple producer. The petition requested Meek's ouster after charging he had "failed to command the confidence and cooperation of the producers," that his division "does not measure up to adequate requirements," that the division chief "does not possess the confidence, respect and loyalty of his field force," that he is "without practical knowledge of the service his department is charged with rendering" and that he has "failed to develop outside markets for Virginia produce."

McCue Leads Growers' Case.

The case of the growers led by McCue was directed in the hearing by State Senator John Battle, of Albemarle.

The commission's decision was announced without comment after an executive session which followed the hearing.

McCue brought with him growers and shippers of apples from the Roanoke, Charlottesville, Staunton and Winchester areas.

W. H. Richards, Winchester apple exporter who was an inspector in the division of markets for four years, testified "that Meek is a 'thoroughly impractical' and incompetent director," as the hearing opened.

Later witnesses testified they had no personal quarrels against the division director but that "his personality seemed to be the cause of a growing dissatisfaction among both the growers whose apples had to be graded and the inspectors working under him."

Major Belittles Realty 'Fraud'

Hammerman Brothers Upheld by Ex-Salesman in Baltimore Trial.

Baltimore, Feb. 8 (AP).—Herman Hammerman was called to the witness stand today in Federal court where he and his brother, Samuel L. Hammerman, have been on trial all the week on mail fraud charges in connection with real estate developments in eight States.

Earlier, Maj. Robert Metcalf, an Army officer, testified that he had been employed by the Hammerman interests as a salesman and manager at a number of developments from 1919 to 1923. He asserted he had made no extravagant promises of real estate improvements in sales talks, in fact, that he and other salesmen had been instructed not to do so.

Change Sought In Franchise

Tax-PayingRequirement of Law Under Attack in Ocean City.

Ocean City, Md., Feb. 8 (AP).—A change in the franchise of Ocean City is being advocated by residents of the popular summer resort to abolish the limitation to property owners who had paid their taxes and permit owners who have not paid their taxes to vote at the city's elections.

In order to be a legal voter, it has been necessary for a resident to own property valued at more than $100 or to own stock in a local corporation valued at more than $100 and to have paid taxes for the current year.

Under this provision of the charter, the summer residents owning property here, even though their legal residences are elsewhere, can vote if their taxes have been paid.

The citizens, advocating a bill be adopted by the General Assembly to modify this requirement, point out that some of the more prominent all-year-round residents have been deprived of their votes because their taxes had not been paid at election although they have been paid shortly afterward.

The proposal would eliminate the tax-paying requirement, but the property ownership requirement would be retained.

Power Firm To Consider Cut in Rates

Chairman Ozlin Tells of Fair Value Policy to Aid Public.

Richmond, Feb. 8 (AP).—Representatives of the Northern Virginia Power Co., serving Winchester and other Virginia cities, today conferred with the State corporation commission and promised to give consideration to a suggestion that the company reduce its rates.

The conference was held in line with the commission's effort to make electricity cheaper for users throughout the State. Yesterday the Virginia Electric & Power Co. announced a reduction amounting to $402,000 a years.

Chairman Thomas W. Ozlin said in discussing the meeting today that "the commission has recently pursued the policy of initiating discussions with the electric companies for the consideration of their rates and insisting upon those reductions that are jutified by economic and efficient operation of the property devoted to public use at its fair value.

"This policy has been successful to a marked degree. Substantial reductions have been obtained for the public without the long delay incident to protracted hearings and possible appeals to the courts; the companies and the consumers have been saved the considerable costs of rate contests and the commission has obtained the opportunity to prove its contention that lower rates, within reason, will broaden the use of electricity and build back progressively the loss of income caused by the reduction."

Sells Automobile Through Post Ads

Mr. Comrey, Hyattsville Auto & Supply Co., Hyattsville, Md., is a daily user of Post Classified Ads. He is a firm believer in consistent advertising. To cite one instance of how he finds Post Classified Ads effective he tells the following result story: "I had a 1934 Buick Sedan for sale. I advertised it daily in 'The Automobile for Sale' columns of The Post for ten days. Sold it on the tenth day to a Post reader. And, incidentally, it was on the coldest day of the year that the sale was closed." Thank you, Mr. Comrey.

The value of consistent advertising in wearing down sales resistance is an oft-told tale. But perhaps Mr. Comrey's striking example will point out to prospective advertisers more forcefully why they should utilize Post Classified regularly.

Buying Spree Ended by Yawkey

Baseball's 'Angel' Folds His Wings With Red Sox 'All Set.'

Cronin Right Type for Job, Worth Price, Owner Says.

By Jack Cuddy.

NEW YORK, Feb. 8 (U.P.).—Tom Yawkey, baseball's "angel," ripped off his wings today.

The young millionaire owner of Boston's Red Sox, who invested nearly $3,000,000 in the national pastime and boosted the player market to a new high, announced, "I am through buying; now let the market drop."

Egad! What a bitter blow to certain other American League owners who may not have regarded Tom as an angel but certainly sang "I'll string along with you" when their bills came due and they wished to exchange players for ready cash. Surely—Tom could not be serious about this?

"But I am very serious about it," declared the brown-haired, broad-shouldered chap in the Oxford blue suit, drumming on the glass top of his downtown office desk.

"All Set Now."

But why was Tom suddenly tying a double knot on his bulging wallet? "Well—Eddie Collins and I are all set now. We've got a club that we are confident will go places. I'm not saying we've got all the players we need, but we've got all the players we're going to buy. We're perfectly willing to do a little trading, if the boys will just forget that we're supposed to be philanthropists and come down to earth in the dickering."

Yes—Tom knew he was regarded as an "angel" for paying the highest price in baseball history to get Player-Manager Joe Cronin from shrewd Clark Griffith, of the Senators. And for buying up Lefty Grove, Rube Walberg, Max Bishop, Rick Ferrell, George Pipgras, Bill Weber, Fred Ostermueller, Carl Reynolds, Dick Porter and Wes Ferrell, etc.

"But don't forget," said the 32-year-old mining and lumber magnate, "I wouldn't have bought Cronin and the others for the money I paid for them if I didn't think they were worth that to me. Moreover, I haven't regretted a penny I've spent. The Red Sox are a business and pleasure with me. I've invested in the club, and soon it will be paying dividends. Watch us go this season, and watch the crowds at Fenway Park. Boston is a red-hot baseball town."

Gives Dog Race Views.

If Boston is such a hot baseball town, why did Yawkey refuse to let the Braves share Fenway Park with the Red Sox when the racing dogs threatened to crowd the National League out of Braves Field?

"Because I had no wish to encourage dog racing in Boston as a rival to baseball, and because I believe a baseball club and stadium should have an identity of its own, have its own following among the fans. To have the two clubs playing at one field would decrease the partisanship of Boston fans and be bad for both clubs. Don't forget I've spent a lot of money to create an identity for the Red Sox, and I've rebuilt Fenway Park so that it's one of the most modern in the circuit."

Why did he pay more than $200,000 for Cronin when he might have obtained Babe Ruth as manager? Because Yawkey thought Cronin exactly the type of man who would fit perfectly into his organization—an excellent shortstop and proven manager. He thought Ruth a great player and a splendid fellow, but no one knew anything about his managing ability.

And Lefty Grove, who cost Yawkey $125,000, but flopped in 1934 because of a bad arm. What about him? "Lefty had his teeth fixed and his tonsils removed last season. Poison in his system gave him his first lame arm. Near the end of the season he was in good shape. He proved that one day at Detroit. I'm confident he will win at least 18 games this season. The same with Rube Walberg, who was unable to pitch last year because of an infected finger. Rube is okay now. He should turn in about 18 victories, too."

'Totalizators' In Maryland Looming

Amendment May Be Added to Measure; Backed by Commission.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Installation of "totalizators" at all major race tracks in Maryland loomed as a probability today following a hearing of officials of the Maryland State Racing Commission before the ouse of Delegates Ways and Means Committee.

Jerris Spencer, jr., and Edwin Warfield., two of the three members of the commission, appeared and recommended approval of the pending bill before the legislature, which would reduce the daily tax paid by Laurel, Pimlico, Bowie and avre de Grace from $6,000 to $500. The measure also provides for increasing the tax collected by the State from 1 per cent to 2½ per cent of the daily turnover.

An amendment to the bill would make compulsory the installation of "totalizators" at Laurel, Bowie and Havre de Grace. The system is already in effect at Pimlico. Though the amendment did not receive a vote today, it appeared that the majority of the committee favored the measure, and it was approved by the commission officials.

Favored By Public.

It was estimated the cost of installation of the machines would be $15,000 to $17,000 at each track. It was agreed the public would be much in favor of the machines, which enable the exact odds to be known before each race.

Commission officials pledged that should the proposed racing bill become law they would require minimum purses at all major tracks of $800. Last year a minimum purse scale of $600 prevailed. With Northern tracks providing minimum purses of around $1,000, racing during 1934 suffered in Maryland. It was estimated that increases in total purses this season would amount to $140,000.

Another improvement contemplated by the commission should the bill pass is the installation of

Virginia Five Defeats Roanoke Team, 50-26

University, Va., Feb. 8 (AP).—Virginia's basket ball team continued its winning ways among State teams here tonight as it downed the Roanoke College Maroons, 50-26. It was the Cavaliers' sixth straight victory over State rivals.

The Maroons put up a stubborn fight early in the first half, but sharpshooting on the part of Rogers and Zeisberg, Cavalier forward and center, put the Virginians in a half-time lead, 24-16.

Golf Lead Held By Cox and Two Rivals

Laffoon Cards 69 to Tie for Top and Pays $52 Mutuel.

AGUA CALIENTE, Mexico, Feb. 8 (AP).—Wiffy Cox, of Brooklyn, took another important step toward the successful defense of his Agua Caliente Golf Sweepstakes title today by adding another par 71 to his total of 142 strokes, thereby retaining the lead at the half-way mark.

And, as was the case yesterday, he was tied for top position, this time with Ky Laffoon and Harry Cooper, a couple of Chicago clouters who cracked par to move up to the front rank.

Laffoon waded home with a 69, 2 under par, the best round of the tournament and an amazing score under adverse playing conditions.

Cooper Cards a 70.

Cooper, with two others, turned in a 70. The others were Mortie Dutra, Detroit, who shot his way into a tie for fourth with Byron Nelson, Texarkana, Tex., at 143, and Craig Wood, Deal, N. J. Wood had a two-round total of 145 to tie for sixth with Ben Loving, Petersburg, Va.

Laffoon's first place was worth $52 for $2 parimutuel tickets, none of which was his own.

Two besides Cox and Nelson were able to match par today—Ray Mangrum, Los Angeles, and Emil Mashie, Fitchburg, Mass. The latter two were 5 and 6 strokes back of the leading trio, respectively.

Those who yesterday had held the lead with Cox could not stand the pace. Clarence Clark, Bloomfield (N. J. pro, needed 76 strokes to get through the quagmire today, while Dr. Cliff Baker, Vancouver, Wash., shot a 77.

Mac Smith at 151.

MacDonald Smith, veteran Carnoustie Scot, quit the muddy scene of battle after shooting 74 for a 151 fo rthe 36 holes. He never has been able to conquer this long, troublesome course.

A six-way tie resulted at 146, four strokes back of the leaders. These were Henry Picard, North-South champion from Hershey, Pa., and Walter Hagen, veteran Detroit campaigner, with two 73s each; Jim Demaret, Galveston, Tex.; Ren Smith, Oak Park, Ill.; Ralph Guldahl, Los Angeles, and Willie Goggin, San Francisco.

Harold McSpaden, Kansas City, Kans., leading money winner of the winter golfing tours, shot a 76 today for 148, and Olin Dutra, national open champion, had 150, eight strokes behind the leaders.

Two former champions here fared even less well. George Von Elm stood ten strokes back with 152 and Fred Morrison had 154 strokes chalked up against himself.

Richmond Victorious Over W. & M., 46-20

Williamsburg, Va., Feb. 8 (AP).—The Richmond College Spiders defeated William and Mary here tonight, 46 to 20, in a long drawn-out contest in which both sides were slow starting.

Richmond took an early 16-4 lead. The Indians showed good form in the last part of the first half, but were unable to overtake the Spiders. The score at the half was Richmond, 20; William and Mary, 13.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

NINETY-SIX years after Gen. Abner Doubleday laid out the first diamond at Cooperstown, N. Y., and organized the first baseball game, Mr. Philip K. Wrigley, owner of the Chicago Cubs, suddenly gives birth to a most extraordinary and revolutionary idea.

GUS H. FAN.

Briefly, the Chicago club will pioneer in catering to the comfort of the fans.

I don't know about the ultimate success of Mr. Wrigley's idea. I don't know if the fans can stand the shock. It would be too bad if Mr. Wrigley's plan to enlist the good will of the fans should defeat its own purpose by exposing the fans to the sudden spectacle of a club owner taking into consideration the welfare and comfort of the fans at the ball game. If done by easy stages, it might be well, perhaps, but too great a tax on the credulity of the plain people might remove Mr. Wrigley's problem by removing the fans.

But Mr. Wrigley proposes to go the whole hog instanter. At the Cubs park, the new seats will be 3 inches wider than the old ones. The number of chairs in the boxes will be reduced to give the fans more room. Prices of box seats in the left and right field and in bad locations will be resumed, and the fans request for an earlier starting time for week-end games will be heeded. And not only that, but a service office will be installed at Wrigley Field where fans may voice their queries and complaints.

So, one may readily see that Mr. Wrigley's idea is most revolutionary, to put it mildly. It seems that the fans will indeed, be catered to, whether they like it or not. However, it is Mr. Wrigley's baby, and if the fans can't stand the shock, why, his chewing-gum millions can, so this department doubtless is wasting its sympathy upon Mr. Wrigley.

MR. WRIGLEY'S seven-point program headed by (1) "Don't try to cover up anything. Be frank and honest with the public and the baseball writers." So, one can readily see that Mr. Wrigley has, indeed, gone the whole hog. I don't know whether Mr. Wrigley's announcement that his baseball firm will "be frank and honest with the public and the baseball writers" is a tacit admission that the general run of baseball firms have not been frank and honest with the public and the writers, but it is what this department is inclined to call a question that is open to question.

F'r instance, when contract time rolls around and contract terms are discussed in the greatest of secrecy, the magnates of what they are pleased to call the national pastime, discover that such matters are the personal affairs of the players and the club owners. But when the tickets for the opening game are placed on sale, these same magnates tout their baseball firms as great civic institutions of the respective cities, publicly acclaimed and publicly supported.

When Mr. Wrigley adds that his firm will be honest with the baseball writers, well, maybe that requires a bit of explanation. Club owners are driven to white lies, perhaps, by the inquisitiveness of correspondents who would, for the sake of an exclusive story, ruin a trade or a sale in the making to the great discomfort of the club treasury, and thus their reluctance and reticence to speak freely of the more intimate details of their great civic institution is easily understood, but the fact remains that they take the public into their confidence with the same haste with which they would walk to their own execution.

All of which was pertinently illustrated the other evening at the Washington Baseball Writers Association dinner at which Bucky Harris was the honor guest. Harris took his biggest bow and the greatest applause of the evening was brought down when he was described as a baseball official "who would not lie to the reporters."

Bunts.

Salt, which is recognized as one of the greatest fertilizers, is used to kill grass on the tennis court . . . Coach Jack Hagerty, of Georgetown, yesterday obtained his Maryland automobile driver's permit only after taking a lengthy examination at Bethesda . . . he was the holder of a New York permit, but learned with regret that Maryland had canceled its reciprocity agreement with New York, which waived examination, the day previous . . . as a measure of added authority over his players, Manager Charley Grimm has been designated by Owner Wrigley, of the Cubs, as the man who will sign all of the players' pay checks . . . a package that arrived at Griffith Stadium yesterday contained the baseball belongings of Shortstop Lyn Lary, shipped here by the Boston Red Sox . . . in acknowledgment, the shoes, glove, underwear and bats of Joe Cronin were dispatched to Boston . . . after the world series last fall, Dizzy Dean declared that he hoped all the other Cardinals except brother Paul, would take a salary cut . . . he has never forgiven them for testifying against him in the Landis investigation after he tore his uniform to shreds and went on strike.

Hyattsville Subdues Gaithersburg Quintet

Hyattsville High School defeated Gaithersburg High at the Hyattsville National Guard Armory last night, 34 to 23.

After taking an 18-to-2 lead in the first half, in which it held Gaithersburg scoreless from the floor, Hyattsville found its lead cut down to 19-15 in the third quarter as the reserves gave way before the Gaithersburg regulars.

Manassas High Trims Lee-Jackson Cagemen

4,000 See G. U. Routed, 50-36, By Violets

New York U. Leads, 26-14, at Half and Pulls Away Near Finish.

THE Violets plucked Georgetown last night. The final figures at the Tech gymnasium, where the two teams met, were 50-36, in favor of the Violet New York U. quintet.

A throng of 4,000 fans saw the visitors tear Georgetown's defense to shreds in the final minutes of play and pull away to win as they pleased. But some hectic minutes preceded the last few, and though N. Y. U.'s superiority was clearly established in the first half, there was a possibility that the game would be decided by a narrow margin.

It is hard to figure Yale's upset of the Violets after seeing Howard Cann's boys perform. They had all the ingredients that make good teams, speed, rhythm, height and, above all, an uncanny, unerring aim.

It was their remarkable ability to find the bucket at any range at any time that pulled Georgetown off balance and gave N. Y. U. the opportunity of setting up its scoring plays—and they had the plays, too. Frequently the scorer was wide open under the basket.

Normal Tops Gallaudet In Extra Period, 27-25

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Forced nito an extra period, the Maryland State Normal School's basket ball squad eked out a 27-25 victory over Gallaudet tonight at Towson.

In the closing seconds of the regulation game, Josh Wheeler shot a goal to even matters at 23-all. Immediately after the additional five minutes started, Wheeler again whisked the ball through the net and Julien Turk duplicated, giving the Teachers a four-point lead. In the final minute of play, Ellorhorst produced a goal for the Washingtonians.

Virginia's Title In Boxing Is Imperiled

Three Champions to Face Dangerous Foes in Conference Meet.

RICHMOND, Va., Feb. 8 (AP).—If the University of Virginia's three defending champions can hold on to their titles in the Southern Conference boxing tournament at Charlottesville late this month, the Cavaliers will be prime favorites to win the team title for a fifth consecutive year.

Retaining their crowns, however, may be too difficult a job for one or more of the three scrappers. Archie Hahn, jr., bantamweight champion, was outpointed recently by North Carolina's clever Marion Diehl, while Gordon Rainey, featherweight, and Maynard Womer, welterweight, will have rough rows to hoe.

Of the four defending champions who will risk their crowns, Virginia will claim three and Maryland one in Stuart McCaw, a light-heavyweight.

Quarles Now a Pro.

Norment Quarles, North Carolina's lightweight terror, who smashed his opponents all over the ring to win a year ago, has since entered the professional ranks. "Red" Negri, V. P. I.'s fine heavyweight, was counted out by scholastic difficulties, while Harold Stuart, Virginia junior middleweight, and Henry Willard, South Carolina middleweight, have graduated.

Although their meeting with Navy's fine team at Annapolis tomorrow was causing them immediate worry, the Cavaliers were also concerned about their chances in the tournament. North Carolina, outpointed, 4½ to 3½, in a recent dual meet, will send a strong team to Charlottesville. The Duke and Clemson teams that battled to a 4-4 deadlock last month are both strong and Maryland's scrappers are expected to cause the Cavaliers a lot of trouble.

Duke Tops W. & L. In Thriller, 36-30

Lexington, Va., Feb. 8 (AP).—Snatching a slim lead and holding to it with eight minutes left to play, Duke tonight defeated Washington and Lee's quintet, 36 to 30.

The Blue Devils forged ahead in the final period after the score had been tied four times and Richardson, General center, had gone out on fouls.

Tickets Gone For Feature Of Season

Interest in Tonight's Meet Rivals That for Army Game.

Boxing to Climax Day of Sports Events at Annapolis.

By Bill McCormick.

BEFORE a crowd limited only by the 5,024 capacity of Macdonough Hall, the Unversity of Virginia's boxfighting contingent will invade Annapolis tonight for the decisive skirmish in their war upon fighting men of the United States Naval Academy.

Perhaps never before in the history of intercollegiate leather shoving has a match attracted the public fancy as has this dual meet between the two outstanding teams who each have won two of four previous clashes. Only an Army-Navy football game ever before created such an unfulfillable demand for tickets for an athletic event involving the Midshipmen.

The ticket list was oversubscribed 3,000 on the day the pasteboards were released for distribution. So eagerly have the precious ducats been gobbled up that many high-ranking naval officers even some of those on duty at Annapolis, have been unable to secure them. Even the elastic press accommodations have been stretched to the breaking point and requests from many newspapers for working quarters have, of necessity, been declined.

Boxing Is Climax.

The boxing meet will climax a day of sports activities at the academy, during which the Midshipmen of the basket ball division will meet N. Y. U.; the academy fencers will tackle rapier wielders from N. Y. U.; Navy track men will meet Rutgers in swimming and water polo, and the Middies' wrestling team will tackle the mat men from the University of Chicago.

Spike Webb's naval noggin knockers wound up their training yesterday in perfect condition for the meet. Following brisk limbering-up exercises, each member of the squadron of sockers weighed exactly 1 pound over his weight limit, which means that by weighing-in time today each will tip the beam a few ounces under the maximum poundage allowed.

The University of Virginia mitten manipulators also finished their training siege in the proverbial "pink." Their mentor in matters of maul, 67-year-old Johnny La Rowe, will not be with them when they start slinging leather at the future admirals.

Calls Boys Together.

La Rowe, who has been confined to his bed since just before his team's victorious stand against the powerful North Carolina squad, called "his boys" together last night to wish them Godspeed and issue final instructions.

"I tried to get the doctors to say I could go with you," LaRowe told his charges. "But they wouldn't let me. Now, I'll just have to wait, but I know my boys will do their best for the old man."

Virginia's regular squad, consisting of four letter men and four newcomers to the fold, will work against Navy. The letter men include Gordon Rainey and Archie Hahn, co-captains; Maynard Womer and Bill McClung. The members

Basket Ball and Boxing on Today's Program.

Blacksburg, Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Virginia Tech and Washington and Lee will each send four teams into action here tomorrow in the feature offering of the winter sports season at Tech. The spice of a 40-year rivalry will go into the battles, which include varsity and freshman contests in basket ball and boxing.

The day is to be in the nature of a sports carnival at Tech. The program will start with the freshman basket ball game at 4 p. m. The varsity quintets will clash at 7, the freshman boxers at 8:15, and the varsity boxers about 9:30, possibly as early as 9:15, depending upon when the freshman bouts end.

The varsity wrestlers, who scored an impressive victory over North Carolina State matmen last week, will compete with the Wildcats at Davidson.

British Fighters Still Observe Fine Old Tradition of Phil Scott

By Paul Gallico.

LONDON (By Mail).—It is with considerable pain and sorrow that I am forced to report that the blight of Phireman Phainting Phil Scott still hangs heavily over Old Albion. The English are still not very strong in the middle, especially when in competition against an American. I do not know why this is. Maybe it is because Phainting Philip once went to the United States and made himself a small fortune by threshing about on various of our select canvases, yelling woefully that he had been fouled.

Philip did this a great many times and he made a great deal of money doing it. There seems to be nothing short of an affinity between an Englishman's groin and an American's left hook. I wonder if this might be a hangover from the revolution of 1776. I thought all that had long since been forgotten.

The other Sunday afternoon (you may not attend the movies in London of a Sunday afternoon, but they hold prize fights) I journeyed over to the ring, a tough, grimy, smoky little fight club at Black Friars, to see Wesley Ramey, the American lightweight managed by Peter (The Fox) Reilly, box a Welshman named Tommy John. Ramey knocked him out with five punches to the stomach. John went down yelling foul. This time, however, the referee counted him out.

The first time, at Albert Hall,

Baer in Benefit for the Widow Of Campbell, Man He Killed

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 8 (AP).—Five years after his crushing fists battered Frankie Campbell into insensibility and later death, Max Baer is coming back to a San Francisco ring to toss punches for the unfortunate fighter's widow.

Through his manager, Ancil Hoffman, the heavyweight champion agreed today to meet Stanley Poreda, of Jersey City, in a 4-round bout February 15. Six-ounce gloves will be used. It will not be an exhibition. Proceeds of the program, except for bare expenses to cover preliminary bouts and Poredo's purse, will be turned over to Mrs. Campbell.

While no one concerned expects Poreda to accomplish what no other fighter has done—flatten Baer—he can win himself the title by laying the latter out for the count.

Poreda, from Jersey City, was rated an outstanding prospect in 1932 when he beat both Primo Carnera and Tommy Loughran. He has slipped far down the ladder since then.

Baer fought Campbell August 25, 1930, the former winning by a knockout in the fifth round. Campbell had floored his bulkier rival, the only time in Baer's career he has been knocked down by a punch. Baer jumped up and rushed Campbell into a corner, where he rained punches on the San Franciscan. Campbell was wedged in the ropes and could not fall to the canvas. He was "out on his feet" when Referee Toby Irwin stopped the fight. Campbell died the following day from cerebral hemorrhage.

Band Wagon Triumphs to Pay $21 at Hialeah

Arcaro Gives Long Shot Fine Ride

By Walter Haight
(Post Staff Writer).

HIALEAH PARK, Fla., Feb. 8.—Band Wagon, sold by Chester Bild, of Washington, to Mrs. A. M. Creech last week, won the Naples Claiming Handicap, today's feature race here in the tropics. Capably ridden by Jockey Eddie Arcaro, the popular son of Strolling Player upset the talent to pay a $21 mutuel. Chief money was wagered on the chances of Miney Myerson, but the Ogle color bearer had to be satisfied with the place award. Gentle Knight, from a slow start, was third.

Another crowd of 15,000 was present and the program was witnessed under a sunlit sky. Postmaster General James A. Farley occupied a box seat in front of the press box.

The favorite bettors and form players had due reason to growl as Band Wagon came romping through the stretch to victory. The horse had quit in two previous six-furlong races, but today he drew away despite the seven-furlong route. Band Wagon was clocked in 1:23 4-5.

From Start to Finish.

Band Wagon and Miney Myerson fought it out from start to finish, with Gentle Knight third virtually the entire distance. Arcaro broke Band Wagon on top, but Miney Myerson was up to his saddle post on the trip along the back stretch. The second horse bore out all through this stage of the running, but on the far turn Coucci took him to the front.

Arcaro seemed to be rating Band Wagon, however, and with the stretch reached, he again moved up and then passed Miney Myerson to win by a length.

Fairisk, the $6.80 favorite, won the first race in a driving finish which carried her out ahead of Miles Standish, a long shot, and Cash Book. Fourteen frisky youngsters competed over the nursery course. Arcaro's riding was a factor in the Firestone-owned filly's victory.

Wee Wink Victor.

Wee Wink, a daughter of Stimulus, which ran to the outside fence in a recent race after holding the lead, successfully banked the final bend today and coasted to the wire. The result was a jolt to favorite players for the winner paid a $35.30 mutuel. Conchita, another outsider, was second, with Predict third. Towson, heavily played, was not prominent at any stage.

Jockey Silvio Coucci scored another victory for the Greentree Stable in the third race, bringing Insomnia home with a daylight lead over Blessed Again, the public choice. Twoaday was third. Coucci hustled his mount into the lead at the first turn and was never seriously threatened thereafter. Insomnia paid $8.50.

Jim John, masterfully ridden by Earl Porter, accounted for the fourth race, defeating among others, Boston Brook, the paddock tip, and Ern Lad. Porter found racing room along the rail for Jim John and drove through to take the lead along the back stretch and coasted to the finish line to pay $7.80.

Rommel Due to Take Richmond Reins Soon

Richmond, Va., Feb. 8 (AP).—Eddie Rommel, famed knuckle ball hurler of the Philadelphia Athletics and more recently an A's coach, is due here soon to begin laying plans for the Richmond Colts' 1935 season in the Piedmont League. Rommel recently was appointed manager of the local club.

At the Post . . .

Dear Al: Hialeah Park, Feb. 8.

Jersey Stable horses were restored to good standing today. They had been barred, along with Trainer C. H. (Tobe) Trotter, after traces of stimulants had been found in the saliva of Postscript earlier in the week. The horses have been placed in charge of J. V. Stewart.

Jockey M. Villena, the Chilean rider, was set down for three days for disobedience at the post.

Sam Rosoff's joy in winning with Corinne Daily at an $89 mutuel yesterday was short lived. The filly was found to be lame after scoring by a nose and will not be seen in action for some time. Jockey Lou Schaefer, who rode Dr. Freeland to victory in the Preakness, is dickering for a contract with a big stable. Trainer Joe, who got in trouble with his landlady when Sun Monk ran out of the money, is trying to restore himself to good standing tomorrow by making her bet Mannie across the board. We shall see what we shall see.

BILL.

First race—Deliberator, although he has been assigned 120 pounds, appears to be the best in the opening dash for juveniles. Arcaro is the rider and we'll accept about a $5 mutel. Empty Bottle's last was a beaut. Lemont is a possible surprise.

Second race—Teddy Carl ran a nice race last out and may upset the dope in this field. Gets in with light weight and is ready to show a winning effort. Recovery was impressive here. Mannie may score at long odds, but I believe the field is a trifle tough for him.

Third race—Diverting is a consistent sort and is as good as that recent triumph. Beaver Dam has all the speed and must be respected in this company. Nankin to take care of the others.

Fourth race—Captain Argo needed his last race. Ran an impressive second on that occasion and should come back to win. Merrily On and Wise Prince are closely matched for the place battle.

Fifth race—Plight is better than rated. Has had conditioners and is now primed for a crack-down. Coucci has been named on the overnight sheet as the rider and I expect no mistakes. General Parth is the one to beat. Chastity for the show end.

Sixth race—Motley ran a smashing race last out and figures to take care of this brand of opposition. Mickey's Man and Little Cynic, recent winners, should complete the money bracket.

Seventh race—Flying Dere and Caw Caw are a close fit in the finale. Both turned in winning efforts recently and the riding may decide. Yellow Metal hasn't had a real ride in weeks. Might be dangerous at this route.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FAIRISK, $6.40, $4.50, $3.20; MILES STANDISH, $24.90, $10.00; CASH BOOK, $3.60.

FAIRISK broke fast and, clear of early bumping, ran into lead, ran straight and drew away easily at end. MILES STANDISH was away well in his stride, but swerved out just after the start and then ran straight. CASH BOOK ran good race. BABY TALK is sure to improve over this effort. ERLA is worth noting.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800. Claiming prices, $1,500 to $1,200. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:52. Off at 2:52½. Winner, A. C. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WEE WINK, $35.30, $16.80, $8.10; CONCHITA, $22.80, $10.50; PREDICT, $4.70.

WEE WINK broke very fast, was rushed into lead, saved ground and drew away easily at finish. CONCHITA came with a rush in final furlong. PREDICT worked his way up and ran good race. EL BANDIDO tired suddenly in stretch. SHAN ran a good race. JUDGE SCHILLING had speed for three furlongs, then tired.

THIRD RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $1,000. Claiming price, $2,000. For 3-year-old fillies. Start bad. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 3:22. Off at 3:25. Winner, Greentree Stable's br. f. (3), by John P. Grier—Tossabout. Trained by M. C. Lilly. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:39 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—INSOMNIA $8.50, $3.80, $3.30; BLESSED AGAIN, $4.00, $3.60; TWOADAY, $4.60.

INSOMNIA, showing startling improvement over her recent race, dashed into lead early, raced her field dizzy in the first half-mile, drew away, but had to be ridden out to stall off determined BLESSED AGAIN. The latter, slow to get in her stride, came through on inside and was wearing the winner down. TWOADAY, well up, had no mishap. METTLE ran her race. LANGUOROUS failed to close any ground.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. The Safety Harbor For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:55. Off at 3:57½. Winner, A. Wood's ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JIM JOHN, $7.80, $3.80, $2.90; BOSTON BROOK, $3.70, $3.00; ERIN LAD, $3.80.

JIM JOHN was sent up on inside turning out of back stretch, raced ERIN LAD into defeat, and drew away at end. BOSTON BROOK, slow to begin, came through on inside and was a fast-going second. ERIN LAD had plenty of speed, but tired suddenly in last sixteenth. TUTTICURIO ran an improved race.

FIFTH RACE—Seven furlongs (out of chute). Purse, $1,000. The Naples Handicap. Claiming price, $4,500. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:27. Off at 4:28. Winner, Mrs. A. M. Creech's ch. h. (5), by Strolling Player—Resist. Trained by W. B. Creech. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:23 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BAND WAGON, $21.00, $6.20, $3.50; MINEY MYERSON, $3.50, $2.60; GENTLE KNIGHT, $2.90.

BAND WAGON, running in his best form, raced MINEY MYERSON into defeat in the first six furlongs, drew away at end, but was doing his best to win. MINEY MYERSON was sent to the front early, raced along, and tired in final furlong. GENTLE KNIGHT was hustled along from the start and ran a fair race. CATHOP broke slow made up ground, but never threatened the winner.

SIXTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $1,000. Claiming price, $2,000. For 3-year-old fillies. Start good. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 4:59. Off at 5:02½. Winner, P. B. Codd's b. f. (3), by St. James—Pantica. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:39 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PASS UP, $3.50, $2.90, $2.60; NELL BARTON, $5.80, $4.00; COONEY, $5.60.

PASS UP was restrained back of the pace to the stretch, where she was sent to the front and just lasted to win. NELL BARTON ran into early lead, but tired badly in stretch. MERRY GO ROUND was poorly ridden. JAKOVIA lacked speed.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800. Claiming prices, $1,500 to $1,200. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:31½. Off at 5:32½. Winner, Mrs. T. Hunt's br. g. (5), by Prince of Umbria—Agnes Ayrer. Trained by T. Hunt. Value to winner, $600; second, $175; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:52 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STALL MAN, $10.30, $3.60, $2.60; BIG RED, $2.90, $2.30; SHOT AND SHELL, $2.90.

STALL MAN ran good race. He was rated along to the middle of the turn, where he moved into lead under the whip, drew out and held on well. BIG RED, well ridden made his bid in stretch, but could not get up. SHOT AND SHELL displayed good speed and ran game race. COUSIN GEORGE, on the inside saved ground, but was not good enough. STEPBROTHER had speed for six furlongs.

Turf Stars Vie In Coast Test Today

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 8 (AP).—Clearing skies and the prospect of a dry, although slow track, gave impetus tonight to speculation on the likely winner of tomorrow's San Antonio Handicap, prepping race for the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap on February 23.

With Cavalcade, champion of the American turf, definitely out of the San Antonio because of a hoof injury, chief interest centered in Good Goods, stablemate of Cavalcade, and Azucar, the converted steeplechase star.

Of the seven horses slated to start, five are nominated for the Santa Anita Handicap. In the list are Sarada, carrying impost of 128 pounds; Fleam, with low weight of 121, and Head Play, with 128.

Gallant Sir, Norman Church's star horse that twice won the Agua Caliente Handicap, and Big Beau, stablemate of Twenty Grand, also will be running, but they are not entered in the Santa Anita Handicap.

$7,500 Added.

Good Goods will carry 126 pounds tomorrow, and Azucar, after demonstrating he can run in the mud with the best of them, will pack 128 pounds. The distance will be a mile and one-eighth, with $7,500 added.

Head Play, a Preakness winner, will be getting a severe test, and upon his behavior and performance may depend his chances for starting in the likely field of 20 on February 23. The horse is unruly at times.

Gallant Sir's performance will be closely watched, even though he will not go in the big race. Church's horse was to have been nominated for the Santa Anita Handicap, but suddenly went lame and his trainers feared he was breaking down. Church substituted Toro Nancy in his place for the Santa Anita.

Santa Anita Results.

Maryland Ring and Court Teams Face Season's Sternest Test

Visitors Held Favorites in Both Duels

MARYLAND'S boxing and basket ball teams undergo their sternest test of the season tonight at College Park, where the courtmen court disaster against the University of Richmond dribblers, and the leather-pushers trade wallops with Penn State.

The curtain rises at 8 o'clock on the basket ball battle, which should be all the word implies. On paper the program easily is the most attractive staged at Ritchie Coliseum this winter, and on paper Maryland will have to be at tops to get at least an even break.

For the first time this season both Maryland teams are going to the post in the unfamiliar role of underdogs. The odds are 6 to 2 against the Terps in basket ball, and 3 to 2 against them in boxing.

Spider Five Unbeaten.

Maryland played its best basket ball of the season last week against Virginia and won hands down, but Richmond emerges from the Southland with an unsullied record of 11 consecutive victories and is rated as one of Dixie's most potent pass, pick-off and pot-shot aggregations.

The Spiders use only five set plays on the attack and that seems to be plenty, if past performances are considered. Roger Leverton, a product of Central High School, where his athletic endeavors were confined to thumb-twiddling, George Lacey and Lou Elmore are the visitors' outstanding men.

Winnie Brown, a forward, and Herb Hash, center, stand rather high, too, about 6 feet 1 and 2 inches, respectively. Any defensive plans concocted by Maryland must include them, for both lads know their way about a basket ball court.

Starters Are Listed.

Maryland's starting line-up includes Al Waters and Bernie Buscher, forwards; Vic Willis, center; Bill Andorka, "South" Sothoron or Bill Guckeyson, guards. This is the combination that sank Virginia in a sea of buckets last week.

Penn State is by far the most formidable boxing team the Terrapins have met up with in the current campaign. A former national A. A. U. heavyweight champion, an Eastern intercollegiate title-holder and still another lad who displaced a champion to win his place on the team are listed in the Nittany Lions' line-up.

Frank McAndrews, 115-pounder, who will mix it with Jimmy Young, of Maryland, whipped Russ Criswell for the position, and Criswell won the title last season. Capt. Mike Zeleznock, undefeated for two years, holds the 125-pound crown and Izzy Richter is the heavyweight who won national honors two years ago.

Three Key Men.

Maryland's key men tonight are its sensational lightweight, Ivan "The Terrible" Nedomatsky, who boasts a string of three one-round kayoes; Stew McCaw, Southern Conference light heavyweight champion, and Lyman McAboy, hard-hitting 155-pounder, who moves up into the 165-pound class. The defeat of any one of the trio will be a serious, possibly fatal blow to the Terps' hopes.

Either Mike Lombardo or Harold Kelly will be sent to the post in McAboy's old class tonight. Kelly lost to Ed Jean, of Washington and Lee, last week in making his debut, but Coach Jack Harmony is impressed with the boy's aggressiveness and natural ability and believes he can be polished up into a first-class puncher.

Maryland is in the best physical and mental condition possible and will have no excuses. Penn State has been installed a 3-2 favorite over its host, but the Terps hope to spring an upset.

St. Albans Triumphs In Baltimore, 29 to 19

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—St. Albans of Washington, defeated Friends School in a spirited cage tussle today, 29 to 19. For three quarters the teams played evenly, the District team gaining a one-point advantage at half time, but Friends reversed the order of scoring in the third session, holding a like margin, 18-17, at the beginning of the final session.

The visitors tied the count and forged ahead by one point early in this period but Friends again knotted the score which remained deadlocked until four minutes before the end.

Undefeated Richmond Quintet, Led by Leverton, Capital Youth, To Oppose Maryland Tonight

By Charles H. Hamilton.

RICHMOND, Feb. 8.—The University of Richmond will bring one of the South's greatest basket ball teams to the University of Maryland tomorrow night—a team that has everything, and a team that has been carefully developed along ultra-scientific lines by Coach MacPitt.

"One of the finest teams I ever saw anywhere," said Gus Tebell, University of Virginia coach and a native of Dr. Meanwell's Wisconsin stronghold.

Coach Is Reticent.

Back of it all is a coach who normally is exceedingly reticent. Little by little, friends have pried out details of his coaching. Richmond's success to date hinges upon three factors: First, a friendly spirit of cooperation among the players; second, keeping possession of the ball; third, depending upon cleverness rather than a set style of play.

Coach Pitt also places no small portion of the credit at the door of Capt. Roger Leverton, product of Central High, in Washington.

Leverton shines in keeping possession of the ball. No matter who gets the tip-off, Leverton usually gets the ball at the next moment. Charging in from his forward position, he leaps high—and from that moment the other team is trying to stop the Spiders' scoring.

"I found a particularly troublesome angle to Richmond basket ball when I took charge last year," said Coach Pitt. "One of our guards, Louie Elmore, is a Richmond boy and lives downtown. The other is George Lacy, who lives on the campus. Both are fine basket ball players.

"But the trouble was that neither boy really got acquainted with the other. They never saw each other except when it was time to practice or to play. So I changed that. I fixed it up so they'd room together on trips. I made it possible for them to run around together. They got to be buddies.

"Now," he went on, "that doesn't sound important—but I think it's a big reason why we've been winning. The boys have acquired confidence in each other. It just gets so each of them knows where the other is and what he is doing, all the time, just by instinct. And that, to me, is what means a great team.

"We've got to get the ball and keep it. Roger Leverton is our ace there. Then we've got to score—and that's where this angle that you might call 'familiarity' comes in.

Use Few Set Plays.

"To sum it all up, we use only about five set plays. We really don't depend upon them very much. I figure that basket ball is a game of individual cleverness, first of all."

That doesn't sound so involved—but it's really only the beginning of the system the boys have started calling the "Pitt-'em In" system.

Coach Pitt has quietly, methodically made basket ball a sport for his team. He takes the work out of practice. He has installed little sidelights that offer a lot of fun.

Physically, the Spiders have everything. They can put a team on the floor that will average over 6 feet in height, if desired. However, one of the spark-plugs is little Louie Elmore, who is only about 5 feet 7 inches, and plays guard.

George Lacy, crack end in football, is the other regular guard. He towers 6 feet 3 inches. Capt. Leverton plays a forward, and is a shade under 6 feet. Herbert Hash, center, is a 6-footer, as is Win Brown, the other forward.

ROGER LEVERTON.

W.-L. Five Nips Alexandria, 42 to 39

Upsets League Leaders With Stirring Rally in Last Minute.

ALEXANDRIA, Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Before a capacity crowd, Washington-Lee High School scored a spectacular 42-to-39 victory over Alexandria High here tonight at Armory Hall. It was the Twins' first defeat in the suburban Inter-High League.

A marked favorite to win, Alexandria fell before a last-minute rally. With 1 minute and 20 seconds to play and Alexandria leading, 39-38, Orlando Birch, veteran W.-L. guard, broke up the Twins' freezing game and stormed through to snare the basket which gave the Little Generals the lead.

After the next toss-up, Birch again worked his way to the foul-line vicinity, set himself and netted the basket which sealed the victory with less than 40 seconds to play.

Still Lead League.

Despite the loss, the Twins still lead the loop, having won two and lost but one. Jimmy Cooper, leading scorer of the league, was again on the warpath for the Little Generals. He sank six baskets and two foul shots to add 14 more points to his big total. Happy Nugent, Alexandria forward, took scoring honors with 21 points.

In a preliminary, the Alexandria High Reserves were beaten, 20 to 6, by the Alexandria Light Infantry.

Campbell to Make Trial Spin on Monday

Daytona Beach, Fla., Feb. 8 (AP).—Sir Malcolm Campbell's Bluebird likely will be seen on the beach here for the first time Monday, driven by the world land speed king at possibly 200 miles an hour.

It will be just a trial spin, if the beach is in suitable shape. The beach is a factor that can not be foretold from one tide to the next.

Doyle K. O.'s Baer as Dresser; Sees Sights With Peggy Joyce

NEW YORK, Feb. 8 (U.P.).—Handsome Jack Doyle, Irish heavyweight champion, who announced upon his arrival here that he could whip Max Baer at singing, dancing, dressing, romancing and acting—as well as fighting—has scored three decisions in his first 24 hours in America. Peggy Hopkins Joyce is in his corner.

He started by cracking down on "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling" midst the hammering and sawing in the restaurant Jack Dempsey is building.

His first evening in the city also saw him well on his way to titles in dressing and romancing.

In tails (and topper, according to some reports) he had so much on Baer as a dresser that no decision was even necessary.

He had Miss Joyce on his arm and they spun through the night spots. That earned him only a first-round draw in romancing, but he hasn't stopped punching.

Call was made tonight to the Waldorf-Astoria, where he is stopping.

A voice said over the phone that Doyle had been out with Miss Joyce all right. They had gone to the "Casino in the Park" (a very snooty night spot).

ROOSEVELT HIGH flashed home with a first place in the interhigh series yesterday by taking a bigger and better grip on last place in the standings. The first place was only in the form of the Ruff Riders becoming the first team to finish their eight-game schedule. The last place achievement came more convincingly in the form of losing a 36-to-21 game to Western.

While the latter was taking a firmer hold on second place Roosevelt lost its eighth straight game, and Tech was keeping in the running for at least a tie for the runner-up berth by taking a 40-to-30 decision from Central at Tech. The other game was played at Roosevelt.

Tough Opposition.

The Ruff Riders presented some tough opposition before Western could break through for its fifth series triumph. At one time early in the last quarter the count was 20 to 19 and the odd spectacle of Roosevelt winning a game loomed. But the age of miracles apparently is over so far as this season is concerned, for Western stepped up the pace and won more or less going away.

Roosevelt ended its part in the series considerably more impressively, however, than it began it. Having forced Eastern to the limit to win, 38 to 31, Tuesday, it came back to stake Western to a 16-3 lead in the first quarter and then cut down the advantage bit by bit with a courageous rally in the second and third periods. But for the loss of Capt. Dave Donovan late in the third quarter, the spurt might well have had some serious consequences for Western.

Leads 18-14 at Half.

The Ruff Riders had chopped the lead to 18-14 at half time, holding Western to 2 points and scoring 11 themselves. They continued to cut it down and reached the 20-19 point shortly after the start of the last period, but Donovan was ejected for four personals and Western began hitting a faster pace, which Roosevelt was unable to match in the closing minutes.

The Tech-Central game went along in much the same fashion. Tech was looking much like the powerful team which characterized its pre-series games with Southern High of Baltimore and the Georgetown and Catholic U. freshmen. It took an 8-3 lead in the first quarter and a 17-11 lead in the second before Central began to stage one of its flashy rallies.

Vermillion Leader.

Billy Vermillion, guard, whose 10 points, together with 10 by Bill Thompson, center, scored two-thirds of Central's total, started the comeback, Nau and Silverstein followed with foul shots and by the late part of the third quarter, Central had crawled up to 21-19. Tech began hitting the high spots again, however, with its sporadic scoring center, John Billings, leading the way with three baskets in a row at one time, and won zooming along with all five cylinders working like the proverbial clockwork. Billings and Farrell, with 11 points apiece, set the pace.

It was a typical Tech-Central game. Four players were ejected for four personal fouls apiece, Reds Daly and George Hahn, of Tech, and Charlie Nau and Silverstein, of Central.

Miss Orcutt Is Upset In Miami Golf Event

Miami, Feb. 8 (AP).—Mrs. Joe Bydolek, of Buffalo, today eliminated the defending titleholder, Maureen Orcutt, of Englewood, N. J., 1 up, in the semifinals of the Miami-Biltmore women's golf tournament, while Miss Jean Bauer, Providence, R. I., trounced Mrs. Lillian Zech, Chicago, 5 and 4.

Miss Orcutt, favored to win the title again this year, played a mediocre game, hooking and slicing in her long game and playing raggedly around the greens.

Ruth's Stepdaughter Bows in Table Tennis

London, Feb. 8 (U.P.).—Babe Ruth's stepdaughter, Julia, a tardy American entrant in the Corbillon Cup singles event of the World Tables tennis championships, was eliminated today by Dora Emdin, of England, 21-4, 21-5. The Ruths arrived in London yesterday and plan to sail next Thursday for New York.

Perry's Tennis Movies Dull, Demonstrate How Not to Play, Anyway, So Why All the Fuss?

LONDON, Feb. 8 (AP).—A private view of the series of action tennis pictures starring Frederick J. Perry, the champion, leaves some doubt of the importance of the current agitation by the British Lawn Association to make honest men out of movie-struck amateur stars.

If Perry's maiden effort is any criterion, tennis movies are not destined to rock the foundations of the industry. They are not going to swell any amateur's bank account much. They are pretty dull.

By the very nature of the game, tennis offers none of the variety which made the golf series starring Bobby Jones a best seller. Where Jones was able to make an entertaining feature out of each of the many shots and problems which beset a golfer, the tennis player, after all, can do little except show how to knock the ball back with his forehand, then with his backhand.

The series of 12 "lessons" which Perry gave for the benefit of the camera before he set off on his present world tour consists mainly of long and none-too-exciting rallies between him and Danny Maskell, the British professional. While they are knocking the ball back and forth, Bill Tilden talks a blue streak, at times affecting the pseudo excitement of a radio announcer at a football game.

"Ha, ha, you mustn't try to do that yourself," Tilden reminds the audience after Perry has brought off one of his brilliant drives. "Only a champion can do it that way."

Tilden also points out that Perry's chop stroke lacks much of being the perfect weapon of Helen Jacobs, neither does he put away an overhead smash quite like he should.

Navy and Virginia Ready for Bouts

new to the varsity this year are Marion Brooks, Mortimer Caplan, Jack Noll and Fred Cramer.

Navy Squad Listed.

Navy will send into action practically the same group which soundly trounced the University of Richmond last week. Hemenway, only boxer defeated by his Richmond opponent, will hold down the flyweight berth. W. J. Barry is being considered as a possible substitute for J. B. Rawlings in the featherweight division.

Blitch and Conkey, who fought at 135 pounds and 145 pounds, respectively, against Richmond, will again occupy these berths. Armijo, 155 pound Midshipman puncher who won by a forfeit last week, will go in action, Michel will cover the 165-pound class, Lambert will perform as a light-heavyweight and Cutter will make his first start of the season in the big boy division.

Post Predictions.

115-pound class—Midshipman H. H. Hemenway vs. Archie Hehn (Va.). Hemenway showed nothing in losing to his Richmond opponent that should bother the Southern Conference champion Hahn by decision.

125-pound class—Midshipman J. B. Rawlings or W. J. Barry vs. Gordon Rainey (Va.). Rawlings lacks the class to cope with Rainey, another conference champion. Barry generally is considered better, but still not good enough. Rainey by decision.

135-pound class—Midshipman J. D. Blitch vs. Marion Brooks (Va.). Blitch is a smooth boxer without too much punch. Brooks is not quite the Middy's equal in boxing ability, but punches better. Draw.

145-pound class—Midshipman G. L. Conkey vs. Maynard Womer (Va.). Conkey punches like a Sazerac cocktail, but so does Womer. The Virginia Conference title holder has a decided advantage in speed. Womer by a technical knockout.

155-pound class—Midshipman G. W. Armijo vs. Bill McClung (Virginia). Armijo is one of the brightest spots on the Navy team, but McClung is a southpaw, and southpaws are liable to do anything. Armijo, if he doesn't get twisted by McClung's portsider tactics.

165-pound class—Midshipman E. A. Michel vs. Mortimer Caplin (Virginia). Michel is the fastest thing seen in the ring since Midget Wolgast slowed down. He should outstep Caplin, who is no slouch as a boxer, but hardly can hope to cope with a whirlwind. Michel by decision.

175-pound class—Midshipman G. S. Lambert vs. Jack Noll (Virginia). Lambert punches and Noll can box, if he will. He hasn't lived up to his capabilities so far this season, so we pick Lambert by a knockout.

Heavyweight class—Midshipman Slade Cutter vs. Fred Cramer (Virginia). The real puzzle of the evening. Cutter is a marvel, but hasn't had a fight this year. Cramer is good and ordinarily lacks the killer instinct. For one reason or another he is expected to have it tonight and anything may happen. We like Cutter on his past record, but won't fall out of our chair at anything that happens in this one.

Probable score—Virginia, 3½; Navy, 3½, going into the heavyweight bout, which should decide the issue. After that—who knows?

safety stalls at all tracks. These devices are designed to prevent "doping" of horses before races and are in use at Hialeah Park, Fla. They consist of iron screens around certain stalls with gates that can be opened only by a key belonging to the trainer. Approximately one stall in five is equipped in this manner, for use by horses entered in the afternoon's races.

Price Cut Opposed.

The matter of reducing admission prices from $1.50 to $1 was discussed, but was opposed by the commission.

Opposition was voiced by commission officials to the bill introduced in the House today by the Allegany County delegation, which would permit the Cumberland track to operate ten days a year instead of five days, as at present. Any extension of the present Maryland racing season was opposed.

Indorsement of the proposed bill was given today by the Southern Maryland Breeders' Association. Previous approval has been given by the Maryland Grange, the Maryland Farm Bureau, the Maryland Breeders' Association and the four major tracks.

Committee members voiced the opinion following today's hearing that the bill probably would be favorably reported next week.

Trackmen to Vie In Boston Tonight

Venzke, Ny to Be Among Stars Competing.

Boston, Feb. 8 (U.P.).—Minus Glenn Cunningham and Bill Bonthron, but listing Gene Venzke, Eric Ny, Charley Hornbostel, Joe McCluskey, George Spit, Keith Brown and other track and field stars, the forty-sixth annual Boston Athletic Association games will be held here tomorrow night.

On an improved Boston Garden track, Venzke may supplant the Boston indoor mile record of 4 minutes 15.2 seconds, held by him and Joie Ray. Ny, Brendan Moynahan, of Boston; Frank Crowley, of New York, and Leslie Wade, of Montreal, are among his opponents.

The 2-mile run will see the 1935 debut of Johnny Fellows, who was a sensation in last year's races at that distance. Cornelius Johnson, of California, and George Spitz, of New York, will renew the high-jump rivalry begun at the Millrose games, and Keith Brown, former Yale star, will compete in a field of 27 men in the pole vault.

L. I. U. Swamps Colonial Five, 50 to 29

Deals George Washington Worst Defeat; Scores 15 Points in Row.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Feb. 8 (Spl.)—Duplicating its success of last year when it won, 41 to 25, the Long Island University basket ball team, claimant for the New York court championship, crushed George Washington University, 50 to 29, here tonight. It was Washington's worst setback of the year, considering the team had never scored less than 33 points in a previous clash, and had never had more than 48 points recorded against it.

Controlling the tap virtually throughout, L. I. U. at one time ran up 15 consecutive points, almost equalling the mark of last year when it scored 24 straight tallies over the Colonials.

In only the first half was the game close. When Bill Noonan scored to bring George Washington up to 14-13, after 18 minutes of the first session, L. I. U. began its scoring spree which went into the second half before the Colonials could recover. L. I. U. led at the half, 18-13, and held at 19-13 advantage before Ben Goldfaden could break the ice in the second half. Tuffy Leemans stood out for the losers with 11 tallies, while Phil Rabinowitz and Ben Kramer starred for L. I. U.

11 Fouls Recorded.

The first half was marked by excellent foul shooting. Eleven penalty tries were caged, five by the Colonials. Only one shot—by Leo Merson—failed to sink.

The Blackbirds ran up an early 7-1 advantage, but Coach Logan's charges, spurred on by Tuffy Leemans, who scored five tallies, tied the count at 8-all and 10-10.

A few minutes later L. I. U. began its run of straight points and featured its attack in the second half with repeated long field goals.

It was Long Island's seventeenth victory in 18 starts this season and its twelfth straight triumph.

Phil Scott Tradition Still Blights British

Ramey wasn't so lucky. He knocked another English lightweight kicking and was disqualified for hitting low. Unquestionably, one of the best things that ever happened to boxing in the State of New York was Jim Farley's no-foul rule.

This young Tommy John of the other Sunday afternoon was doing very nicely in the first round, especially when he batted our Ramey, or rather sloshed him, as they say here, one alongside the jaw that crossed his eyes.

All the boys in the audience began to yell, "Aye, there, Tommy lad," and "Slosh 'im again." When they came out for the second round, Ramey trapped John in the corner where I was sitting and poured five into his midsection, and down went the Briton holding himself and yelling foul. The referee, a brisk little fellow with a fine tin ear himself, signalled for the timekeeper to count.

At seven, the young man was still complaining bitterly that he had been fouled, but at nine he got up. That's always a give-away, too. They should never get up. Once they claim foul, they ought to stick to it, because a man who has been properly fouled doesn't get up. He doesn't even get up the next day. That is where the younger generation is deserting the teachings of Old Phireman Phil. Philip never got up. Once he had lodged his claim of foul, he remained on the deck in the role of corpus delicti, or Exhibit A.

It is very difficult to make an effective show of claiming foul while on your feet. That was young John's error. Ramey came over and hit him in the stomach all over again and this time he went down and stayed down, rolling and writhing. The ringsiders all indignantly cried foul because one of Ramey's punches, a left, ticked the waistband; but, as I say, the referee was in the ring when it happened and ordered the young man counted out.

Yarosz–Thil Ring Duel Planned in Pittsburgh

New York, Feb. 8 (U.P.).—Negotiations virtually have been completed for a world middleweight championship match between Teddy Yarosz, recognized in the United States, and Marcel Thiel, European title-holder, at Forbes Field, Pittsburgh, in May, Promoter Lew Raymond announced today.

Thiel has been offered $17,500 with a privilege of taking a percentage of the receipts, or $20,000 flat, to meet the American who was flattened by Babe Risko a month ago in a non-title bout.

Wheat Values Move Higher; Market Firms

Cotton Is More Active; Prices Up From 6 to 11 Points.

Chicago, Feb. 8 (AP).—Persistent buying for commission houses and for cash dealers put backbone into all the grain markets today, especially corn.

Giving particular stimulus to corn values was the fact that hog prices today jumped to the topmost point since 1931. This made the most profitable corn feeding basis attained in a long while. Simultaneously, unusual broadening of shipper demand here for corn emphasized that a widespread shortage of corn supplies was becoming more and more evident.

With arrivals of every kind of grain at the principal United States markets today about the scantiest witnessed in months, corn closed firm, ½ to 1¼ above yesterday's finish, May 84½ to 84⅝. Wheat, ⅛ to 1⅛ up, May 96½ to 96⅝. Oats, ⅜ to⅞ advanced, and provisions showing 17 to 40 cents gain.

Corn prices showed themselves notably sensitive to reports telling of truckers taking corn from country elevators at a premium of 2 cents to 4 cents over any terminal parity, despite rough weather for corn movement.

Reassuring statements by Administration officials as to the probable market effects of a gold clause decision helped in considerable degree to support grain price upturn. Eastern interests were conspicuous buyers of wheat, with that grain however largely responsive to corn market action.

Millers took a hand also in purchasing wheat futures, and general speculative demand was larger. Absence of appreciable moisture in domestic wheat territory southwest was construed as a bullish factor. Oats and rye followed wheat and corn upgrade.

Cotton Market

New York, Feb. 8 (AP).—Cotton was somewhat more active today with an advance in prices accompanied by reports of an improved spot demand from both domestic and export sources.

May contracts sold up from 12.37 to 12.49 on the buying, which was attributed partly to price fixing, and closed at 12:46, compared with 12.26 at the low point of last Saturday. The general market closed steady at net advances of 6 to 11 points.

March sold up from 12.29 to 12.44 and October from 12.28 to 12.42 in the late trading, or about 9 to 14 points net higher, and closing quotations were within 2 or 3 points of the best.

Exports today 17,505, making 3,104,944 so far this season. Port receipts 14,654. U. S. port stocks 2,771,013.

Proposal of a New World Economic Conference on a Broader Scope Than the London Parley, Arouses Interest.

New York, Feb. 9.—The suggestion that the time has arrived to convoke a new world economic parley, or to revive the suspended London conference, has evoked considerable interest, and many skeptical comments, in the financial district.

Those who follow international developments closely believe that such a conference, to be successful, must be broader in scope than that which convened in London in the summer of 1933. A world economic parley could have reasonable prospects of success only if it were prepared to consider seriously the problems of final currency stabilization, general lifting of foreign exchange restrictions, the funding or liquidation of heavy short-term foreign balances that have accumulated in a number of countries during the depression, readjustment of external debts of many debtor countries, a reduction of trade barriers, and a final and reasonable settlement of the war debts. Most of these problems are very closely intertwined, so that the solution of one will depend largely on what is done about the others.

Final stabilization of the leading currencies is regarded by nearly all careful observers as the most pressing international economic problem requiring solution. It was the unwillingness of the United States to agree to currency stabilization which smashed the London conference in July, 1933. Now, however, this country is evidently ready to agree to stabilization. A return to monetary stability is held a necessary prerequisite, not only to normal trade and financial relations between nations, but also to further recovery in many countries. Successful stabilization of currencies, however, must be predicated upon the elimination of most of the causes which have brought about the international financial collapse of the past few years.

Accumulation of Foreign Short Term Funds Is Barrier.

One such cause has been the accumulation of large amounts of foreign short-term balances in a number of countries. It would doubtless be a matter of years to liquidate these balances in the normal course of business. A quick solution would be the conversion of these balances into long-term bonds bearing a moderate rate of interest. Such conversion operations, however, would be successful only if chief creditor countries such as Great Britain, the United States, Holland and Switzerland were willing to co-operate.

The mere funding of the short-term credits would, of course, be of little aid to a country which already has outstanding external long-term debts now in default. A number of these countries apparently can not, at least within the near future, resume full debt service. A reduction in their debts thus becomes imperative. Such settlements of defaulted foreign debts would have to be on a temporary basis, however, in view of the possibility of a future increase in the capacity to pay of the debtors. Given the cooperation of the leading creditor countries, consolidation of defaulted international debts could doubtless be accomplished by skillful negotiation.

The financial district does not believe that much progress could be made by a new international conference in reviving trade by a reduction of tariffs. Under present conditions, such impediments as foreign exchange restrictions and quota systems handicap trade much more than tariffs. Furthermore, a number of countries, for internal political reasons, might not be in position to make trade concessions. If a world economic conference were successful in establishing monetary stability and removing foreign exchange restrictions, however, foreign trade would benefit as a matter of course. An international conference probably could do away with, or at least modify, the at times vicious quota system of restricting imports and thereby pave the way for a restoration of normal competitive conditions in international commerce.

War Debts Must Be Included In Future Money Conferences.

War debts, excluded from previous conferences on the insistence of the United States, will have to be included on the agenda of a new international conference, according to the prevailing view in the financial district. A settlement of the war debts, in fact, is regarded as a necessary prerequisite to currency stabilization. Great Britain, for one, would assuredly not consent to stabilization until war debts have been readjusted. A solution of the problem is made particularly difficult because this country would be called upon to make the largest concessions, and any specific consideration offered in exchange would tend to be nominal. The chief benefits to us from a reduction in war debts to a level commensurate with the present economic and financial situation of the debtors would have to come from any resulting general recovery.

In view of the multiplicity of questions that would have to be considered and the many conflicting interests involved, most careful observers here doubt that a world economic conference would have more than a remote chance of success at this time. Rather, they urge that every effort be made to tackle these problems and solve them as far as feasible by individual negotiations among leading nations. Only after such direct negotiations reduce the number of major international problems requiring solution, and after the United States and Great Britain have agreed upon a basic program which they would both support,

Bond Market Ends Session With Advances

Secondary Rails Group Leads; Trading Up to $10,196,000.

New York, Feb. 8 (AP).—The bond market shook off the lethargy today that has dominated it for the past fortnight, and the increased activity was accompanied by rising prices.

Volume totaled $10,196,000, par value, compared with $9,014,000 in yesterday's session.

The major part of the activity centered in the rail group, where gains of fractions to as much as 4 points were recorded. Secondary rail obligations accounted for most of the advances.

Utility and industrial loans of domestic corporations also improved in price, although in this division trading was more restricted.

Federals Show Gains.

With three new highs registered by Treasury obligations and a new high for Federal farm mortgage 3s, United States Government securities also came in for their share of the upturn. Transactions in this division totaled some $2,390,0000 or more than double the aggregate of Thursday's dealings.

Better prices were paid for Missouri-Kansas-Texas prior lien 5s at 60; Southern Pacific 4½, at 63½, and New York Central 4½s, at 58¾. Paramount-Publix 5½s, at 68¾, and Utah Light & Traction 5s, at 74½, were among the better acting issues.

The ten low yield bonds that make up the Associated Press average in this section made a new high for the year at 109.4, while advances of .02 to .07 were recorded by the utility, rail, industrial and foreign composites.

Foreign bonds were higher, but did not come in for as much investment and speculative demand as the other groups.

Gold Output During 1934 at All-Time Peak

Total of $107,205,247 Surpasses Former Top by $6,000,000.

The Bureau of Mines reported today the value of gold produced last year was some $6,000,000 above the value of the metal produced in the peak quantity year of 1915.

The average weighted price for 1934 was $34.95. Production reached 3,067,389 ounces for a total value of $107,205,247. In 1915, the peak quantity year, 4,887,604 ounces of gold was produced at $20.6718 an ounce for a total value of $101,036,000.

Production in Colorado jumped from 242,828 ounces in 1933 to 317,214 ounces last year. The 1933 value at 25.56 per ounce was $6,208,684 in 1933 and $11,086,629 in 1934 at $34.95 per ounce.

Montana Jumps.

Montana production in 1933 was 57,822 ounces as compared with 92,500 last year. Value of gold produced in the State last year was $3,232,875 as compared with $1,477,903 in 1933.

Production in Wyoming was up 2,200 ounces in 1933 and 4,900 ounces in 1934. The 1933 value at $25.56 an ounce was $56,232 and in 1934 at $34.95 an ounce it was $171,255.

New Mexico was the only one of the Rocky Mountain States to show a decrease. Production fell from 26,474 ounces in 1933 and 25,630 ounces last year. The value, however, increased from $676,675 and the 1934 production at $34.95 an ounce was valued at $895,769.

Park Savings Approves More Deposit Claims

Departmental and North Capitol Banks Report Unclaimed Dividends.

By Karl von Lewinski.

Park Savings Bank receivers yesterday announced that checks for the 20 per cent dividend are ready for depositors who filed and proved their claims after December 17, 1934, the date on which the first dividend payment was announced.

All those persons who filed their claims before February 1 can receive their checks by calling at the office at Fourteenth and Kenyon streets northwest.

There are on hand approximately 1,000 checks totaling $80,000 on claims already approved which have not been called for.

The claims outstanding, not proven against the bank, according to the bank's books, amount to approximately $250,000 in 5,000 accounts.

The North Capitol Savings Bank reports that approximately 1,000 dividend checks totaling $6,000 representing approved claims have not been called for.

There are approximately 5,000 accounts totaling $40,000 representing claims not proven.

Departmental Bank receivers have on hand approximately 2,500 checks totaling $11,000 which claimants have not as yet called for.

The total claims not proven in this bank amount to approximately $15,000, representing about 857 accounts.

A. I. B. Banquet.

Rudolph S. Hecht, of New Orleans, president of the American Bankers Association, and Charles F. Ellery, of Newark, president of the American Institute of Banking, will be here for the thirtieth annual banquet of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, on February 16.

The Capital committee has received acceptances from bankers in New York, Philadelphia, Richmond, Norfolk, Baltimore and other cities, according to Walton L. Sanderson, of the Hamilton National Bank, president of the Washington Chapter.

Over 500 reservations from bank officers, directors and employes have been made up to this time, and it was stated that every indication points to an attendance which will exceed that of any of the last four banquets.

Curb's Prices Move Higher; Close Is Steady

New York, Feb. 8 (AP).—The curb market staged a rather substantial rally today, with a number of senior utility shares in sharp demand. Volume increased on the upturn.

Preferred issues of Electric Bond & Share, Indianapolis Power & Light and New York Water Service were up 5 to 6 points. Electric Bond & Share common and American Gas & Electric improved fractionally.

Among various issues closing major fractions to a point or more higher were Distillers Corporation-Seagrams, Gulf Oil, Lake Shore, Dow Chemical, Newmont, Parker Rust Proof, Sherwin Williams, A. O. Smith and Pan-American Airways. Pepperell was an isolated soft spot.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 15, 1935— ADAM A. WESCHLER & SON, Auctioneers.

By virtue of a deed of trust recorded in liber No. 5638, folio 307 et seq., one of the land records of the District of Columbia, and at the request of party secured thereby, the undersigned trustees will offer for sale by public auction, in front of premises on FRIDAY, THE FIFTEENTH DAY OF FEBRUARY, 1935, AT FOUR O'CLOCK P. M., the following-described property in the District of Columbia, to-wit: Part of original lot eighteen (18) in square seven hundred seventy-eight (778), described as follows: Beginning for the same on the west line of Fourth street at a point distant 15.80 feet south from the northeast corner of said lot, and running thence south along the said line of said street 11.90 feet to the center of the division wall between premises Nos. 694 and 696 Fourth street northeast, thence west through the center of said division wall and a direct continuation thereof 55 feet to the rear line of said lot, thence north along said rear line 11.90 feet to a point due west of the beginning, and thence east 55 feet to the place of beginning.

TERMS OF SALE: One-third of the purchase money to be paid in cash, balance in equal installments, represented by promissory notes of purchaser payable in three years, with interest at 6 per cent per annum from day of sale, payable semiannually, secured by first deed of trust upon property sold, or all cash, at option of purchaser. A deposit of $100 required of purchaser at sale. Examination of title, conveyancing, recording, revenue stamps and notarial fees at cost of purchaser. Terms to be complied with within fifteen days from day of sale, otherwise trustees reserve the right to resell property at risk and cost of defaulting purchaser, after five days advertisement of such resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C., or deposit may be forfeited, or without forfeiting deposit trustees may avail themselves of any legal or equitable rights against defaulting purchaser.

Walt Mason, Himself

Getting Better.

The statisticians give pleasant dope; they say conditions should bolster hope. They point with pleasure to Christmas trade; much hoarded treasure was then out-paid. The Christmas slipper went with a bang; and men feel chipper, a cheerful gang. The Christmas hanky was sailing high; no man so cranky he wouldn't buy. The Christmas necktie found sales improved; no circumspect eye could watch unmoved. The Christmas sweater was in demand, and signs are better throughout the land. The statisticians subtract and add, and say conditions are far from bad. We have meandered through gloomy vales, but have new standard in Christmas sales. When they are sagging the outlook's glum; when they are dragging we're on the bum. But when they're snappy in crowded aisles, men should be happy and full of smiles. The Christmas season, a year ago, had many fleas on, it wouldn't go. The stores were loaded—men didn't care, their souls corroded with bleak despair. They bought no slippers for wives and aunts; no costly dippers, tin elephants. They bought no candy for little folk, for Ted and Andy, for they were broke. Their tears would mingle whene'er they met, and old Kris Kringle was in a sweat. With new editions of cheerful bunk the statisticians send out their junk. They are well founded in useful lore; the note they've sounded should make things soar.

GEORGE, I ALWAYS DREAD THE HAPPY-GO-LUCKY AIR YOU GET WHEN I TALK ABOUT PEGGY'S CHANCES, BUT I KNOW FROM THE WAY SHE HOLDS HER MOUTH OPEN WHILE THAT SNEAKY BROWNING IS TALKING, THAT HE'S HER IDEA OF PERFECTION.
WHY, HE LEFT TOWN DIDN'T HE?
OH, THAT SORT ALWAYS COMES BACK. ALWAYS! LAST WEEK I MET THAT MOON-FACED WOMAN WHO LIVED OVER US ON OAK ST. ALL THREE OF HER GIRLS HAD FACES THAT WOULD STOP A CLOCK, BUT ALL ARE MARRIED. TWO OF THEM TWICE.
WELL JO, THOSE PEOPLE WHO ACT AS IF THEY HAD CHARGE ACCOUNTS AT THE MARRIAGE LICENSE BUREAU HAVE THEIR HEADACHES TOO.
MAYBE I'M JUST OLD-FASHIONED, BUT I THINK WEDDINGS ARE LIKE AUTOMOBILES. BOTH WILL LAST A LONG TIME IF YOU START OUT IN LOW AND...
GEORGE, WHAT HAS AUTOS GOT TO DO WITH THE FACT THAT WHEN I'M OUT I SPEND MOST OF MY TIME CROSSING STREETS TO AVOID WOMEN WHO WANT TO SYMPATHIZE OVER PEGGY?
WE WERE TALKING ABOUT WEDDINGS. YOU MENTIONED THOSE GIRLS WHO MADE TWO OR THREE MATRIMONIAL DETOURS, SO I SAID...
SUCH A DIPPY CONVERSATION. HA, ONE OF THE REASONS PEGGY IS STILL HANGING ON THE VINE IS BECAUSE SHE HAS YOUR GIFT FOR THINKING ABOUT OTHER THINGS WHEN I TALK ABOUT MARRIAGE. OH, NO WONDER I WANT TO SCREAM WHEN PEOPLE TELL ME NOT TO WORRY.

The President Opens Jubilee Of Boy Scouts

Speaking from the oval room in the White House, President Roosevelt last night formally opened the silver jubilee week of Boy Scouts of America with a brief radio address in which he called the Boy Scout oath the "basis of good citizenship, good government, and orderly progress for the country for years to come."

A scout radio broadcast yesterday afternoon was featured by the reenactment of the founding of Boy Scouts in this country on a pattern furnished by the original movement in England 25 years ago. Members of the British Embassy took part.

President's Message.

"As I review the record of these 25 years of Scouting in America, I am impressed with the extent of the volunteer service we have rendered. We as a Nation are proud of the fact that in addition to our splendid system of education and of other services made available through funds secured by taxation, there are in each community so many well-organized and efficiently administered agencies which supplement the work of Government and make available additional opportunities which strengthen the best objectives of the home, the church and the school.

"Every Scout seeks to do a good turn daily—every troop seeks to accomplish some community benefit, and occasionally, as last year, Scouts everywhere unite to do a good turn nationally. A year ago, as your honorary president, I started the national Scout effort to collect household furnishings and clothing and other supplies for those in need; and the results were truly amazing.

"The program for this year, embracing as it does over 1,000,000 boys, lasts throughout the year.

May Attend Jamboree.

"But the outstanding event will be America's first National Jamboree, to be held here in the City of Washington from August 21 to August 30. I hope to attend it in person. Since I extended the invitation a year ago, definite plans have been crystallized. With the cooperation of various officials here in Washington a fine camp site has been made available and will be all ready to receive 30,000 boys when the meeting starts. I am glad to know that the selection of these boys is being made on the basis of merit and, furthermore, that in many cases these boys will come to Washington at the expense of the troop and not merely because the boy's economic situation in life is such as to make it possible for his parents to send him.

"Thirty thousand Scouts brought together under such conditions will mean the most thoroughly representative group of American boys ever mobilized for a purpose of this character.

"We hope, too, that other countries will send at least small delegations to meet with us on this occasion. Because scouting is now in active operation in almost every civilized nation of the world, this will give us a splendid opportunity to enlarge our basis of mutual respect, of understanding and of friendship among the people of the world regardless of race or creed."

"Challenges" Today.

Today Boy Scouts will participate in a series of "challenges" which will consist of enactment of scouting problems, in which airplanes from Bolling Field will take part. These will take place at Taft Bridge at 9:30 a. m., at the Polo Grounds at 11 a. m., and Fort Myer at 2 p. m.

On Sunday, special Boy Scout services will be held at Washington Cathedral and the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, at 3:50 and 4 o'clock, rsepectively. Throughout the week other programs are arranged, including "patriotic meetings" Tuesday, Lincoln's Birthday, at various statues, graves and memorials, and in the evening at the District Building at 8 o'clock, when a "preparedness demonstration" will be given.

The Federal Diary

(Trade-Mark Applied For.)

By Morgan Baker.

(This is the third of a series on reorganization of Government departments for economy and efficiency. Clip the series for reference.)

FROM battleships to little fishes! Literally that is the upset condition of the executive branch of the Government, and an example of some of the plans for "improving" the service.

BAKER.

Recently it was proposed to transfer the Bureau of Fisheries from Commerce to Navy Department. Americans honor the Navy and believe that its function in time of peace is to prepare for war in order that peace may be insured to them, and not to engage in the hatching of fish eggs. This was pointed out by Dr. George C. Havenner, cost supervisor of Government Printing Office, whose "Havenner Plan" has been discussed here in two preceding articles.

Five Welfare Arms.

In one department will be found services dealing with education, welfare, public works and a number of miscellaneous activities.

Soil erosion studies are divided between four agencies in two departments.

Two departments have paper-testing laboratories.

Two agencies are testing the purity and sweetness of sugar.

Two services in two departments are teaching the housewife home economics.

Two or more services are concerned with flood control and irrigation and drainage.

Twelve Accident Lists.

Three bureaus in three departments publish vital statistics.

Three departments have trade agents abroad.

Three departments have supervision over the Government's noncontiguous territories.

The Commerce Department enrolls, registers and inspects vessels and the Treasury Department performs the admeasurement of the same.

But now we are getting into specific examples. The foregoing list only scratches the surface of the red tape entwining the U. S. Government.

Under the Havenner plan, which seems to be winning more support than any of the score or more plans advanced in the past 25 years, the Interior Department would be a denuded torso of its present self. Organs from other bodies, however, would restore it to robust health as a service department.

Havenner's Recommendations.

Dr. Havenner recommends the establishment of a Territorial Bureau in the Department of State and transfer to it supervision of the Philippine Islands and the Dominican Customs Receivership from the War Department; that of Guam and American Samoa from the Navy Department; and that of Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands from the Interior Department.

Dr. Havenner points out that under the present organization the Government's two military departments and one civil department are supervising the governments of noncontiguous territories and urges that this supervision should be vested in the Department of State. The Secretary of State is the agent of the President in dealing with the chief executives of the several States of the Union and he should likewise be the agent of the President in dealing with the chief executives of the noncontiguous territories.

(Tomorrow the fourth in the series will deal with additional transfers and mergers.)

Largely attended by students and alumni of George Washington University who are now Federal employes, the fourth annual Engineers' Ball was unanimously declared a success. Credit for the brilliant affair was due chiefly to the work of Terry J. McAdams (P), president, Bureau of Contract Information, and Andrew F. Freeman, social chairman, Federal Trade Commission.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF (F), (P), or (C) follows your name in this column, call in person on the Federal Diary editor. You will receive tickets to Loew's Fox (stage, George Givot, Joe Laurie and other acts; screen, Carole Lombard in "Rumba"), or to Loew's Palace (Edna May Oliver, Lionel Barrymore and 63 other stars in "David Copperfield"), or to Loew's Columbia (Madge Evans, Richard Arlen, Henry B. Walthall and Stepin Fetchit in "Helldorado").

Diary office hours are daily, except Sunday, 12 noon to 1 p. m. and from 4:30 to 6 p. m.; Saturday, 12 noon up to 2:30 p. m.

Dr. Samuel F. Hildebrand, senior ichthyologist, Bureau of Fisheries, has been elected to honorary membership in the Panama Canal History Society in recognition of his contributions to the knowledge of neotropical ichthyology.

Some years ago I lost a friend,
One very dear to me,
But now good news I have received,
He soon restored shall be.

'Twas not without a struggle
That they took him from my sight,
Leaving me plunged in sorrow
And in monetary plight.

I've missed him more than I can tell,
I still am sadly bent,
So "welcome back," stout fellow,
My good old Five Per Cent.
William G. Watt (F), Navy.

Walter Bramhall, Rental Benefit Section, AAA, urges all young Democrats to attend the valentine ball of the Young Democrats Club, of Washington, tonight at the Carlton Hotel. Mr. Bramhall, who is president of the club, announces the ball will be formal and will begin at 10 o'clock.

On Lecture Tour.

Dr. Harry C. Oberholser, prominent local ornithologist and senior biologist of the Bureau of Biological Survey, is on a trip through the Mississippi Valley States from Michigan to Texas and Louisiana, lecturing on waterfowl. He is explaining the conservation plans of the Biological Survey. His itinerary for February includes Chicago and Champaign, Ill.; Indianapolis, Ind.; LaCrosse, Wis.; Minneapolis, Minn.; Fargo, N. Dak.; Des Moines, Iowa; St. Louis and Columbia, Mo.

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

A new station makes its bow tonight, when Station WHIO, Dayton, Ohio, is dedicated at 6:05, WRC. M. H. Aylesworth, N. B. C. president, will speak, and Will Rogers add his comments. Amos 'n' Andy, the Pickens Sisters, Carol Deis, soprano; John Alda, tenor, will contribute. Milton Cross, Graham McNamee and John B. Kennedy alternate as master of ceremonies.

At 7 the formal dedication will be broadcast. Jesse Crawford, organist; Margery Squires, vocalist; the WHIO 35-piece orchestra and a colored mixed octet will be heard in several numbers. Richard C. Patterson, N. B. C. vice president, will extend greetings to James M. Cox, former Governor of Ohio and owner of the station.

If you're an oddity sleuth, you ought to listen to the "Fascinating Facts program, WJSV, 5:45 today. Stories about the origin of coffee, bath towels, meaning of the word "Candidate," "Beau Brummel" and other known or lesser known things are typical of this program's offerings. Music by Art Dickson, singer; Charlie Morgan, pianist.

The Cincinnati Conservatory program features the Fine Arts Choristers, Stephen Sopkins, violinist, and a string orchestra. Outstanding numbers are Bach's E major concerto, Brahms Gypsy Songs, two airs by Palstrina, and a group of Russian songs.

American Broadcasting Co. has called the cops—to be radio critics. Tonight WOL presents the first of a series of crime dramatizations at 8:30 o'clock. The case of Eva Coo, convicted for murder and now facing Sing Sing's electric chair, is tonight's program.

Three hundred police officials in as many of the country's cities are expected to listen and judge the effectiveness of the work. The purpose of the broadcasts is to strip the underworld of its ill-gotten glamour.

Jesse Jones, administrator of the RFC, will speak on "Progress and Prospect," on WJSV, 1:30 p. m.

"Don Giovanni" is sung by Rosa Ponselle, Ezio Pinza, Tito Schipa, and Maria Mueller. On both NBC stations at 1:55 p. m. today. Between the acts Helen Jepson and Myrtle Leonard, two young "Met" singers, will be interviewed by Geraldine Farrar, commentator.

Hurdling the ocean, S. P. B. Mais, London editor, and Dr. Cabel Greet, American Speech editor, will debate the question, "Do Americans and Englishmen speak the same language?" On WMAL, at 7:30 p. m. Each linguistic representative will defend his language.

More music from the Portland Junior Symphony, made up of players between 8 and 14. Their program: Overture to Schubert's "Rosamund;" Handel's "Water Music," and "Dance of the Buffoons," from Rimsky-Korsakov's "The Snow Maiden."

The Pro Arte Quartet presents Beethoven's C major and E flat major quartets as the fifth concert of the Beethoven series. WJSV, 4:15 p. m.

Other high spots: Richard Bonelli on WJSV, 9 p. m. . . . Roxy presents "Jerome Kern Cavalcade," with outstanding compositions of that composer. WJSV, 8 p. m. . . . "People's Lobby," WRC, 12:45 p. m., discusses current questions . . . "Our American Schools" will feature Agnes Winn, National Education Association, and Senator Capper. Their talks: "Do You Know Your Child's Teacher?" and "Equal Opportunity for Every Child." WRC, 5:30 p. m.

N. B. C. Farm Forum presents Wheeler McMillen on "Do Schools Educate?" WMAL, 1:30 p. m. . . . The Boy Scout program is on WMAL, 5:15 p. m. . . . An inspirational and vocational program, "The Lighted Window," goes on WJSV, 7:30 p. m. Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor of the Church of the Reformation, will be heard on this series.

Lilla Swift and Mary Taylor, two New York debs, are guests of Sigmund Romberg's program, WJSV, 8 p. m.

The vocal phenomenon, Eugene Keith Fox, who at the age of 5 has the voice of man, will be heard on Joe Brown's kiddie program tomorrow, WOL. If you haven't heard this youngster, give him a dial twist.

Several States, notably Kentucky, have their staffs of colonels—but Nebraska, one of the Union's most inland States, has a staff of admirals, 20,000 of them. Noted among the admirals of the Great Navy of the State of Nebraska are President Roosevelt, Gen. Smedley Butler, former commandant of the U. S. Marines, and many others in political life.

For its flagship the Navy, fittingly, has a prairie schooner—the old covered wagon—in which many of Nebraska's first residents arrived. The Navy's commissions give each admiral complete jurisdiction over all, "officers, seamen, tadpoles, and goldfish" under his command. The commissions bear the seal of the State and the seal of the State Navy, as well as the drawing of the flagship reproduced above.

The history of the Navy goes back to 1931 when Theodore Metcalfe was a Republican lieutenant governor under a Democratic governor. In this capacity his duties were rather limited—but one day Gov. Bryan left the State, and Metcalfe became acting chief executive. As such he created the Navy and its admiralty by executive order, appointing himself chief admiral.
